You Can Use Kerosene Gas or Gasoline

The Acme Peanut Roaster is equipped to use either of the three and give the same results—i. e., perfectly roasted peanuts in the smallest amount of time, with the least expense and no labor.

The Acme Peanut Roaster is the cheapest and yet the most effective automatic roaster on the market. By its use you can earn at least from one to three dollars per day more than you now are making, and have an added attraction in your store. Full particulars and price on application.

What's in a Name?

We'll tell you. We have picked out the name Apelpi for our Evaprated Apples, so that every time it is thought of particular people will think of the finest fruit of this kind ever put on the market.

We have adopted the sentence, "The bottom as good as the top," because that is unusual with evaporated apples, and we pride ourselves on the fact that it applies to ours. Put them in, and your troubles in this direction are over.

It Is Spelled R=A=M=L=Y

If you want to sell a really delightful smoke, get the real Ramly, don't take something gotten up to look like the Ramly, because there the similarity ends.

No cigarette ever made has jumped into such immediate popularity. It has become famous on its quality alone.

If you put Ramly Cigarettes in stock you will be assured of the permanent patronage of every man to whom you sell a package.

Don't get confused on the name—it is spelled R–A–M–L–Y.

How to Make Other Cocoas as Good as Ours

Take the average cocoa on the market and carry it through another process or two, and you may have an article about as good as Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa.

The trouble is that other manufacturers will not use that "other process or two," because of its cost. They prefer to send out their product half made, as it were—containing indigestible and ill-tasting ingredients which should have been eliminated—so that they can save a little on the cost of making.

Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa has everything taken out that should be taken out, and for that reason, among others, it has the smoothest, finest flavor of any cocoa made.

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

HORSES ARE A NUISANCE

Why are they? Because you never know when they'll be sick, and they're expensive to keep.

"Same thing applies to automobiles" you say? Not at all. It did once; but it doesn't now. The Lindsley Commercial Delivery Car is so simply constructed that it almost never gets out of order, and when it does, its mending is a good deal simpler and cheaper than a big veterinary bill.

Will carry 1,500 pounds thirty miles on a gallon of fuel. Horses can't begin to deliver so cheaply. Think it over.

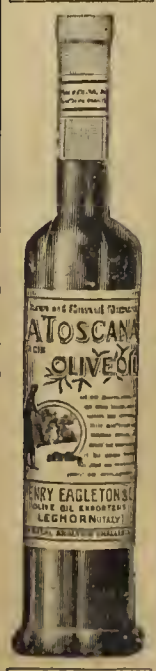
"I Wish I Had Some Real Gelatine"



Every day some woman in your town bemoans the disappearance of old-style gelatine--the clean, delicious, melting kind, flavored with lemon, that we learned to like on our mother's table.

Old-style gelatine has not disappeared, though at times it has seemed to be snowed under by the flavorless imitations that hide their worthlessness behind bright colors.

Chalmers' Gelatine is old-fashioned gelatine—nothing in it but purest calves' stock and spring water. Your customers want it.

"I'ts Too Fine"

Some people said to us when we first put La Toscana Virgin Olive Oil on the market: "You can't sell it—it's too fine." But we did sell it, and we're selling more every year.

This is probably the fanciest brand of Italian Oil that comes to this country. There is, however, no prohibitive price on it. If you want an Olive Oil you can boast of and take pride in, sell La Toscana. Simply the pure, clear, rich first pressing of the finest oil olives in the world!

Do You Sell "Just Print Butter?"

Why is it that so many of you grocers just sell print butter without having a butter leader?

Do you forget that the store that just sells nameless bulk goods never has as much hold on people as the store that keeps itself identified by brands of some individuality?

If you will sell Gurnse butter you will see very clearly the force of this. Gurnse print butter represents a certain standard of quality that never varies; it represents a quality that you are never sure of getting in ordinary print butter.

Don't you see the benefit of identifying your store with such goods?

The Digestible Part of Corn

In our Winorr Brand of Canned Corn we do away with the indigestible hulls, packing only the kernels of the corn, which we extract by a special device, leaving the hulls on the cob.

There is no other brand like the Winorr brand, and it will readily sell on that account. It is most delicious and entirely digestible, and when once shown will always be in demand.

We also pack a full line of finest quality Berries and Vegetables, moist and condensed Mince Meat, Catsup and Salad Dressing.

We are the largest canners of Sauer Kraut in the United States.

L & S Pickles

L. & S. Pickles are only one of many brands of sweet pickles on the market—why should you push them instead of the others?

A natural question, and here's the answer:

L. & S. Pickles are preserved with granulated sugar. Many, many brands—it wouldn't be fair to specify—are sweetened with saccharine, a harmful chemical substance made from coal tar! Besides the harmfulness, saccharine only sweetens on the outside anyway; sugar goes clear to the heart of the pickle and preserves it through and through.

That's why you should choose L. & S. Pickles.

They Must Keep Expert

It is a provable fact that a majority of cooking experts use Nicelle Olive Oil in all their demonstrations.

Why? Because they must use the very best oil obtainable in order to insure results. Otherwise they would soon cease to be known as experts.

Nicelle Olive Oil is bottled in France, where produced. It is the first pressing of the finest oil olive grown. You will be proud to sell it.

"As Good As I Bought Last Time"

You ought to sell Swift's PREMIUM Hams for your own protection. Can you satisfy your trade unless your hams are uniform? And can they be uniform unless bought from a packer who can keep his raw material uniform?

Few packers have our facilities for keeping hams up to a given standard year after year. Swift's PREMIUM Hams scarcely vary a hair's breadth from one year's end to another. That does us a whole lot of good, as it will do you.

The woman who can always depend on getting good ham—"as good as I bought last time"—is going to buy lots of ham.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Walker Patent Pivoted Bin Co.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"As Good as the 'J. M.'"

No delivery wagon built is as good as the "J. M.," though many are said to be. The makers of other wagons do the best they can, but they haven't our facilities.

The "J. M." wagon is the handsomest, longest-lived delivery wagon on the market. No other wagon manufacturer we ever knew rejected everything but second-growth hickory for wheels, as we do.

Does the Department Store Take Some of Your Trade?

Do you know why you lose trade to the Department Stores? It's because when these stores are closed at night the windows are lighted and the light shows bargains in groceries. These offerings attract passers and the next day they come in and buy.

You can do the same thing—make your store advertise you while it is closed—light it well, show something in your windows that will attract attention and many of those who see it will come in the next day. One new customer will pay the cost for a week. Write us and we'll show you how to do it.

Do You Spend Your Principal When You Could Live on the Interest?

The grocer who does unnecessary work during the summer is as foolish as the man who spends his principal when he could live on the interest?

Franklin Carton Sugar offers you a way of getting rid of at least some hard work during the coming summer—the work of digging up and wrapping sugar. "You've never thought that very hard work," you say? Well, but if you can get rid of even that much without sacrificing anything, hadn't you better do it?

"Sacrificing anything!" Why, it's a gain all along the line. Not only do you save the work; but the loss that comes from overweight when you sell sugar in bulk.

They Thought We Did Miracles

If we could make every credit grocer understand how clean and wonderfully strong our collecting plan is, we could probably get three-fourths of all the credit grocers in the the country on our books—because every credit grocer has debts that he can't collect.

Our plan has had results that to some merchants have seemed almost miraculous, since we have literally squeezed blood from a stone—yet the only thing we do is to hunt for the weak spot in the dead-beat's armor—it's there somewhere—and plant our blow there.

Baked Beans Ought To Be Baked

Most "baked" bean manufacturers are much exercised over the status of their goods under the National food law. Why? Because their beans aren't baked at all—they are merely boiled or steamed. It's a question whether they can be sold as baked beans.

Actual baking makes a big difference not only in the flavor but in everything else. Boiling or steaming swells the bean and makes it mushy. Baking reduces the size and make it not mushy but mealy. Anybody can see and taste the difference instantly.

The tomato sauce used on L. & S. Baked Beans is genuine tomato sauce made from the ripe tomatoes; not the catsup that is often used.

BACON
AS A BREAKFAST FOOD

There are dozens of breakfast foods on the market but none of them can take the place of Bacon; nothing is so thoroughly satisfying and nothing adds so much zest to one's life as a breakfast, the foundation of which is

Burk's "Butternut Bacon"

This Bacon is selected from corn-fed hogs, specially cured with granulated sugar, mild and of exquisite flavor and taste.

It is put up in narrow strips, strung with white cord, cut absolutely square, making any waste impossible; wrapped in highly glazed and parchment paper and embellished on two sides with an attractive blue and white label. A red seal is attached to the cord, stating the specific merits of this bacon, which is also known to the trade as the "Five B" Bacon, because of its name

Burk's Butternut Boneless Breakfast Bacon

This Bacon was first introduced at the National Export Exposition, held in Philadelphia in 1899. It has had a steadily increasing sale each year, and today is the best known and most used Bacon in Philadelphia.

Burk's Lard

Is guaranteed to be absolutely pure and to contain nothing but what results from the rendering of good, wholesome hog fat and to contain all its original properties, none of which has been extracted.

Many brands of Lard are "pure," but the rich oils have been extracted so that the manufacturers can make a larger profit.

Such Lard is not to be compared with Burk's, because it lacks richness, and while cheaper in price is in reality dearer because a larger quantity must be used to produce the result.

This Tells the Tale

A product which has been on the market fifty-eight years is a product which has stood the hardest of all tests—the test of time. "Knight's Cooking Extracts" is a phrase familiar to man, woman and child, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Lakes to the Gulf. It is easy to tell why; no housewife ever had a bottle go back on her and no housewife ever will. Good extracts must be on your shelves. Grocers, if you sell Knight's Extracts we need say nothing more to you; if you don't, we want one order from you—we are sure of more. You are certain of their absolute purity and a good profit.

How Co-operative Delivery Works in One Town

In Adrian, Mich., It Reduced the Cost of Deliveries to Two Cents for Meats and Three Cents for Groceries. Works Better in Every Way Than Individual Delivery.

The co-operative method of delivering goods has been in use in Adrian, Mich., for some time. It has proved exceedingly popular to the merchants of the town and has been successful beyond all expectations. Since adopting the system of delivery the dealers have educated the people to order goods but once or twice each day instead of every half hour as heretofore. It seemed a hardship at first, but through concentrated effort the merchants have won out and now all is smooth sailing.

The merchants formed a stock company and members buy shares at $100 each. They built a barn upon leased ground. This building is about 50 x 100 feet and is constructed of brick throughout, with cement floors suitable for horses and wagons. It is arranged so as to make it particularly adaptable to the purpose for which it was intended.

When the system was first put into use the merchants had a hard time to adjust matters properly so far as deliveries, routes, etc., were concerned, but by careful study and a little patience this was finally adjusted to meet all requirements. They have twelve wagons, and all are kept busy during certain times of the year, while at other times they frequently cut off a few wagons, increasing each one of the routes sufficiently to take care of the territory from which the two or three wagons were taken. They have found the single horse wagon the most practical. Four trips over each route are made daily, the first wagons leaving the various stores at 7.15 A. M. All wagons then drive back to the barn, where they are unloaded and routed. Wagons return from their delivery routes so that they may again leave their various stores at 9.45 A. M. Two deliveries are made in the afternoon. Each customer is given a card explaining the delivery system and the time orders must reach the store in order that they be delivered upon a certain trip. Through a coupon system every merchant keeps track of the various jars, oil cans, etc., that leave his store, and these same coupons are used to check up the number of deliveries made from any one particular store. No order is delivered upon which the purchase amount does not allow sufficient profits to make the delivery.

Deliveries to members have been costing 2 cents each for meats and 3 cents for groceries, while transient dealers, or those holding no stock in the company, must pay the contract price of 2½ cents for meats and 3½ cents for groceries. Department stores pay 5 cents for each delivery.

Merchants wishing to send orders C. O. D. can do so, as each driver is given a certain amount of change and authorized to make collections.

Costs $25 to Sell These.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Issues List of Patent Medicines Sufficiently Alcoholic to Impose Government Tax on Sellers. Directly Affects General Storekeepers Selling Patent Medicines.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."
Washington, D. C.,
Feb. 21, 1908.

During the past few days Internal Revenue Commissioner John G. Capers has sent to all deputy commissioners a list of patent medicines which had been found to contain so much alcohol as to make the seller liable to the Government license of $25.

There are just fifty-four of these preparations that come under the ban of the Internal Revenue Department, that is, that have been found from analysis to contain sufficient alcohol to require the payment of the special tax required by the Government, and in this official notification the deputy collector is directed to notify all retail dealers in his district who have not already paid the special tax as a retail dealer.

The list is as follows. All general storekeepers selling patent medicines should take notice:—

Angostura Aromatic Tincture Bitters, Aroma Stomach Bitters, Atwood's La Grippe Specific, Augauer Bitters, Augauer Kidney-Aid, Belvederep Stomach Bitters, Bonekam Stomach Bitters, Boonekamp Bitters, De Witt's Stomach Bitters, Dick's Nutritive Elixir, Dr. Dade's Blackberry Cordial, Dr. Bouvier's Buchu Gin, Dr. Fowler's Meat and Malt, Dr. Gray's Tonic Bitters, Dr. Hortenbach Stomach Bitters, Dr. Worme's Gesundheit Bitters, Dr. Rattinger's Bitters, Duffy's Malt Whiskey, Ducro's Alimentary Elixir, Gilbert's Rejuvenating Iron and Herb Juice, Ginger Tonic, Ginseng Cordial, Green's Chill Tonic, Harrison's Quinine Tonic, Jerome's Dandelion Stomach Bitters, Jones' Stomach Bitters, Juni-Kola, Brown's Aromatic Cordial Bitters, Brown's Vi Nerva Tonic, Botanic Bitters, Cinchona Bitters, Clifford's Cherry Cure, Cooper's Nerve Tonic, Cuban Gingeric, Dandelion Bitters, K. Dr. Wiley Overruled in Glucose Controversy

Secretaries of Treasury, Agriculture and Commerce and Labor Decide That Glucose May be Called Corn Syrup. Decision a Flat Repudiation for Dr. Wiley's Theories.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, chairman of the Federal Food and Drug Board, is no longer the dominant factor in the enforcement of the Federal food law. Judging from the decision just handed down in the glucose case, it is still possible for business men to get a square deal under the food act. The decision referred to is that glucose can be sold labeled corn syrup, and it overturns Dr. Wiley flatly.

This controversy between the Corn Products Co., chief manufacturer of glucose, and the Federal Food and Drug Board, has been several times referred to in this journal. The Corn Products Co. wished to call their product "corn syrup," contending that it was in every sense a syrup made from corn, and that the term glucose would always mean an impure adulteration in many person's minds. This they contended they had a right to escape if they could.

Dr. Wiley refused to permit the concern to call their product corn syrup, and the Corn Products Co. accordingly carried the controversy first to the three secretaries in charge of the food law, the secretaries of the Treasury, Agriculture and Commerce and Labor, and finally to the President himself. After much consideration and filing of briefs the secretaries decided that Dr. Wiley was wrong and straightway handed down the following decision:—

We have each given careful consideration to the labeling, under the pure food law, of the thick viscous syrup, obtained by the incomplete hydrolysis of the starch of corn and composed essentially of dextrose, maltose and dextrine.

In our opinion it is lawful to label this syrup as "corn syrup," and if to the corn syrup there is added a small percentage of refiner's syrup, a product of the cane, the mixture, in our judgment, is not misbranded if labeled "corn syrup with cane flavor."

There is some difference of opinion as to whether this decision applies only to glucose table syrup, or whether it also includes the manufactured glucose that is used chiefly for manufacturing purposes. The Corn Products Co. take the position that it applies to all their products and will at once change the name from glucose to "corn syrup."

When a Grocer Ought to be a Substitutor

The Other Side of the Substitution of Goods. Where a Grocer Must Substitute or Betray His Customer. Must Protect His Customer from Paying Exorbitantly for Mere Name.

There are two sides to this substitution question, and the honest "substitutor" (for I claim there are such) is entitled to state his case and to a respectful hearing. While I am a firm believer in advertising and in honest dealings, believing also that no article lacking merit can be brought to lasting success by sheer force of advertising, I contend that continuous, liberal advertising is not always proof of merit in the product, and that it is quite possible for an article of the same general character which is not advertised generally to be as good or better and as low or lower in price. In which, of course, I am treating of more or less rare exceptions and not of general averages.

If I were a retail dealer in groceries, for instance (which I have been), my policy would be to sell my customers that which I believed to be best for them, quality and price considered. Not from an excess of honesty, but purely for selfish reasons. I would say to them frankly over the counter and in the newspaper:—

"I am a substitutor in every case where I know that your interests will be better served by substituting. Not an insistent substitutor, but one who will say when I believe it to be true: 'Here is an article which is just as good and a little cheaper,' or 'a little better at the same price.'

"From pure, unadulterated selfishness I must be honest with you; I must live with you and, to some extent, by you. I need all of your trade in my line, while the distant manufacturer could get along comfortably if he never sold a cent's worth in this town, and when I know, as I sometimes do, that you are paying a few cents extra for somebody's name, and for that alone I am going to tell you so; that is a part of the service which you have a right to expect of me, whose business it is to know what I am buying and selling.

"I shall always carry an adequate stock of all advertised brands that are in local demand and sell them to you as cheaply as they can be bought in this market. You can get what you ask for, and without trouble. But, and mark this well, please, I shall not help any manufacturer to an unreasonable profit at your expense without a friendly warning. Nor shall I, on the other hand, so far forget my own business interests as to urge upon, or even offer you, an inferior article in order to make a few cents more profit.

"I am not the agent of manufacturers, but your purchasing agent, and I serve myself best when I bring to you the best that I can secure at the price you want to pay, absolutely regardless of labels or advertising, though, as you know, I am a believer in advertising and not a dealer in job lots or goods of doubtful character.

"This, then, is my business creed, and I am going to live up to it, not only because it will satisfy my conscience and meet your conception of square dealing, but because I know it will pay both you and me."

I believe that this line of argument and action will inspire confidence; that it will work injustice to advertised trade-marked articles only when it is deserved; that it will give the intelligent dealer new responsibilities and place him in the right attitude toward his customers—that of an advisor, an expert, if you please, whose experience entitles him to be something more than a machine to hand over the counter, automatically, any fake that has money enough behind it to buy much space and convincing copy.

The number of general storekeepers is given in the census as 33,031, making an approximate total of 189,558 dealers in groceries. The number of wholesale grocers is estimated at 2,591,- which would leave as the number of retailers of groceries 186,967, according to the 1900 census.

Chas. E. West, Gotcha, Okla., writes under date of November 15, 1907: "I purchased your Absorbine from the druggist and applied it according to directions for bog spavin and had grand success. One bottle was enough to do the work. I can give high praise for your Absorbine and shall recommend it for bog spavin above all other medicines that I tried, and I tried a good many different kinds." If you have a lame or blemished horse in your stable get a bottle of Absorbine to-day and you will be surprised at the satisfactory results you will get. Absorbine removes bunches, kills pain and cures lameness without blistering or removing the hair; horse can be used. Mild and positive in its action and cures to stay cured. Try a bottle to-day and you will find it a necessity in your stable hereafter. At all dealers or express prepaid upon receipt of $2.00. W. F. Young, P. D. F., 9 Monmouth Street, Springfield, Mass.

Cash Change Worked Well

Los Angeles (Cal.) Grocer, Whose Letter Retiring from Credit Business Was Recently Published as a Model, Tells "Grocery World" How the Plan Succeeded.

[A few weeks ago the "Grocery World" published a letter which A. Russell, a retail grocer of Los Angeles, Cal., had issued to his trade, advising them of his intention to cut off all credits and thereafter sell only for cash. The letter was published as a model and simultaneously with its publication the "Grocery World" wrote to Mr. Russell, requesting a report as to how the plan succeeded. His reply follows:]

I was pleased to think that my letter had even reached as far as Philadelphia, and hope that it may be of some benefit to the credit grocers of that city.

I will say that I am very well satisfied with the results in the short time since adopting the new style of business. Of course, I lost some good monthly customers, but on the other hand I gained a great many new ones who were spending their money at the cash stores downtown.

I find that I have to make some very close prices and even sell a few goods at cost in order to keep them coming my way.

In looking over the names in my ledger I find that I am still selling about three-fourths of my old credit customers. They seem to be very well pleased with the new plan.

I am doing as much or more business than before, with the help of three men instead of four as formerly.

It has always been said that a cash business could not exist in the suburbs, and as my store is located in the outskirts I must admit that it took some nerve to make the change from a long-established credit business.

Be so good as to send me a copy of the "Grocery World" of February 10th, and also what is the subscription price?

A. Russell.

Says the Grocers' Association Reduced Food Prices.

Warm Newspaper Argument on in Elmira, N. Y., Over Effect the Association Has Had on Prices. Leading Members, in Published Letters, Contend Prices are Literally Less Because of the Association.

A correspondent writes the "Grocery World" that there is a warm argument on in Elmira, N. Y., over whether the local retail grocers' association had artificially advanced the price of groceries or not. Certain local writers expressed the opinion in the Elmira papers that such was the case, while members of the organization vigorously denied it.

One of the best defenses of the association was contributed to the Elmira "Star Gazette" by George H. Rogers, a well-known local grocer. In it he claimed that the association had actually cheapened the cost of food products. The substance of Mr. Rogers' letter is as follows:—

CASH is the lever which controls LOW prices on reliable goods.

CASH Try what it will do for YOU through buying from US.

CASH is the potent factor required to take advantage of our LOW prices.

WRITE FOR "THE CASH GROCER," CONTAINING OUR QUOTATIONS ON A FULL LINE OF GROCERIES

BARBER & PERKINS, Wholesale Cash Grocers 29, 31, 33 N. Water Street 28 N. Delaware Avenue Phila., Pa.

There is no attempt by the Groeers' Association of this eity to interfere with any member selling his goods as low as he wishes. I know positively that no attempts are made to coerce a unison of prices.

At their meetings, the retail priees are seldom mentioned, and then ineidentally by statement that the prices of certain goods are advaneing or deelining, and every member seems very free and outspoken in stating the price at which he is retailing goods.

One member stated that he always sells a certain article, on which the priee fluetuates frequently, at a stationary price, no matter how much the cost varies. That seems to me to be a silly way. But as I reeognize that person to be my superior in business judgment, and otherwise, maybe his way is the better.

But I will forfeit my time to prove to any person who may apply, that the groeers are selling goods cheaper to their eustomers than they would if the grocers were not associated.

Beeause the priee of groceries has advanced in unison with many other eommodities, people who do not take the time to consider lay the eause of the advance to the Groeers' Association. I have evidenee that would be conelusive to judge or jury, that in 1889 ten pounds of sugar retailed for $1.00. To-day a dollar will buy nearly twice as much. Flour retailed at the rate of $8.00 per barrel. To-day many of the best brands are selling for over $1.00 less. A few years ago lard retailed for eighteen cents. Good brands of soap retailed for five cents straight. Now some of the same brands are sold by the quarter's worth for about three cents.

The Grocers' Assoeiation benefits in many ways. It benefits the customer as well as the groeer. Customers, many times, obtain goods mueh desired, wholly beeause we groeers feel perfeetly free to ask our eompetitor to let us have the goods our eustomer wants.

At our meetings, it is very pleasing to me, to see the manifestation of the spirit of friendliness that exists between those engaged in business eompetition. One grocer stated that "he was in need of a certain kind of goods." His competitor, obliging and generous, promptly said:—

"When my wagon goes down your way in the morning I'l send down a ease to you. You may return it when you have it in stoek." That remark alone, paid me for attending the meeting.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXX.—Doing It Now.

Do it to-day.

We are most of us well aware of the fact that putting any action off until to-morrow is a very bad habit and likely to lead to a continuation of postponements until its consummation is never accomplished.

Most of us are continually advising our friends and employees to never contract such a habit, but to do things to-day.

Most of us also have this habit ourselves, in a more or less aggravated form, and probably never realize it unless some of the friends we are advising take occasion to call our attention to the fact.

Now is the time to show these people something. Make a change. Turn over a new leaf. Do things to-day. And thus set an example to friends and employees which will do much more good than the free advice we have given them in the past. After all, it is the example which teaches most readily.

Every time we stick to a disagreeable job, and finish it, instead of putting it off until to-morrow, we will feel a degree of satisfaction which cannot be secured in any other manner, and this alone will pay for the extra effort and thus leave the accomplished fact as clear profit. Shall we give it a trial the very next time we start to put something off until to-morrow?

F. A. P.

The Dog May Bite

Honestly, you will be much more likely to succeed by pushing Hotel Astor Coffee than by pushing a blend of your own.

We have been in coffee blending for many years. Obviously, we must know more about it than you do. And then Hotel Astor Coffee has been tried on the dog—the hardest dog to please in the United States—the patrons of the most exclusive hotels of New York City. The dog pronounced it good at once, and with the stamp of weighty approval upon it we offer it to you.

When you blend your own coffee the dog you try it on is your own customers—that's risky; the dog may bite.

A perfect blend of superfine coffee. For the very finest trade.

As to Scrapple.

The "National Tribune," of Washington, D. C., whose crafty cupidity in attempting to induce some Pennsylvanian to send its editor a pound of Pennsylvania scrapple for nothing, the "Grocery World" had recent occasion to expose and rebuke, is not dismayed. In its last issue it reiterates its complete ignorance of this delectable Pennsylvania dish. Listen to the following confession of colossal ignorance:—

> Humiliating as it may seem, we have to plead guilty to about every count in the "Grocery World's" indictment. The editor of "The National Tribune" has, in the course of a somewhat eventful life, been made acquainted with about everything that was good to eat in this country and gobs and heaps of what wasn't.
> Somehow, in all these varied experiences he never came across Pennsylvania scrapple. The Yankee boys who came down to us with the Ninth Corps taught us how to bake pork and beans in the most artistic way; the Kentucky and Tennessee boys taught us what good things could be made with cornmeal, and so on, with a man from each State making some addition and improvement to our culinary knowledge.
> Somehow, though, the splendid Pennsylvania boys never said a word about scrapple; they never had any of it around in camp, and certainly never gave any of us a sample of the toothsome food. This seems strange, and throws strong doubt upon the universality of the Pennsylvania love for scrapple, because the boys from that State were generous fellows, and if they had anything particularly good their first impulse would be to share with those who were ignorant of the delicacy. Therefore, we mildly but firmly protest to the "Grocery World" that the scrapple habit could not have been general during the war times, or we should have heard something of it from the Pennsylvania boys.

Possibly it may not have been in war times—the writer wasn't born then and doesn't know. But the war times are over, dearly beloved brother. Can't you possibly bring yourself forward to the present? Why this is a veritable age of scrapple!

Dr. Wiley's First Official Defeat.

Of course Dr. Wiley lost his contention that glucose had no right to be called corn syrup, and that he would lose it was a foregone conclusion. The facts were all against him. The product was a syrup, it was made from corn, and none of Dr. Wiley's ingenious hair-splitting theories could alter those facts. The three secretaries who decided the question adversely to Dr. Wiley looked through the maze of chemical foolishness which the Doctor threw about the case, straight to the kernel of the controversy. And they saw only one conclusion there, and that they instantly adopted.

This is the first public official reversal Dr. Wiley has had, though, as previously stated, he has been compelled to retire from arbitrary positions several times. This decision pulls at least some of his teeth, for it proves very clearly that he is not all-powerful.

The Point of Brand Names.

Reverting again to the question of brand names, he who devises a name for his goods which will stick in the memory has truly invented that which, other things being equal, will wear a path to his door.

Looking over a number of new canned goods labels recently, the writer came upon one less beautiful than the rest and condemned it on that ground. The "Black Cat Brand" was its name, and over the design gambolled sable felines in all degrees of riotous abandonment.

A moment's subsequent thought convinced the writer that he was wrong when he condemned the "Black Cat" label because of its lack of beauty. When one thinks of it, what a name to stick in the memory, both of adults and of children! "Black Cat"—why it could hardly be forgotten!

One is apt to condemn these apparently crude and grotesque brand names on general principles, and yet they are founded on a solid foundation of logic. A certain well-known Baltimore packer uses the brand "Dog's Head." At first sight this almost invariably arouses adverse criticism—even ridicule. "In Heaven's name, what has a dog's head got to do with canned goods?" But on second thought the unforgetableness of the thing stands out as strongly as the rock of Gibraltar. Five years after such pretty but vapid names as "Meadowbrook," "Sunny Farm" and "Valley Green" are forgotten, the "grotesque" brand name will still be bright in the buyer's recollection.

Gambling With Nature.

The "Grocery World" has before suggested the precarious and uncertain position of any man whose business is dependent on the elements. Every day new illustrations come forward to demonstrate this. Take for instance the case of Hickmott & Co., pioneers and for many years leaders in the packing of California asparagus. The Hickmott business stands at the present utterly ruined by a succession of floods which could not be foreseen and prevented. The business may have a future resurrection, but it will only be after the entire topography of the region has been changed.

Most of the Hickmott asparagus was grown on Bouldin Island, which lay immediately behind the water shed at the junction of the Sacramento and the San Joaquin Rivers. The play of waters here had gradually formed Bouldin Island and other islands, and in the rich soil of these the finest asparagus was grown.

Three years ago Hickmott & Co. packed a few cases of asparagus, but since that they have packed none. Freshet and flood have poured down upon his island year after year, leveling the levees and inundating the land. It takes time to reclaim land which remains long submerged, and Hickmott & Co's efforts to reclaim it have been aborted by other freshets that undid all their work.

The orange growers of Florida, the asparagus growers of California, the peach growers of Delaware, the tomato growers of several sections, and every other man who subsists on the crops of the soil—all are gambling with nature. With them anything may happen, and happen without warning. They may have a feast or they may have a famine, and they can never tell which very far ahead.

The Jobbers' "Special Push."

The conflict at present proceeding over the action of two manufacturers in cutting off the direct-buying list certain large Philadelphia buying exchanges inspires the "Grocery World" to prophecy.

Each of the manufacturers in question, when asked how he can avoid a loss of business. since the exchanges cut off will no longer handle his goods, answers in the same way. "The jobbers are so much gratified," they reply, "over our action in protecting their interests that they have promised to make a special push on our goods. We will make up all we lost and more."

To this hopeful forecast the "Grocery World" has this to say: For the time being the jobbers will doubtless keep their word. Flushed with gratitude and satisfaction, they will, as they say, push the goods of the manufacturers who have chosen them as against the retailer; goods, let it be said, which did not before. when they stood on their merits, sufficiently attract the jobber to do more than simply fill orders. But gratitude is an ephemeral impulse. It passes, and with it pass incentives born of it alone. The jobbers will undoubtedly push shredded wheat biscuit and toasted corn flakes more than they ever did before; that is, some jobbers will. But that they will be giving it the same push at the end of even six months is just as impossible as anything can be.

Neither of the products named were ever considered worthy of a special push by jobbers before; and from the standpoint of profit and desirability they have not changed. So that the "Grocery World's" prediction is this—that the jobbers' love will cool, their "special push" will wane, and when that time comes the manufacturers will either have to come back to the retailers again or will find themselves let in by the jobbers for a permanent loss in business.

Quaker Oats Co.'s Big Earnings.

President H. P. Crowell, of the Quaker Oats Co., in his report covering the results from operations for the twelve months ended December 31, 1907, made public during the week, says: "The year 1907 was filled with difficulties, hard problems and obstacles that seemed almost impossible to surmount, from the milling as well as the operating point of view, and yet we can report the volume of business not only as to total sales, but also as to advertised brands, as being larger than that of any previous year, while the balance sheet shows that there has been earned a profit of $1,365,165.61. This is $81,776.47 more than was secured in 1906, when the earnings made, and the volume of business done, were the largest in the history of the company up to that time."

Solving of a Food Show Problem. Cheese Underweighing Discoveries at New York Port. National Jobbers Still Working on Canned Goods Contract. Chain Store Concern in Trouble. Small Items of Trade News.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, February 21, 1908.

Finding that some food manufacturers were not enthusiastic about taking space and making exhibits at the Pure Food Exposition to be held from March 26th to April 16th, L. J. Callanan, who acts as manager of the enterprise, took the bull by the horns. He found what the trouble was and applied the remedy with vigor. What he did may be of interest to all who have anything to do with food shows here or elsewhere.

The trouble was that the food manufacturers did not see returns for the money and energy expended. They complained that after the show, the retail grocers do not acknowledge any obligations toward the exhibitors and ignore his salesmen, so that the time and money are absolutely lost.

Mr. Callanan at once prepared a letter to the grocers of the city and also sent copies of it to all prospective exhibitors. Besides this, he attended the meetings of the several grocers' societies in the last week and spoke on the subject, telling the members what, in his opinion, they should do in order to show some appreciation of the efforts of manufacturers who make exhibits at these shows. As a result, several manufacturers who were the most lukewarm, have come forward and have reserved the most desirable booths to be had. Mr. Callanan, who is putting into the management of the food show the kind of generalship that he exercises in his grocery business, says that while there never was any doubt of the show being a big one, he now knows that it will be even greater than the original expectations.

It is not claimed by Mr. Callanan that the members of an association conducting a food show should patronize an exhibitor to their own loss. This is the way he puts it:

"Any benefits conferred on the retail grocers of New York should be recognized by every grocer in the State, as every movement which is calculated to elevate the trade enures to their benefit. I do not mean to be taken as saying that any grocer should sacrifice his personal interest or put himself to inconvenience in the transaction of his business in any way in the purchase of the goods that he sells, But I do say that all things being equal, the grocers should give the preference to the manufacturers and distributers of food products who show their friendship and good-will to the grocers by aiding them to make the exposition, organized for their benefit, a success.

"This is simply business; the exhibitor goes into the exposition at the solicitation, in this instance, of the grocers themselves; he places his goods before the people who visit the exposition, creating a demand for them which directly benefits the grocer.

A Warning to Buttermakers Using Coal Tar Butter Colors

We Quote from the Chicago Dairy Produce of January 21, 1908, the Following Warning

January 21, 1908.

"The following was received yesterday from the bureau of chemistry, United States department of agriculture:

"Some time has now elapsed since the publication of food iuspection decision 76, in which all aniline dyes, except seven colors specified therein, were declared to be not suitable for use in food products. Ample time has been given for the consideration of this decision by manufacturers both of colors and of food products. The department of agriculture proposes, therefore, to institute without further delay proceedings looking to the prevention of the use of any of the aniline dyes, except those specified in food products. The attention of those interested should be directed to this matter in order that no one may be unwittingly found offending the provisious of the act. It is believed that there is at the disposal of food manufacturers an abundant supply of vegetable and other harmless colors for all necessary demands and that the use of the forbidden colors should be discontinued without further delay. Those who use harmful colors in food products are subject to criminal prosecution and the foods themselves to seizure and condemnation."

—The Chicago Dairy Produce.

As it is impossible to use any of the seven colors mentioned in food Inspection Decision No. 76, in the manufacture of butter color, as none of these colors are soluble in oil, therefore the use of coal tar colors in butter is prohibited under the National Pure Food Law.

Underweighing of cheese has been practiced at this port, it is said, the object being to defraud the Government of a part of the customs duties. Col. J. H. Storey, Special Deputy Collector, is conducting an investigation, and several lots containing boxes of cheese from Italy, France and Holland have been detained at the appraiser's stores for reweighing. The authoritites seem to suspect that an employee of the Government has been in collusion with importers, or the latters' employees, and have shared in the illegal gains. Such a condition was recently disclosed, according to the charges made, with reference to importations of sugar.

The last seizure was of sixty-three boxes of choice Italian cheese, which were held Monday, pending an inquiry. This shipment was added to others previously detained by the authorities. The names of the importers have been withheld by the officials in charge of the proceedings.

A conference was held to-day at the office of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association with reference to the vexed question as to the form of contract to be used in buying from the canners. Other conferences had been held in the course of the last few days, at some of which there were present representatives of prominent canners.

As far as can be learned, the only definite outcome of these conferences, as yet, is in the form of a communication which is being sent out to jobbers by the Committee on Contracts. In this communication the jobbers are requested, in dealing with canners, to keep as close as is possible to the uniform contract which was officially suggested by the wholesalers to the canners. While the latter at their convention did not accept this form, the committee expressed confidence that as a result of the work already done a more harmonious spirit has been developed, so that there is now a better opportunity for the jobbers to get what is deemed an equitable contract.

The Contract Committee sending out the communication is composed of J. C. Mahlon, E. H. Sayre, G. A. Roth, Chas. Feilbach, W. B. Timmis.

It is given out by some of the jobbers that Southern packers are showing a disposition to agree on 100 per cent. deliveries, instead of insisting on the old form of contract, allowing a pro rata delivery in case of various kinds of mishaps.

The packers who are willing to contract for full deliveries require that the jobber on his part shall agree to accept the full amount, regardless of any change in market or other conditions. Packers in Northern States, in which crop prospects are more variable, have not yet shown the same disposition to agree on full deliveries.

An attachment was issued last Saturday against J. E. Brus, who had a grocery and dairy business at 373 Lenox avenue. The writ was for $1,405, and was in favor of Gude Bros., who were trying to collect for butter and eggs. When the deputy sheriff got to the store he found it in charge of a man who had been in the employ of Brus. The new proprietor said that his wife had recently bought the store and he did not know where the former owner had gone.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed this week against the White Clover Farms, a corporation which had ten butter, egg and milk stores in the city, the headquarters being at 162 E. Eighty-sixth street. The corporation was formed two years ago, with an authorized capital stock of $500,000. It gave a mortgage soon afterward for $60,000 to protect an issue of bonds.

A report has been sent to the Legislature by the Citizens' League, which charges that because of the State not having an adequate food law, all kinds of diseased meat is being dumped into this city and sold for consumption to people who do not know the difference between this and good meat. As the slaughtering is done in this State, it is said, the Federal authorities have no jurisdiction. An effort will be made again at this session of the Legislature to have a new food law enacted.

The Brooklyn Ice Cream Manufacturers' Board of Trade was incorporated this week. The object, it is given out, is to foster trade and prevent abuses in the business. In response to a question, it was said by one of the directors that there is no intention of trying to enforce uniform prices.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED]

LET US TALK EGGS.

This week the market is lower and we have received several hundred dozens of fresh stock that is going to do us good. Don't be afraid to guarantee them strictly fresh. Sell eggs on every order. Talk eggs to everybody at 25 cents a dozen delivered in carriers. On C. O. D. orders, paid orders, charge orders or any old way. It is up to you to make a big handle of the early "break."

LOOK OUT FOR THE YOUNGSTERS.

Give the children intelligent attention. If you can't make out their wants turn each one over to the floor walker. They represent a busy mother. They are here for something that is wanted in a hurry. Wait upon them promptly. Speak the kind word. They're fine little advertisers. They'll talk about you and the store in a way that will command attention if you and the store treat them like grown-ups.

BE PROUD OF YOUR STORE.

Not one of you can do justice to your position nor to your firm unless "you're proud of your store." We know it's the handsomest in the city; we know it's the best kept grocery in the State. If you have any doubt about it yourself look over the others. Compare their fixtures, their methods, their stock, their prices. If we're behind in any feature report it. If we're shy of a single principle speak it out.

THINGS WE MUST MOVE.

Move the maple syrup and the big stock of pancake flour. Move the prunes and the evaporated peaches. Keep these things in mind. Keep them at hand. Move the canned fruit, particularly the canned peaches. Those yellow Crawfords that you know all about at 25 cents a can.

THE DAILY COFFEE ROAST

is important. Just as important as fresh milled cereals and freshly made bread. We roast daily. Put emphasis on that. Make it felt. Tell it out day after day. Tell it as a new story. Be enthusiastic about it. It's going to sell coffee. It's going to establish the definite meaning of things. A daily roast means more fragrance; more freshness; means better coffee; better value; better business.

Dr. Wiley's Original Package Definition Overthrown.

Federal Board Throws Out the First Definition of Original Package, Which Was Grossly in Violation of Law, and Substitutes One in Conformity With Legal Decisions.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, chairman of the Federal Food and Drug Board, and framer of most of its attitudes under the national food law, suffered another sharp defeat during the week when the Board, practically over his head, handed down a decision as to what constitutes an original package which directly overturns one adopted a year ago for which Dr. Wiley was responsible.

The Federal food law applies only to articles which pass from one State to another in original packages. As soon as the original package is broken the Federal law ceases to have jurisdiction. The original definition of original package was contained in Regulation 2, and was as follows:—

REGULATION 2. Original Unbroken Package.

The term "original unbroken package" as used in this act is the original package, carton, case, can, box, barrel, bottle, phial, or other receptacle put up by the manufacturer to which the label is attached, or which may be suitable for the attachment of a label, making one complete package of the food or drug article The original package contemplates both the wholesale and the retail package.

The "Grocery World" pointed out at the time that this was wholly in violation of all law and judicial decisions, under which an original package had long been settled to be the package offered to the transportation company at the beginning of the journey and delivered intact by said transportation company to the consignee at the end of the journey.

The Federal Board, in a revised definition of original package handed down during the week, completely sustains the "Grocery World's" contention. The new decision is as follows:—

> Original unbroken packages "will be restricted to such a package containing the food and drug product as has been prepared for shipment or transportation and shipped or transported, as an entirety or unit and delivered to the consignee, remaining his property in the identical form and condition in which it was shipped or transported. Such a package will not be regarded as original if after arrival in a State or Territory and delivery to the consignee any part of its contents shall have been removed.

This directly accords with established law on the subject.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Oolong Tea.

A black variety with the flavor of green, grown in Formosa, and the staple export from Tamsui and Amoy.

In the Chinese language "oo" means black, and "lung" or "long" means dragon. The growers or packers often import dust and inferior tea from the mainland to mix with this island-grown leaf.

Pekoe Teas.

These fine China teas are considered the highest quality of black teas in the market, particularly those from the South of China, which are really unequalled. Pekoes are prepared from the first pickings of the early spring leaves, and show the fine downy "tips" of the young buds.

Flowery Pekoes are produced from leaves so young as to be still covered with this down.

Scented or Orange Pekoe is usually prepared from the poorer qualities of ordinary Pekoe, and only owes its delicious perfume and flavor to its being scented with the blossoms of an olive (Olea fragrans), Chinese orange blossoms, the Cape jasmine, etc.

There are several classes of Pekoes—broken Pekoe, Pekoe Souchong, etc.—Souchong being so called from the Chinese words Siaou-chung, meaning little plant or sort.

Pekoes come in chests of 54 pounds and half-chests of 49 pounds each, while the Scented Orange Pekoes are in boxes of about 20 pounds each.

Paprika.

This is prepared from the fruit of the Capsicum annum, as grown in Hungary, where it is held in high repute, and used very largely in cooking.

Paprika is generally divided into four classes according to its strength and color.

The Zzegediner paprika is the sort most esteemed by gourmets. It is usually employed as a condiment, and placed on the table in a saltcellar.

The Difference Between Bank Notes

If some one said to you I'll give you a bank note if you will do something for me—you wouldn't be much interested, would you? It would be too indefinite.

If some one said I'll give you a hundred-dollar bank note that would be different, wouldn't it? The same difference exists if one of your customers tells her family "I am going to give you Pork and Beans for dinner" —they are not much interested; but if she says "I'm going to give you that means something. We have advertised them so widely that they have been widely used, and because they have been widely used their unusually fine quality is widely known.

Try a can yourself, and you'll be a booster—you can't help it.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is about stationary. The demand is only fair, and there seems to be no reason to expect in the near future anything more than a very moderate business. There have been no changes in price during the week. Low grades, because of scarcity, are firmly maintained, but the tendency of the higher grades is easy.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee still rules very dull and listless, with very slight changes for the week both as to options and spot. There is almost no public interest whatever in speculative coffee options, and it looks as if the speculative contingent had at last learned the lesson of the burnt child and the fire. There have been no quotable changes in price during the week. The demand is fair. Java and Mocha coffee are steady and milds are in the same condition. Demand moderate.

Sugar.

The refined sugar market has declined 10 points during the week, due to the greater supply of raws and the consequent weakening of the price. All refiners are now on a parity except the Federal, which still maintains a level 10 points below its competitors. Raw sugar is gradually weakening, and refined may drop 10 points more. The demand is light.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is unchanged for the week, the principal development of the week being the overruling of Dr. Wiley and the decision that glucose syrup may be called corn syrup. Compound syrup is in fair demand at unchanged prices. Sugar syrup is unchanged and in light demand. Fine grades of molasses are wanted somewhat at firm prices.

Fish.

Irish mackerel are even scarcer than they have been, and the supply is not equal to the demand. The price has made no further advances, as it had about reached the limit before. Norways have been in rather better demand during the week, as Irish fish have become scarcer. There has been some business done in shore mackerel at concessions this week. The market is stiffening up, however. Cod, hake and haddock are all dull. The market down East is steady to firm, but not so much so in secondary markets. Salmon is unchanged and quiet. Domestic sardines are unchanged and not particularly strong or active. Imported sardines are firm and scarce.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are nominally unchanged, although there is perhaps a somewhat easier feeling. Locally there have been more sales at 80 cents delivered during the week than at 80 cents f. o. b. The demand, however, is sluggish. Futures are dull. Corn is unchanged and in light demand. There is some little demand for futures, but not much as yet. Spot prices are unchanged. Peas are quiet and unchanged, being more active for future than for spot. Peaches are unchanged and dull. Apples are steady and in moderate demand. The Baltimore line shows no change and not much activity during the week. Oysters have ruled much cheaper than usual this season, due perhaps to the open winter and the consequent larger catch. California canned goods are unchanged in price and quiet in first hands.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are still easier, and sales have been made during the week on a 2¾-cent bag basis, which is ¾ cent below the last quoted price. These sales were from the coast to come forward. The market is quite soggy. Peaches have had a good demand at the declined price, showing that all they needed was to be brought within people's reach. Apricots are scarce and high, and the better grades are getting well cleaned up. Currants are selling well at unchanged prices. Raisins are dull and weak. Apples are about unchanged and in light demand. Citron has declined another half cent and is very dull. Dates and figs are unchanged and quiet.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are firm and show an advance for the week. To come forward the quotation is $2.40 to $2.45, while on spot good stock commands $2.50. Marrows are quoted at $2.25 to $2.30. The demand for both grades is good. California limas are unchanged and in good demand. Dried peas

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

are unchanged, most grades being very firm. Scotch are high and almost out of the market. Green peas are almost as bad. The demand is good. Other grades are unchanged and in moderate demand.

Butter.

The butter market declined early in the week 1 cent on the highest grades, leaving the under grades unchanged. After two days a reaction came and the market is now very firm at the former price. The market is very healthy and if there is any change during the week it will probably be a slight advance. The make of fresh butter is very light and stocks in storage are very small.

Eggs.

The egg market is very firm at an advance of 3 cents. This is due entirely to the severe weather in the West. There has been a very good consumptive demand, and as storage eggs are about gone, there is more demand for fresh eggs than can be supplied. The future depends absolutely on the weather, and it is therefore impossible to foretell the market even a day ahead.

Cheese.

The supply of late-made cheese is about gone, and there are very few cheese to be had under price. The supply is considerably lighter than usual for the season and the demand is about normal. The prevailing price is 10 per cent. above a year ago, and if there is any change it will probably be upward.

Provisions.

The market for smoked meats is stationary, with a fairly active demand. Prices ruling are 15 per cent. lower than a year ago, while the consumptive demand is about normal. The supply of all hog products is very liberal. Pure and compound lard are both unchanged and the market is fairly active. The consumptive demand is about normal. Barrel pork and canned meats are steady and unchanged. Dried beef is very scarce and bringing 15 per cent. more than a year ago.

Produce.

Pennsylvania potatoes, 75 to 80 cents per bushel; York State, 70 to 78 cents per bushel, demand fair to good; Ohio globe onions, 70 to 85 cents per bushel, York State, 70 to 75 cents per bushel, demand fair; white onions, $1 to $1.25 per bushel crate, demand dull; Spanish onions, small crates, $1; bushel crates, $1.50, demand fair; Danish cabbage, $9 to $11 per ton; Savoy, $1 to $1.25 per barrel, demand fair; white turnips, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, 30 to 35 cents per basket; yellow, 40 cents per basket, demand good; carrots, 40 to 45 cents per basket, demand fair to good; horseradish, Western, $4.50 to $5.50 per barrel; domestic, $3.50 to $4 per barrel, demand fair; Pennsylvania celery, 10 to 20 cents per bunch, demand fair; parsnips, $1.25 to $2.50 per barrel demand poor; beets, $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; watercress, $2 to $3 per 100, demand good.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Baldwins, $2 to $4 per barrel; Hulbersons, $3 to $3.50 per barrel; Greenings, $3 to $4.50 per barrel; Spy, $3 to $3.50 per barrel; Spitz, $4 to $4.50 per barrel; Kings, $4 to $5 per barrel; Russets, $2 to $3 per barrel, demand fair; California oranges, $2.40 to $2.50 per box; Florida, $2.15 to $2.40 per box; India River, $3 to $4 per box, demand poor; grapefruit, $2 to $6 per box, good fruit is scarce and in good demand; lemons, $2.75 to $3.25 per box, demand fair; pineapples, $2.50 to $3 per box, demand fair; bananas, jumbo, $1.50 to $2 per bunch; firsts, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch; 8-hands, $1 to $1.25 per bunch; 7-hands, 65 to 85 cents per bunch; 6-hands, 50 to 60 cents per bunch, demand poor.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Coffee.

We refer to our last report of the 15th ultimo. The market since then improved about ¼ cent a pound for new-crop Santos, and about ½ cent a pound for old-crop Santos.

A healthy trade demand was encountered and in nearly every instance the order was accompanied by a request to rush shipment, which proved what we have contended for quite some time—i. e., that the country is poorly supplied. We look for a continuation of this activity.

The stocks at Rio and Santos are being reduced steadily. These stocks are virtually the only source of supply for consuming markets. It is probable that they will be reduced in the course of the next few months to a dangerously low level.

We do not believe that more than about 1,000,000 bags, if that much, will arrive in Santos during the next 4½ months, which would give, including the stock already at that port, about 2,300,000 bags available for consuming markets, and if we consider that the consumption of Santos coffee amounts to about 900,000 bags a month in Europe and the United States, or roughly speaking 4,000,000 bags during the next 4½ months, a scarcity of available Santos coffee seems imminent.

We are assured that the Government holdings are still intact, that they will be kept out of the market until a certain high price is reached, and will then be released only in such a manner as the trade need them.

The past has proven that every statement made by the Government has been lived up to, and there is as yet no reason to doubt the honesty of purpose in publishing the Government plan above mentioned. Nevertheless, we believe that the advance in the price since the first of January is for the time being sufficient.

A maintenance of present values without much fluctuation would help the distribution to interior points materially.

With regard to the size of the growing crop, different views are entertained. Taking the maximum figures (which we consider excessive) it would mean a total production of Rios and Santos of 11,500,000 to 12,000,000 bags, a quantity insufficient for the requirements of consumption by 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 bags.

The size of the 1906 crop was beyond all comprehension, and is explained in various ways. For instance old trees, which did not bear fruit for many years, then produced bountifully; trees which were entering their prime of life bore three times as much as an average yield based on the experiences of former years.

Just as wonderful as it was to see such an overwhelming crop produced, it is equally astonishing to see the enormous falling off in the production of the year following.

It is now claimed, and may be justly so, that the very old trees can never bear again, the revival of their vitality being one of the wonders in the history of coffee culture.

But we must not put too much stock in these predictions—what nature has done once it may do again.

Mild Coffees.—New-crop Central Americans are beginning to make their appearance in our port. The receipts as yet are small, but they will increase from now on, reaching their height during either March or April.

The consuming markets are poorly supplied with stock, and for this reason a good demand will probably prevail for all early arrivals.

As we have pointed out before, the Mild coffee crops this year are small, therefore there is no danger of an unwieldly accumulation of supplies.

No. 1.

Nothing of an interesting character developed in this market during the past week. There was the same sort of hand-to-mouth buying, and the prices are practically the same as in the previous week. The tomato market shows some activity for two or three days at a time and then becomes quiet again, but at no time has any special weakness developed in that article since the acute state of the trouble in the money market was reached and passed in November last. It has caused much favorable comment in the trade about the apparent stability of the tomato market, and it is believed that nothing can happen to cause any decline in the prices of them from now on. In future tomatoes there is very little business comparatively being done and neither the packers nor the jobbers seem disposed to force business in them.

In the general line of vegetables, and in fruits as well, there was only a small demand this week and orders for straight carload lots of any article were scarce outside of tomatoes and cove oysters. The month of February will probably not break its record as one of the dullest months in the whole year in this market.

Next to nothing done this week in future tomatoes and no changes in quotations. We quote the best brands of such quality as suitable for buyers' labels at 60 cents for No. 2 standards and 80 cents per dozen for No. 3 standards. Seconds tomatoes are 5 to 7½ cents per dozen less.

No changes in the corn situation this week. Market is firm.

Very little doing in peas just now, and no changes to note.

No particular demand this week for beans; prices unchanged, except string beans are lower.

No. 2.

Orders are being placed at 77½ cents per dozen, Peninsula, for No. 3 standard tomatoes, and there is quite a good inquiry for them. The market seems to have struck bottom at this point for the present. There are a few sellers at this price, but most of the packers are holding firm at 80 cents per dozen. There is not much change in the situation either one way or the other, though we think there is a somewhat better inquiry and a better demand will probably follow.

The situation on futures is unchanged; in fact, there is hardly a situation on them as yet. A few sales have been made, but there has not been any serious attention given to them either by buyer or seller.

We are having a better inquiry for corn. The dullness of the past few months has made quite a change in prices, considering the short pack and the comparatively light holdings, and the market ought soon reach something of a turning point.

Oysters.—Packing is still tied up here and from present indications there will not be any packing for several weeks.

Imported Fish Products.

Business in our lines seems to be improving from day to day.

Holland herrings continue dull and neglected, and prices are as low as ever.

Scotch herrings are in fair demand, prices unchanged.

Irish Mackerel. — Decidedly scarce, in good demand and higher.

Norway Mackerel.—In better demand. Stocks are clearing rapidly and prices are tending higher.

Dutch Bellysplit Mackerel.—Demand improved and stocks greatly reduced, as the buyers have turned to those bellysplit fish owing to the scarcity of small mackerel.

Imported oil sardines continue as scarce as ever. No additional supplies can be expected, as there is no catch.

Sprats.—Owing to the scarcity of sardines, sprats have been selling very lively. The catch of sprats so far has proven quite a failure, consequently there will be very few sprats offering and prices are likely to show quite an advance when the spring trade opens.

Norway smoked sardines are decidedly scarce, especially the well-known brands of the best grades, and no new supplies of this quality can be expected before late next summer or early next fall. Prices are likely to show an advance.

Olive Oil.—In excellent demand and cables report an excited and advancing market.

Spices.

The market has shown much activity during the past week. Cables report a firmer tone and the full list has shown a very steady demand.

Pepper.—Cables show slightly higher prices for futures. The tendency is no doubt upwards. This will have the effect of advancing prices on ground pepper, which at present is exceptionally low.

Cayennes. — Stocks are short. The market, therefore, is strong and tending upward.

Cloves.—The demand very good; stocks unusually short and prices, therefore, are quite firm.

Pimento (Allspice). — Steady, with fair quality; extremely scarce.

Nutmegs.—Cables received during the last two or three days show an advance of about 2 cents per pound. 105s to 110s are now quoted at a higher price than has been in effect for some months past.

Cassias.—All grades of China bark in good demand, and prices on China roll cassia are much higher.

Gingers.—All varieties of root in good demand. We note considerable inquiry for new crop African and Cochin.

Seeds.—Caraway continues firm, with upward tendency. Import cost is now about 10 cents. Poppy, coriander and celery all unchanged during the week.

Rubbed sage and sweet herbs still selling in a satisfactory way.

We can report higher prices for thyme. Market is up about ½ cent per pound.

MARKET NOTES.

Florida oranges rule about the same—$2 to $3.50, and the demand is limited. The receipts are moderate, and the market is in fairly healthy condition.

Sweet potatoes are higher than they have been for years. The range is $5.50 to $5.75, with fancy stock bringing $6. Extreme scarcity is the cause.

New Bermuda potatoes are selling somewhat better as spring approaches. No. 2s are worth $6.25 and No. 1s $7 to $7.50. The quality is good.

Florida grapefruit still ranges from $3 to $6 per box, but the demand is limited.

Tangerines are scarce and very dull at $4 to $5 per box.

Cucumbers from Boston hothouses range from $1.75 to $2.25, and the demand is good.

Rhubarb is now coming from near-by hothouses as well as from Michigan. The hothouse fruit averages $1 and the Michigan 50 to 65 cents. The near-by rhubarb is very good and is wanted.

Hothouse tomatoes range from 20 to 25 cents per pound and are in fair demand. The supply is low.

Florida salad ranges from $1.50 to $2.25, and the demand is fair.

Get the Benefit of Grape Juice Advertising.

The Welch Grape Juice Company have started a vigorous advertising campaign on Welch's Grape Juice, using the leading magazines such as the "Ladies Home Journal," "Woman's Home Companion," "Good Housekeeping," "Everybody's," "McClure's," "Munsey's," "Saturday Evening Post," "Collier's," "Literary Digest," "Life," "Table Talk," and "Boston Cooking School" magazines. Advertising starts in the February and March issues and liberal space will be used. An especially strong advertising campaign has been maintained in the leading medical journals for several years and this line of work is increased this year. The medical journals have been used without intermission. When a physician recommends grape juice, almost invariably he specifies "Welch's." The present demand for Welch's Grape Juice comes from the cumulative effect of years of advertising, undoubtedly last year's output would have been sold without any advertising in 1907, and possibly this year's output could be sold without advertising. But the Welch's Grape Juice Company will take no chances on this and every dealer buying Welch's Grape Juice may know that in stocking Welch's Grape Juice he will not have to carry over stock into another season. In their advertising and general business methods, the Welch Company have always built for the future. This accounts for the fact that the sales of Welch's Grape Juice have shown an average increase of about 40 per cent. per year for the past several years.

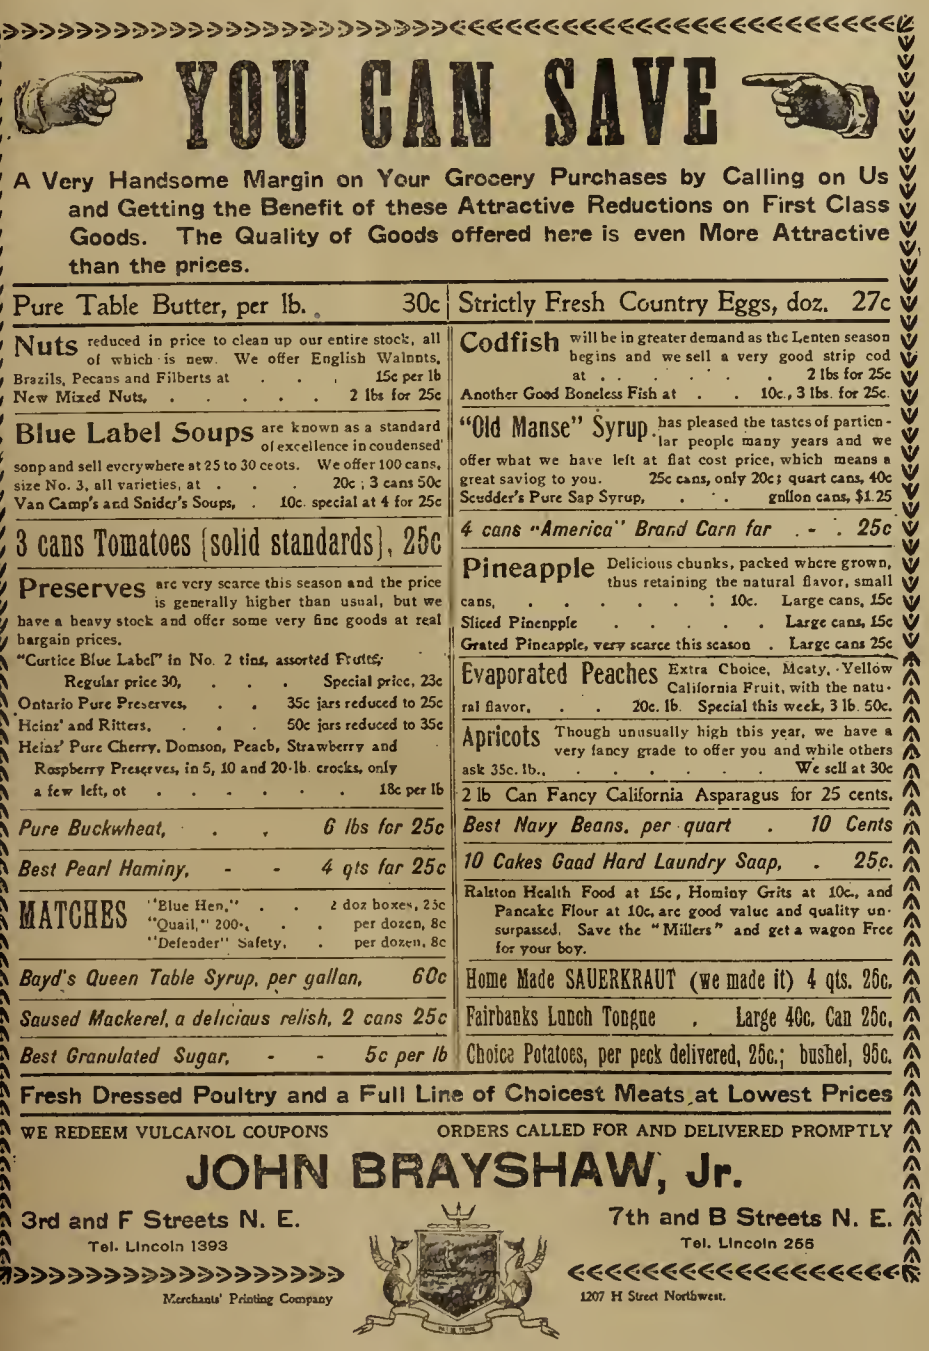
Washington, D. C., Feb. 13, 1908.

Editor Science of Advertising.

Dear Sir:—I am mailing, under separate cover to you, a circular I am distributing this week; also some cards which I have used very recently. Some have produced very good results, other have not seemed to do so well.

I thank you in advance for your criticism and suggestions, which I always read with interest.



Respectfully yours,

JNO. BRAYSHAW, JR.

Mr. Brayshaw sends in quite a good-sized bunch of advertising matter. There is a large circular, printed on paper, and a number of small ones printed on cardboard. The cardboard circulars do not seem to be the conventional business postals, so I assume they are passed from door to door like ordinary circulars. If that is the case, I should think they might be expensive and a little unwieldy.

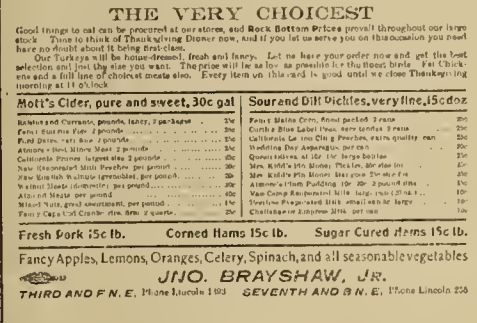
The main circular, which measures 9½ x 12½ inches, is reproduced photographically as follows:—



This circular is too crowded to suit me. On this comparatively small circular twenty-nine articles are advertised. That is scattering the shot too widely. I believe in using method in grocery advertisements. Instead of going all over creation for things to advertise, and combining them in one advertisement, I believe it a far better plan to write, say a canned goods advertisement, in which only things in cans shall be advertised. Or a "Dutch lunch" advertisement, in which could go such things as cheese, pickles, potted ham, corned beef, and so on. Or a "wash-day" advertisement in which could go not only soaps, starches, mops, bluing, etc., but also easily-dished up things for the hasty wash-day lunch. Or a "cold weather breakfast" advertisement, with such things as codfish, mackerel, hot cake materials, syrup, and so on. You see it's easy to be systematic about it, and the effect is sure to be better, because such an advertisement travels along a single path in the consumer's mind.

This circular is unsystematic for two reasons: First, because it groups a great lot of wholly dissimilar things, and second, because it doesn't treat even them all alike. Some are exploited and demonstrated, so to speak, in a few words of reading matter, others are simply mentioned and priced. My policy would be to use fewer articles, choose such as have some relation to each other, and give more space to each.

I pick out two of the small cards to reproduce, because they illustrate the two ends of a point I want to make. Each one measures 4 x 6 and is printed the long way:—

The card headed "The Very Choicest" I do not consider good advertising. Analyzed, it is simply a tame price-list, with nothing in the least alluring about it. The most interesting thing imaginable is a price, unaccompanied by explanatory matter, unless it is a very low price.

The other card—"We Want Everybody to Know" is a thousand per cent. better. It is more interesting; it says something; instead of being laconic like the other one it gets real chatty and talkative about the goods. Almost always it is the chatty salesman who sells the goods and not the one who says nothing but the price.

Food Products High in Other Countries.

Austrians Complain Bitterly Over High Prices of Necessaries. Prices of Food in Mexico. An Interesting Description of the Retail Stores of Rio Janeiro.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Feb. 21, 1908.

The people of other countries than our own are making the same complaint about the high cost of food. In Austria not only the working classes, but the shopkeepers, school officials, post and municipal authorities, the various law officers, and all grades of officials whose incomes do not exceed $1,600 a year complain that the present prices of food and clothing are exorbitant. Owing to the high price of meat efforts have been made to introduce into that market fish from the German and Baltic seas, and as the ports from which they were shipped are only sixteen to twenty hours' distant they arrived in good condition, but the attempt seems to have failed. The people are accustomed to animal and farinaceous foods, and, with the exception of fresh water fish, taken from the rivers and lakes of Austria-Hungary, principally zander, carp, schill, trout, and a few salmon, no fish has a permanent sale.

According to statements by Consuls, it seems possible that American salted or pickled pork and corned beef, if cheap enough and well prepared, might find a ready and profitable sale there, but it will be necessary to establish wholesale warehouses to supply the trade, and even private customers direct. The price of meats in the Carlsbad market is as follows, per pound: Beef, veal and mutton, 20 cents; pork, 25 cents.

The same condition exists in the larger cities of Mexico. Native beef sells per kilo as follows: Rib roast, 90 cents; porterhouse steak, 90 cents; tenderloin, $1. For the best cuts of native pork and sausages, 90 cents. The same price obtains for the best cuts of lamb and mutton, while veal, best cuts, sell at $1. Twelve to fourteen-pound turkeys may be bought for from $4 to $5 each; spring chickens from 90 cents each upward, and wild duck from 40 to 50 cents each.

American made butter is largely imported packed in cans, and sells from $1 to $1.25 per pound. Oleomargarine can be bought for 60 cents, and lard, also of American manufacture, for 35 cents per pound. Domestic lard sells for a few centavos more the pound, and is of excellent flavor, but the demand far exceeds the present supply. Native eggs are 75 cents a dozen. Cheese retails per kilo as follows: American, $1.32; Canadian, $1.32; European, $1.50. American wheat flour may be had at 18 cents the pound, and the native product at 10 cents for a like quantity. Rice of best grade is 35 cents the kilo. Teas range from $1.25 to $3, and the best grade of coffee is 40 cents the pound. Cocoa of American manufacture sells at 90 cents for a half-pound can; Dutch cocoa at $1.25 for a can of the same weight.

American breakfast food preparations of various well-known sorts retail at 45 cents per package. In the fancy biscuit trade English products have perhaps a larger sale than the American, these goods from both countries being usually priced at the same figure, 85 cents a pound. American-made biscuits or crackers, such as sell for 5 cents in the United States, bring 30 cents a package. Cane sugar, native grown and refined, both loaf and granulated, is 20 cents the kilo.

Apples grown in the United States may be had for 75 cents per kilo (2.2 pounds); canned in 3-pound cans for $1.25. American potatoes sell for 16 cents a kilo. Fruits and vegetables, native grown, which include practically all those green vegetables to which we are accustomed in the United States, are, as a rule, less expensive than with us. Strawberries may be secured at a nominal price the year round. Oranges of large size may be obtained for two centavos each.

A report from Deputy-Consul Joseph J. Slechta deals interestingly with the retail stores of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The most significant difference between American and Brazilian cities in this respect is the absence in the latter of anything like department stores. Rio de Janeiro offers splendid opportunities for investments along this line. Probably in no other large city of the world would department-store methods cut down expenses in the retail business to the extent possible in Rio de Janeiro. The reduction in municipal taxation would be considerable, since taxes are based not so much on the size of an establishment as upon the nature of the business. Circumstances which give the department stores so great an advantage over smaller establishments in the United States are greatly emphasized in Rio de Janeiro. The commercial centre of the city is limited to a comparatively small area, quite out of proportion to the enormous extent of the city. This district is readily accessible by direct tramways from all parts of the metropolis.

A department store established on the right basis in Rio de Janeiro, having due regard for the customs, usages and demands of the country, would have many advantages not peculiar to such establishments in the United States. There is, for example, no well developed system of delivering purchases at residences. Most of the better establishments make a pretense of delivering, but with the exception of one firm, which makes use of motor busses, the service is far from satisfactory. Most retailers either do not deliver at all or restrict themselves to the services of "carregadores," who carry packages in a box balanced on the head.

Perhaps the modern facilities of retail establishments which are most conspicuous by their absence in even the largest and otherwise up-to-date stores are cash and bundle carriers. In some of the larger stores packages are wrapped at a bundle counter near the cashier's desk and goods are paid for at the cashier's desk only. In some others salesmen receive money at the counter and make change at the cashier's desk. Cash registers are coming more and more into use, though restricted almost entirely to the use of cashiers.

The per cent. of profit is much larger than is customary in the United States, though it is doubtful if the actual net profits are as high. The expense of maintenance is easily three times as great as in large American cities. Except in a few cases only men are employed. Wages of clerks run from 50 to 100 per cent. greater than for equal service in New York, but since cost of living here is easily twice as great as in the American metropolis, wages are comparatively lower here. Rents are enormous, and in fact every item of cost of operation is so extravagant that a much higher scale of prices rules than anywhere in the United States.

All of the larger and more progressive establishments are adopting the one price system, but this is a recent innovation. With the smaller dealers the old system prevails, according to which every day is bargain day. That is, no shopper expects to make a purchase without a good deal of bickering, during which the price may be reduced frequently to a third or even a half less than the first quotation.

Retailers have not yet fallen in with the "Yankee" idea of setting apart certain days as "bargain days," nor is there a great deal of newspaper advertising on a large scale. No special effort is made to attract attention to "special" or "remnant" sales, except in the ordinary course of trade. There is a good deal of sign advertising, and "liquidation" sales are apparently habitual with a large class of dealers. None of the retailers have as yet adopted the attractive method of advertising and drawing trade so frequently and generally used in the United States—that is, of providing comfortable places for the gathering of customers and shoppers.

IF YOU SLICE DRIED BEEF

you need Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicing machine. Because it slices dried beef to perfection, and moist freshly cured beef in full-size wafer slices, thin, smooth and delicious, will attract more new trade than any article you can offer.

IF YOU DON'T SLICE DRIED BEEF

you certainly need Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicer, because you are losing the prestige and profit of the most salable and profitable specialty in the whole line of eatables.

This machine was invented by an experienced retail grocer to correct the faults, remove the defects and improve the shortcomings of all other machines.

It will slice five pounds of dried beef in five minutes, every slice perfect, the full size of the meat, transparently thin, smooth and shining. It will cut the tough sinewy ends in perfect slices. It will slice up every little end. It will save enough time and labor, prevent enough waste, draw enough new trade, and increase the sales of sliced meat, sufficient to pay for itself in a very short time.

Send for a sample of sandwich sliced beef and see the magnet that draws the trade.

Unusual Profits.

The grocer is so accustomed to thinking of little profits and many sales, that he often overlooks good articles sold in certain seasons, that pay him more than ordinary margins. When he does this, he is simply allowing the nickels, dimes, and dollars to mingle with their fellows in his competitors' cash registers, when they should occupy a cozy corner in his own.

We have in mind a very excellent seller, which will be seasonable from the latter part of March up until Easter, and it is one that pays from 110 per cent. to 133 per cent. profit. It's not sugar or tobacco, but Fleck's New Combination Egg Dyes.

Each five-cent package contains a half dozen plain colors, from which dozens of shades and effects may be produced and a half dozen paper dyes from each of which may be transferred designs of animals, flowers, birds and amusing characters. Forty-two of these five-cent packages are contained in each $1.00 box, which makes your profit 110 per cent. In six-box quantities, a discount from this price of 10 per cent. is allowed, making your margin 133 per cent.

Don't forget to mention Fleck's Egg Dyes when you order from your jobber. Don't take anything else. Insist on having the box containing forty-two five-cent packages, each package containing both colors and papers. If he can't supply you they will be forwarded on receipt of price, all charges prepaid, by the manufacturer, J. J. Fleck, Tiffin, Ohio.

A Conspiracy Exposed.

Say, do you know there's a conspiracy on against you retail fellows?

There's a little crowd of manufacturers who have made up their minds that you've got to sell their goods, whether you want to or not, and whether they pay you any profit or not.

This is no idle dream—I know what I'm talking about.

They're working on this point—that if consumers want something it's up to you to supply it. It's none of your business whether it's a good thing to sell or not. If somebody wants it, that's enough.

Let me tell you something that was told to me by one big manufacturer last week.

"I know it to be a fact," he said, "that a committee of the big manufacturers of proprietary food products went to the 'Ladies' Home Journal' the other day and put up an argument that the 'Journal' should begin a campaign against substitution by the dealers. They rubbed it in that they were big advertisers in the 'Ladies' Home Journal,' and in the other magazines, but they weren't getting good results from their advertising because the grocer induced his customers to buy something else."

As I get it, the "Ladies' Home Journal" was handed the straight goods that if it didn't get busy along the no-substitution line, it would lose some business.

You see these big food manufacturers cut ice. They're all package people, and when you add up all that sort of advertising there is in the monthly magazines you've got some money represented.

I looked over the February number of the "Ladies' Home Journal" and counted thirty-two food ads. there. All the way from a full page down.

Every one was for a proprietary package food sold by the grocer.

Same thing in any monthly magazine.

Why the more I think of it the better I'm convinced that this scheme of the "Woman's Home Companion" is some sort of an advertising deal with the big package goods men. You can see the line of the whole thing—how they led up to it from a bang at dirty stores; how the housewife ought to deal only with the clean stores, and how, after several preliminary articles, the only way to get clean stuff was to buy package goods.

See how slick the thing was worked up? For myself, I feel just as sure that that stuff was published to help the package houses that advertised in the "Woman's Home Companion" as I am that I'm bald on the top of my head.

You see lots of things that show you that the big manufacturers have waked up to the fact that they can't force the grocer to sell their goods after all. They used to brag that they could, but they don't now. There's many a slip 'twixt the "Ladies' Home Journal" ad. and the sale, and the slip is the grocer that the sale's got to go through.

If he wants to sell the thing, and it pays him to sell it, he may do it, but unless that's so all hen can't make him.

And it never can, Mr. Manufacturer.

I had a little talk the other day with the agent of a manufacturer who spends as much money advertising in the magazines as anybody I know of.

"Your firm must spend a pile of money for advertising," I said.

"They do," he said, "but they're robbed of the good of a lot of it by the grocers."

"How?" I asked.

"They substitute," he replied.

"What do you mean by substitute?" I asked. "You don't mean that when a customer asks for Maple Flake the grocer without saying anything will send her Egg-O-See, do you?"

"Oh, no," he said, "I mean that when our advertising works up a woman to ask for our goods the grocer, if he don't keep 'em, will try and sell her something else."

"Well, what's wrong about that?" I asked.

"Why, he ought to sell her what she asks for!" he replied.

"Regardless of whether it pays him to do so?" I asked.

"Sure," was the answer.

"That looks to me like a good imitation of bosh," I said. "You take a case I heard of only last week. In a town where I was, a new cash store after business had cut a certain breakfast food to 9 cents, half a cent above cost. The price before that was 12 cents. It had done a lot of advertising and had brought the price down all through the town to that. Every package sold, counting cost of doing business, meant a loss. Do you mean to tell me that if you'd been in business there you'd have sold it anyway, simply because it was asked for? Not on your life you wouldn't! You'd have done like everybody else with a grain of sense—you'd block the sale every time you could."

"Maybe I would," he replied, "but I wouldn't try to steal the order the manufacturer has made and give it to another product."

"Then if you wouldn't you're no salesman!" I said. "The fellow who can sell the least of what pays him nothing and the most of what pays him best—he's the salesman, all right. The fellow who sells something he don't want to sell, just because somebody asks for it, is a plumb ass!"

And yet that's just what these manufacturers, in conspiracy with the women's papers, are trying to turn you fellows into.

Wooden images just to hand out their goods! Profit? Why you cheeky things, to want a profit!

If I had any hair, I'm sure it would rise at such a fool idea. The grocer will sell your stuff, Mr. Manufacturer, when he wants to and when it pays him; not before.

Take a pipe smoke on that!

THE STROLLER.

ASSOCIATION NEWS.

Roanoke, Va.

Both the wholesale and retail grocers of Roanoke, Va., have adopted a strenuous attitude against parcels post. They have issued the following open letter to all the retailers in Virgiania:—

To the Merchants Doing Business in the Country, Villages and Towns of Virginia—Greeting:—

You are probably aware that the Postmaster-General has recommended to the present Congress for enactment, a Parcels Post Law which, as we see it, has for its object the enabling of the great catalogue houses of a few of the large Northern and Western cities to acquire all the good cash trade of the rural districts, villages and town of not only our State, but of the entire nation. By examining the said bill, you can readily see what effect such a measure must have on your business, and upon our business—for our success depends upon yours. If passed, the bill in question will enable the catalogues houses to supply every farm house, and every house of the State, with their catalogues, and to sell for cash their goods at such rates that you cannot meet, because you must pay rent, clerk hire, license, taxes, insurance and the many other expenses arising out of the conduct of your business.

Now, if to this be added the privilege to the catalogue houses of sending their merchandise through the mails for two cents per pound (it costs the Government about sixteen cents per pound), to you will remain only the credit trade and barter, which the catalogue houses do not desire and will not accept.

Again, the purchases made from the catalogue houses must be paid in cash, and that means the sending from your community all the ready cash, and Uncle Sam pays the freight; for our present mail system, at the present rates, charged, shows a deficit for last year of over $6,800,000, due to the Government carrying the bulk of the mail-matter at less than cost.

Letters cost, on an average, sixty-four cents per pound to the writer, while it costs the Government but sixteen cents per pound to send that class of matter, while a great mass of worthless and noxious matter, as well as merchandise, is now carried at such rates that the profit made on letters, great as it is, cannot overcome the deficit. Does it appear to you the proper thing to enact laws as to inevitably and greatly increase such deficit, and all to benefit a few of the very rich at the expense of the many? The trouble with our country now is that too much of our money resources has been concentrated at and is, by connivance of officials, kept in the great cities; and if this practice is to be further fostered and encouraged by the Government by legislation, such as the Parcels Post Bill, you might as well pull down your curtains, shut your doors and go out of business. We urge you to join us in protecting your interests—our interests, for we are dependent on your success—and we ask you to do it now, to-day.

Write your Congressman and Senators personal letters; write them on your stationery, and ask them to oppose the bill now up and all other bills of a like character that tend to ruin our country merchants and impoverish our rural communities. Ask them to give us penny postage on letters, and to make every other class of mail-matter bear its own expense of carriage through the mails. Will you do it, and do it now?

Yours for protection,

The STEEL FRUIT JAR CAP from the Chemist's Viewpoint

Prof Chas. T. P. Fennel, the famous Cincinnati chemist, says that a steel fruit jar cap submitted to the influence of organic acids, such as are contained in fruits, do not corrode as much as zinc caps. He further says that resulting salts from this corrosion in the case of the steel cap are absolutely harmless, and that those from the zinc caps are poisonous to the human system.

If you tell this to your customers you can sell a lot of our steel caps.

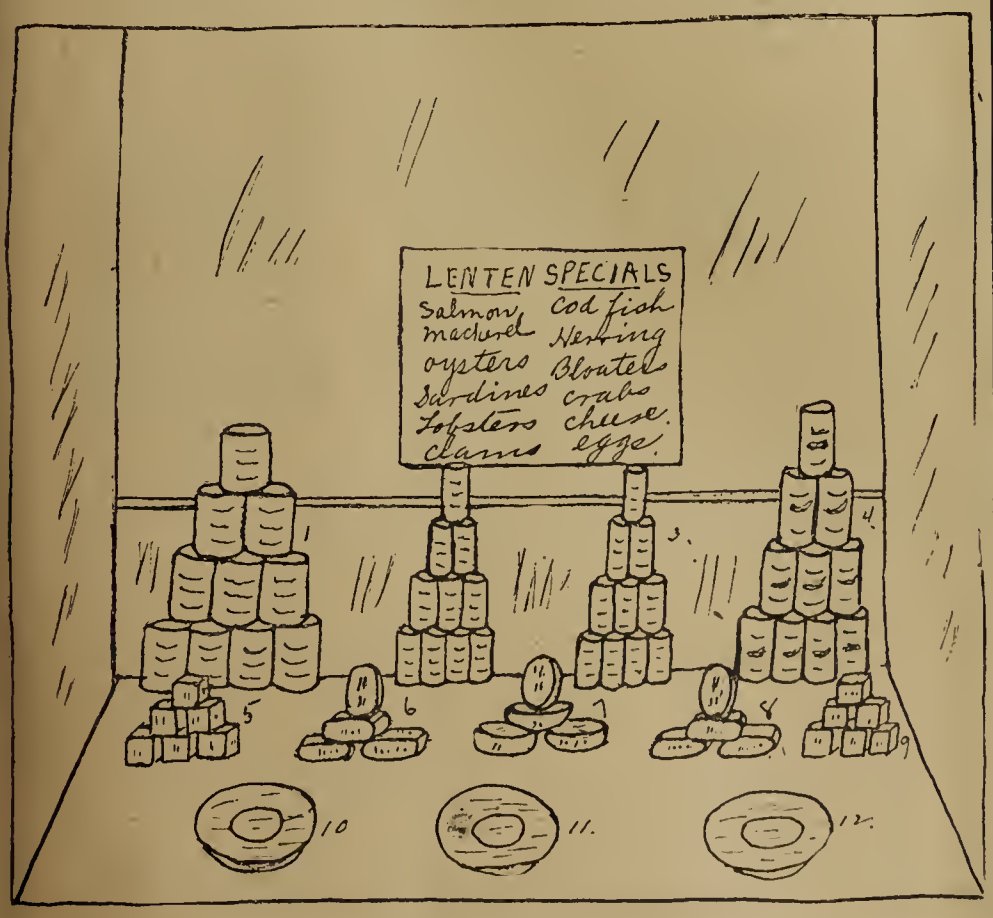
Window Dressing for Grocers



In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

A Dessert Window.

There is no special way of arranging the packages in the window for this display. The idea is to have a window of all desserts. For instance, display several kinds of corn starch, fruit puddine, showing different flavors; granulated and flaked tapioca, Jello, D. Zerta, Bromangelon, Jellycon, Junket or any such desserts as you may handle.

In buying these goods you usually get a number of small receipt books showing the different preparations that can be made from these desserts. The idea is to save these receipt books from different desserts and have a special window of these goods, at which time you hand one to each customer, calling attention to the goods on display. Also have a number of these books distributed throughout the bottom of window. Also use display cards if you have any.

A Lenten Window.

Lent begins the first week in March, at which time the grocer must be well supplied in all lines of canned fish and meats. It is well to have a window display of these goods at that time. For key to sketch see below:—

KEY TO SKETCH.

1. Large can oysters.
2. Soused mackerel.
3. Small can oysters.
4. Salmon.
5. Shredded codfish.
6. Sardines.
7. Lobsters.
8. Boneless Herring.
9. Codfish in one-pound bricks.
10. Bloaters on plate.
11. Codfish, bulk, on plate.
12. Mackerel or dried herring on plate.

Organized Retailers Pledge Themselves to Work for Its Passage. Small News of Local Associations.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Erie, Pa., Feb. 21, 1908.

The Jeanette Business Men's Association adopted the following resolutions at its last meeting:—

Whereas, The greater part of our great State of Pennsylvania has adequate protection from peddlers and hawkers.

Resolved, That we urge the passage of an act covering fully this much needed protection, and to this recommend that our Legislative Committee be instructed to either draft a new law or amend the act of April 12, 1857, applying to Northumberland County to make it apply to every other county in the State.

We pledge our every effort to bring about this much needed measure.

T. E. Hummel has been elected as the successor of A. A. Eckert secretary of the Pottsville Merchants' Association.

W. E. Barrett has been elected secretary of the Oil City Business Men's Exchange in place of E. S. McAlevy, resigned.

The Cannonsburg Business Men's Association is active in the suppression of adulterated butter and produce, and has alone done good work in the suppression of peddlers.

The Merchants' Protective Association of Pittston and vicinity is fighting hard for free bridges. A petition with 500 signers was presented to the court asking the appointment of viewers. In two days the viewers were appointed, which is considered quick work for Luzerne County courts.

The Homestead Association admitted seven new members and reinstated five old ones at last meeting. Steps were taken for a mass meeting for the relief of the distressed in Homestead.

BOOK REVIEWS

DETECTION OF THE COMMON FOOD ADULTERANTS.—By Edwin M. Bruce, Instructor in Chemistry, Indiana State Normal School. O. Van Nostrand, 23 Murray street, New York, publishers.

As the preface indicates, this book is published mainly for health officers, food inspectors, and teachers of and students in chemistry. It is too technical to be of use to any one not possessed of at least some chemical knowledge. Within limits, it is a very comprehensive work, taking up all the food products most subject to adulteration and giving not only the chief adulterants, but the proper method of detection. There has long been need of such a book, and from all appearances this work by Prof. Bruce will acceptably fill it.

Jewelry Scheme Concern Thrown Out of Court.

The retail trade have long been preyed upon by an itinerant scheme of selling jewelry. A salesman from some manufacturer, usually located in the West, calls upon the retailer and arranges to send him a display case of assorted jewelry, not to be paid for except as sold. "Merely as a matter of form," the dealer is asked to sign a number of notes, made payable at various intervals, and invariably he finds these notes coming up for collection, in spite of the verbal agreement that there should be no obligation to pay for the jewelry unless some was sold.

Usually there is little or no defense to the claim, the court ruling that all parts of the agreement should have been put in writing.

A particularly flagrant case of this sort, but in which the dealer won, has just been tried in Jefferson County, Pa., a concern calling itself the "El Dorado Jewelry Co." being the plaintiff, and Jacoby Hopkins, a retail dealer of Knoxdale, Pa., being the defendant.

On August 13, 1904, the plaintiff company, by its agent, F. J. Bunnell, called upon Mr. Hopkins, at his place of business at Knoxdale, Jefferson County, Pa., and endeavored to persuade him to purchase and order from plaintiff the jewelry mentioned in the "two hundred dollar order." Mr. Hopkins informed the plaintiff's agent that he would not purchase said jewelry because he could not sell such jewelry in that community, and that he did not desire to purchase what he could not sell. The agent, in order to get the order, made the following proposition, viz.: That the plaintiff company should forward to defendant the jewelry mentioned in the printed order; that defendant should sell such of it as he could; that plaintiff's agent should call upon him at his place of business three or four times a year, collect the amount of sales, less 33⅓ per cent. commission, exchange such goods as did not prove salable and at the end of the year take away all jewelry then remaining on hand and unsold, or, at Mr. Hopkins' option sell him such goods as might remain at a discount of 33⅓ per cent. off the list price.

Even then the dealer objected to signing the order mentioned, but the agent assured him that the signing of the order was merely a formality, and that the contract would be carried out by plaintiff in accordance with the parol agreement above mentioned, whereupon Mr. Hopkins signed the order.

Mr. Hopkins duly received the jewelry and sold a part of it, but instead of keeping its agreement the jewelry concern demanded that he pay the $200 and sued him when he refused. No part of the agent's verbal agreement was kept.

This, it will be noted, is the typical jewelry scheme.

Mr. Hopkins defended the case on the ground that fraud had been used to induce him to sign the contract. The jewelry concern contended that a written contract could not be altered by a verbal understanding. The court decided the case in favor of the dealer, in language which read in part as follows:—

> The action is founded on a written or printed order signed by the defendant and accepted by the plaintiff, according to the terms of which the price therein named had become due and payable before the suit was brought. The defendant, not denying that he signed the paper, avers that he never entered or intended to enter into the contract therein shown. That he positively refused to buy the plaintiff's goods, but did agree to accept an agency for their sale on the terms and conditions he sets up. That the plaintiff's agent secured his signature to the order by falsely and fraudently representing that it would be received and held merely as a memorandum of goods to be placed on sale in his store and that no attempt would be made to use it to enforce payment in accordance with its terms. In other words, the affidavit sets up that the execution of the alleged written contract was procured by a fraud and that the use now sought to be made of it is in flat violation of the plaintiff's promise to the contrary upon the faith of which the defendant attached his signature to the paper.
> Can there be any doubt then that a party should be heard in defending a written contract when it is established that its execution was procured by false representations and that such use of it was in violation of a promise to the contrary on the faith of which it was signed? The answer to this question is clearly stated by Porter, J., in American Harrow Co. vs. Swoope, 16 Pa., Superior Court, 451, in this language: "When a party is thus inveigled into signing a written contract upon the faith of a contemporaneous agreement, which is violated as soon as it has accomplished its purpose in securing the execution of the paper, that oral agreement may always be shown when the enforcement of the paper is attempted."
> As the authorities supporting the principle thus stated are collated and cited in that case, and as it is practically "on all fours" with the present one, further comment here would be useless.

Question: Frank Garrigues, Moorestown, N. J.—When a customer calls for a 3 or 5-pound kettle of lard, which custom in this part of the country at least has always been considered to mean gross weight, is it lawful now to give him such without that fact being plainly printed on the can? What is the penalty for doing so?

Answer.—There is no requirement that I have been able to find in New Jersey requiring the weight of lard or any other food product to be placed upon the label. I assume that the matter comes under the New Jersey law rather than under the Federal meat inspection act, because small kettles of lard are not usually brought into the State by themselves and are therefore not subjects of interstate commerce. For that reason they are not subject to any Federal law.

If a customer asks for a 5-pound tin of lard and believes herself to be buying 5 pounds net, but as a matter of fact she receives less than 5 pounds net, there is a technical offense committed under the common law, entirely independent of any statute. Naturally, the fact that the custom of the trade meant 5 pounds gross could be pleaded in defense, but it is a question whether any custom could be permitted to excuse the giving of actual short weight.

The only way to be absolutely safe in such a matter is to inform the customer that she is getting only 5 pounds gross. This could be done by a sticker placed prominently upon the package.

Florida tomatoes range generally from $1.50 to $2.50, and the quality is very poor. Fancy fruit brings as high as $3. The receipts are fair in quantity, but poor in quality.

Coupons Not Redeemed.

New Brunswick, N. J.,
Feb. 17, 1908.
Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—On request of a customer in December, 1907, I sent 1,000 coupons like attached to L. Miller & Sons, Adams Express, prepaid. The express company report firm has moved and I am unable to get any answer from the firm, nor does the local agents know anything about them, though selling the tobacco (Level Head) right along. Being a subscriber of your paper, I write to ask if you know of any reason why this firm should repudiate these coupons.

Yours truly,
A GROCER.

The Miller concern seems to have no rating in the mercantile agency books, and the "Grocery World" knows nothing of them. We would suggest writing a trade paper called "Tobacco," New York, N. Y.; they may know. If the firm still exists, they can be compelled to redeem the coupons. If you can find them, have an attorney write them a letter.

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $300,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

WHY AND BECAUSE

Why has the Exton Cracker kept growing in popularity from 1847 to 1908? Because you can induce people to buy some other oyster cracker only once, and because you can induce them to stop using the Exton only once. Why does the Exton cracker lead and the others follow? Because there is no other oyster cracker for the Exton to follow, so it must lead.

Bought Simply. Because She Liked the Glass Package

It's odd what little things make sales sometimes. A grocer told us the other day that the day before a woman had bought a jar of Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa simply because she liked the novelty of the glass package. She didn't ask any questions about the peculiar characteristics of the cocoa; she liked the glass jar and bought.

There is a point in that for grocers who study the public—the useful novelty is usually the seller.

Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa, the only cocoa packed in glass, has a smoother flavor than any other cocoa made. That is because our exclusive process of making takes out certain substances that other manufacturers leave in.

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

40 cents a pound

Packed in ½-lb. jars, 6 and 12-lb. boxes

CROFT & ALLEN CO. PHILADELPHIA Pennsylvania . .

The Extra Profit On Mother's Oats

Here's another reason why Mother's Oats have topnotched the sale of all rolled oats brands sold in the United States.

Above the very good profit which the grocer makes on the straight sale, come the Coupon Profits: we pay the grocer one cent each in cash for all Mother's coupons he redeems from his trade. He redeems them at only three-fourths of a cent in merchandise, or one-half a cent in cash. Thus he makes a tidy little profit on the Coupons themselves. Naturally the more he sells the more he'll make.

No other rolled oats proposition compares with it.

"Particularly Lard"

Package groceries have come to stay, and they have the right to stay—the right of greater cleanliness, of better sanitation, of greater ease of handling.

Particularly lard.

Every can of Armour's "Simon Pure" Leaf Lard bears a seal which is the United States Government guarantee of purity. It goes there under the Government Inspector's own eye and means that every ounce of every tin is all leaf lard.

Selling package goods that never fall below superfine, and that are advertised to your customers at the manufacturer's expense, comes pretty close to getting the cream of the grocery business. Sold in 3s, 5s and 10s.

THE FINEST MATCH MADE

The ideal modern match is the Ohio Blue-Tip Safety Match. While you can strike it on anything, it is a Safety Match because you can strike only the tip.

Far better than other double-tip matches, because it never gets soft, never flares up spontaneously, never drops or flies around.

The finest match made by all odds.

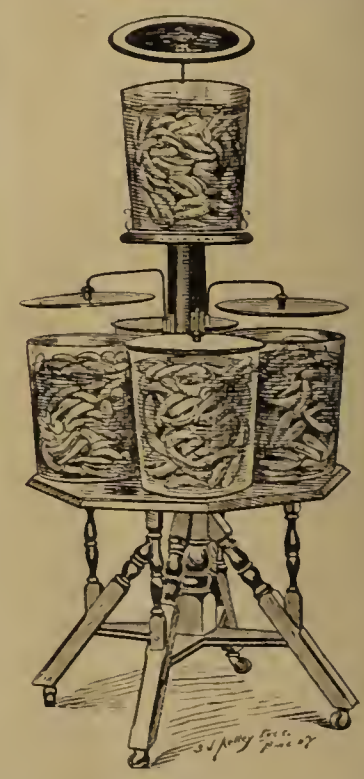
THE CORN WITHOUT HULLS

All The CORN But The Bad Part

Our Winorr Brand of Canned Corn has never failed, once it has been introduced.

One thing, it is a novelty—it gives the dealer something to talk about, and the consumer something new to eat.

Winorr is the tender kernels of the finest corn grown. It makes no difference how fine corn is—the hulls are indigestible and tough.



By a special device we leave them on the cob and can only the meat. It is far and away the most delicious corn packed.

We also pack a full line of finest quality Berries and Vegetables, moist and condensed Mince Meat, Catsup and Salad Dressing.

We are the largest canners of Sauer Kraut in the United States.

A Fixture You Need

Our Five-jar Fixture, one of the useful and ornamental fixtures you can have. Made in both oak and cherry, 3-coat finish. No old style hinges; but the lids lift and spring to right, thus completely exposing the contents.

Occupies no more room than a 4-jar fixture, is a silent salesman, and helps to make a grocer proud of his store. All trimmings nickeled.

Oil From Three Lands

There's a tremendous difference in olive oils. There's French oil, Spanish oil, Italian oil, and many, many grades of each.

The finest oil in the world, bar none, is Italian oil. It has a smooth, delicious richness which no other oil has.

The finest Italian oil is La Toscana, without a doubt. Not because it is pure, because there are dozens of pure oils. Because of its mellow richness, and the incomparable ripe aroma of selected olives.

They Wouldn't Imitate It If It Wasn't So Good

The Ramly Cigarette is the finest 10c. Turkish cigarette ever made. It is so good other manufacturers try to make their goods look like the Ramly, but there the similarity ends.

If you want to get a run on cigarettes, get people to go out of their way to come to to you, put in the Ramly. Remember how it is spelled—R–A–M–L–Y.

Your Profit on ARIOSA

The idea some grocers have that they can't make a good profit on Ariosa Coffee is incorrect.

Ariosa Coffee is the largest package Coffee seller in the world. As with all widely-sold things it is sold closer than things that sell in one quarter the quantity.

Which is better—to sell twenty-five pounds of your own package Coffee a week and make 10 cents a pound profit, or sell 100 pounds of Ariosa and make 5 cents a pound profit?

Not to speak of the Ariosa vouchers that are practically like finding several hundred dollars a year.

Don't forget that we have already created the demand for Ariosa Coffee; there is nothing left for you to do but satisfy it.

What Rennet Must Do to Be Good

Good rennet has gotten to be one of the most staple dessert specialties that a grocer can sell.

If it is good. To be good, it must coagulate milk in a few minutes and it must not spoil. James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet fills these requirements under a double-barreled guarantee. And besides that, it has the flavor—the clean, delicate, penetrating flavor that makes rennet-eating grow into a habit.

As to profit, $3.00 return on a $1.50 investment is good enough, eh?

Be Proud of Your Olive Oil

You may remember the recent tests which the United States Government made into all brands of imported olive oil.

Those tests (Government Bulletin 77, page 55) proved Nicelle Olive Oil to be superior to all the other brands tested. Nicelle Oil is made and bottled in Nice, France. It is the highest type of pure olive oil producible.

Sell olive oil you can be proud of. There are so many brands you can't.

Ham Confidence

There is a vast difference between merely "ham" and Swift's PREMIUM Ham.

The grocer who just keeps "ham," who buys no special brand, and buys from no particular packer, is just as certain to have a small and irregular ham trade as night is certain to follow day.

But the grocer who sells only Swift's PREMIUM ham, which is always the same and always fine, will have a ham trade that amounts to something. His trade won't care to experiment with other grocers; they're getting what they want and they're getting it all the time.

PREMIUM Hams are tender, delicious and—this is important—well advertised.

Old Fashioned Gelatine

The cleanest gelatine in the world now comes to you, Mr. Grocer, packed with Universal Coupons.

For purity of stock and scrupulous cleanliness of manipulation Chalmers' Gelatine has no equal anywhere.

Nothing but the finest calves' stock and the clearest spring water. The result is real rich old-fashioned gelatine, as far removed from the nauseous imitations of it as wheat is removed from chaff.

The average consumer has been fed on imitation gelatine so long that he will turn with immense relief to Chalmers'—if you'll let him.

Two styles—granulated and shredded.

JAMES CHALMERS' SONS, Williamsville, N. Y.

Even More Particular Than You

Print butter's a good deal like the little girl—when it's good it's very good indeed, but when it's bad it's horrid.

It keeps every grocer busy seeing that the butter he gets is such that it's safe to send out.

That is unless he is selling Gurnse, our fancy carton print butter. No grocer need worry that the next consignment of Gurnse won't be as good as the last. Gurnse butter is inspected more than any other print butter we know of. Inspected by inspectors instructed to be more particular even than you could be.

It's perfect, rich, smooth, delicious butter.

"The Pickles and Table Condiments prepared by The Williams Bros. Co., Detroit, Mich., are the very best. For sale by the wholesale trade all over the United States."

THE ONLY WAY WE HAD A CHANCE

We have been endeavoring, through trade paper advertising, to induce you to ask for Murdoch's Laundry and Corn Starch. Many of you have done so, and are selling them regularly to-day.

We hazard the opinion that every grocer who is, is well satisfied that they are the cleanest and the best starches on the market.

They have to be the best, for that is absolutely the only ground on which they could sell. With the market dominated by one concern, what chance would an independent starch have unless it was better than its competitors?

So that there are two reasons why you ought to sell these starches. First—they are independent, Second—they are the best.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES

—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Don't Buy a Cheap Wagon

If you do, you'll remember this advice. A cheap wagon looks nearly as well in the factory as our "J. M.," but oh, what a difference in six months!

The "J. M." wagon is the best delivery wagon made. Only the finest materials go into it, and they're put together right, too.

If we haven't what you want, though we probably have, we'll build it for you.

What One Gallon of Gasoline Will Do

EVERY grocer feels he'd be proud to deliver goods in an automobile, but thinks it would either cost too much or be too much of a nuisance to keep up.

If he will look into the Lindsley Car, he will find both fears unfounded. He will find the first cost little if any more than a good team, the cost of operating far less than that of keeping horses, and the working capacity several times as much.

Think of going thirty miles on one gallon of gasoline! With a load of 1,500 pounds! Write about this.

Sell Your Team and Get a Lindsley

Some of these days horses for delivery are going to be obsolete. They can't stand up for a minute with the right kind of a delivery automobile.

Take the Lindsley Car as an illustration. Costs less than a good team of horses, costs probably not over half as much to keep and will do several times as much hard work for the same money.

The Lindsley Car will carry 1500 pounds thirty miles on one gallon of gasoline!

Why, it would pay you big to sell your team and get a Lindsley. It's a pleasure car, too, if you want it to be.

Fancy Print Butter

Our Gurnse Fancy Print Butter has reached a steady sale, which, sanguine as we were, we hardly expected for it.

It has done it largely because of its delicious quality, but particularly because of its regularly delicious quality.

It never varies, because the rigid and repeated inspection we give it is never looser at one time than at another. Grocers have welcomed the chance for relief from ordinary print butter, no two consignments of which run alike. It will do you good to sell it.

New York State Canned Goods

Have you ever sold New York State peas? Maryland packs some good peas and so do certain other districts, but none equals in delicious, tender succulence the young pea of New York State. Get hold of a good brand, and you'll have a business in it in almost no time.

Olney canned goods are packed right among the growing things; they carry their fresh flavor into the can with them. The peas of this line are incomparable! Such canned goods make a grocer's reputation.

The Olney brand—keep that in mind.

'Neath Sunny Italian Skies

If you have been handling French or Spanish olive oil, you probably do not really know genuine olive oil perfection.

The finest of all olive oil is Italian oil; other oils are just as pure, but none have the smooth, mellow richness of oil made from olives grown 'neath sunny Italian skies.

The finest oil that comes to this country is La Toscana. There is a flavor and a perfume to this oil that connoisseurs say they have never seen equalled.

HOUSEWIVES OF TWO GENERATIONS

Soaps may come and soaps may go, but Babbitt's Best will go on forever.

At least it seems so. It's one of the oldest laundry soaps on the market, and every year has seen more sold than the year before.

Why? Because Babbitt's Best soap is unequalled as a cleaner and housewives of two generations know that.

There is no safer soap to sell and no good soap more profitable.

"Hard, Grubby Work"

Many grocery stores keep their sugar barrels in the cellar, or the back room, and carry bucketfuls to bins in the front part of the store.

Hard, grubby work. Usually done for next to nothing, too, when you figure in the loss from the inevitable overweight.

When you get in a case of Franklin Carton Sugar you unpack it right on the shelves, and there it is. Is there any comparison between the two ways of selling sugar? Especially when you remember that Franklin Carton Sugar comes to you ready-weighed and wrapped, which means that you absolutely cannot rob yourself of profits through overweight.

Our Scales Stand the Test

The new low platform No. 140 DAYTON Scale

The State of Massachusetts recently passed a new Law defining the duties of the Sealer of Weights and Measures, in connection with the computing devices used on computing scales.

Our modern up-to-date computing scales meet every requirement of the law and test out with greater exactness than any other known style or make.

Greater than this, however, is the test of service between merchant and customer. Merchants use them for the protection of profit and the saving of time. Customers trade where they are used because they know they are sure of a square deal.

Moneyweight Scales are an absolute necessity to the economical and successful retailing of meats and groceries. We build them on all the known principles of scale construction adaptable to all kinds of merchandising.

The increased confidence of the merchants of Massachusetts in our computing scales is shown by the enormous increase in sales since the law went into effect. We are strong advocates of laws which will give the greatest protection to both merchant and customer.

For those who are now using old Dayton Scales or computing scales of other make, and wish to bring their equipment up-to-date, we have a very attractive exchange proposition which will be sent on request.

Do not wait for our agent to call on you, but send for him.

DELAY IS EXPENSIVE.

Secretary Smedley Forces Wholesale Grocer to Eat Slanderous Words

Member of William Montgomery & Co., Philadelphia Jobbers, Caught Circulating a Story that Mr. Smedley had Given a Perjured Affidavit to the Natural Food Co., is Compelled, in Signed Statement, to Retract His Statements Entire. The Documents in the Case.

An indication of the lengths to which certain Philadelphia wholesale grocers have gone in their attempt to deprive retail buying exchanges of their right to buy from headquarters is given by the documents which appear below. Several weeks ago it was learned that a systematic effort was being made throughout retail circles by jobbers and jobbers' salesmen to discredit William Smedley, secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association. In many cases the stories told could not be nailed down, but one particularly flagrant and slanderous falsehood was fastened on the author, who was found to be George W. Montgomery, member of the wholesale grocery house of William Montgomery & Co., 999 North Second street, Philadelphia. Montgomery was caught red-handed in the telling of a story that Mr. Smedley had "perjured himself" by giving a false affidavit to the Natural Food Co. Mr. Smedley at once took steps to protect his reputation and in a signed statement which appears below Montgomery ate his words entire.

The case against Montgomery was based upon the story which he told to Oliver Stout, Jr., vice-president of the Frankford Retail Grocers' Association. In brief, the story was that a member of the Philadelphia Association had been induced by a certain wholesale grocery salesman to buy of the association, for one entire month, only Shredded Wheat Biscuit. At the end of the month the association distributed rebates to its members as usual, and the rebate paid to this particular member, because he had purchased only wheat biscuit, was therefore a rebate on wheat biscuit alone. This would have been a violation of the limited price agreement maintained by the Natural Food Co.

According to Montgomery, Mr. Smedley was then asked to take an affidavit that no rebates had been given, and at once complied. This affidavit, charged Montgomery, was a false one, and in making it Mr. Smedley had "perjured himself."

The story was a good one, and Montgomery told it with great effect. Mr. Stout is Mr. Smedley's friend and at once he acquainted him with the facts. The matter was then laid before Elton J. Buckley, Esq., counsel for the association, and Mr. Stout embodied the facts in the following affidavit:—

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA } ss:
COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA }

Oliver Stout, Jr., being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is a retail grocer doing business at No. 4900 Frankford ave., City and County of Philadelphia; that on or about the twelfth day of February, 1908, he was visited by one George Montgomery, whom he is advised is employed by or a member of the wholesale grocery firm of William Montgomery & Co., of the City and County of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania; that the said Montgomery stated to deponent as follows: That a certain retail grocer doing business in the City and County of Philadelphia who is a member of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, had been induced by a certain wholesale grocery salesman to purchase from the said Association during a certain month of the year 1907, only a product known as Shredded Wheat Biscuit, manufactured by the Natural Food Company, of Buffalo, New York; that at the end of the said month the said Association, as was its custom, delivered to the said member a cash rebate representing a dividend upon the purchases of goods made through said Association by its members, for the said month, which said rebate, because the said member had purchased only the said Shredded Wheat Biscuit, represented a rebate or dividend upon it alone; that the payment of this rebate to the said member upon the said Shredded Wheat Biscuit was in violation of a certain contract made between the said Natural Food Company and the said Retail Grocers' Association, whereby the said Association was to maintain a certain fixed selling price upon the said Shredded Wheat Biscuit, without rebate, dividend or reduction whatsoever; that the Natural Food Company, through its Philadelphia agent, Andrew Ross, requested William Smedley, Secretary of the said Association, to execute an affidavit subsequent to the ending of the said month of 1907, that the said Association had in no manner granted to any person any rebate, dividend or reduction upon any sale of Shredded Wheat Biscuit made during the said month of 1907, or at any other time; that the said Smedley falsely executed said affidavit to the effect that the Association had granted no such rebate, dividend or reduction, whereas, as a matter of fact, the Association had granted such rebate to the said member in manner and form as above set forth; that the said Smedley in making such affidavit had perjured himself; that the said member subsequently made a statement to the effect that the said Association had paid to him the said rebate on Shredded Wheat Biscuit, which statement was forwarded to the said Andrew Ross; that the said Natural Food Company, by reason of the said Smedley's perjury then refused to thereafter sell its products direct to the said Retail Grocers' Association. And further deponent saith not.

OLIVER STOUT, JR.

Sworn and subscribed before me this 17th day of February, A. D., 1908.

Commission expires February 2, 1910.

Mr. Smedley then executed an affidavit which made the Montgomery charge seem ridiculous. He swore that not only had the association never given any rebate in any way, shape or form on Shredded Wheat Biscuit, but that nobody had ever asked him to make an affidavit, and that he had never made any. Every statement in the Smedley affidavit was subsequently confirmed by Andrew Ross, local agent of the Natural Food Co. Mr. Smedley's affidavit is as follows:—

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA } ss:
COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA }

William Smedley, being duly sworn according to law, deposeth and saith that he is Secretary of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, that he is completely conversant with all the business affairs of the said Association, particularly such of said business affairs as concerns the purchase and sale of merchandise by said Association; that at no time has the said Association or deponent or any other person acting for or on behalf of said Association granted to any member of said Association or to any other person directly or indirectly, or through any channel or in any manner whatsoever, since the Natural Food Company, manufacturers of Shredded Wheat Biscuit, adopted a rebate plan of selling the said Shredded Wheat Biscuit, any rebate, dividend or deduction on the said Shredded Wheat Biscuit; that neither the said Association nor deponent, nor any other person representing the said Association, has been requested at any time whatever to make an affidavit that such rebate, dividend or deduction, had not been made or concerning in any manner the granting of such rebate, dividend or deduction; that neither the said Association, deponent, or any other person representing the said Association, has at any time taken or made any affidavit concerning the granting of any rebate, dividend or deduction on the said Shredded Wheat Biscuit, in any phase or relation whatsoever; that deponent has read all of the statements said to have been made by one George Montgomery and contained in an affidavit made by Oliver Stout, Jr., on the seventeenth day of February, A. D., 1908, and pronounces the statements said to have been made by said Montgomery to be false in every particular.

WILLIAM SMEDLEY.

Sworn and subscribed before me the 18th day of February, A. D., 1908.

FRANCIS R. CRISPEN,
Notary Public.

Commission expires February 2, 1910.

Copies of these affidavits were at once laid before Montgomery, coupled with a demand for an immediate and complete retraction, under penalty of civil and criminal proceedings. The result was the following letter to Mr. Smedley's counsel, which admits that Montgomery had no foundation for his statements, and that he had simply pushed along idle gossip. He ends with a complete and unequivocal retraction of the whole matter:—

Philadelphia, Feb. 25, 1908.

Elton J. Buckley, Esq.,
730 Drexel Building,
Philadelphia.

Dear Sir:—Your favor of the 22d is received and noted. The affidavit of Oliver Stout, Jr., accuses me of making the following statements:—

First.—That a member of the Philadelphia Association bought from it for one month only Shredded Wheat Biscuit.

Second.—That at the end of that month the Association paid him a rebate on his purchases of Shredded Wheat Biscuit alone.

Third.—That subsequently Mr. Smedley, Secretary, was asked to make oath that no rebate was given.

Fourth.—That he did make oath.

Fifth.—That his oath was false, and that in the making of said oath he perjured himself.

I beg to advise that when I made the above statements, I believed them to be true, based on the statements made to me by others and not from any personal knowledge or evidence.

I realize that under these circumstances these statements should not have been repeated as facts, and that I was entirely wrong in making them. I therefore retract all of the above statements, feeling that in doing so I am endeavoring to right a wrong committed in error of judgment.

Further, that I would not knowingly do or say anything that would injure the character or reputation of Mr. Smedley.

Very truly yours,
GEORGE G. MONTGOMERY.

Bright Prospects for New York Food Show. To be Run by Retailers Themselves. Mr. Callanan's Views on Net Weight Branding. Defending the Oyster. Blacklisting Made Legal. Small News of the Trade.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, February 28, 1908.

Only four of the spaces on the main floor of the Lennox Lyceum are still to be leased for the Pure Food Exposition to be given from March 26th to April 16th by the New York Retail Grocers' Union. While your correspondent was getting this point from Manager L. J. Callanan there were two interruptions by telephone calls from manufacturers, each of whom said that they must have ground floor spaces and that their representatives would call tomorrow to sign contracts.

Mr. Callanan does not believe in crowing until he is sure that everything is done that should be done, but he allowed himself to say that exposition affairs are going on swimmingly. The last time that he managed a show for the association the exhibitors were falling over each other, just before the opening, and begging for space anywhere in the hall, and he admits that indications now are that there will be a repetition of this experience.

The programme which he made out this week shows that if Governor Hughes can come to New York on the night of the opening he will deliver an address. The officers of the New York Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade and other commercial organizations have all been invited to be present at the opening. There will be a number of speeches and a lunch will be tendered to the guests. Music is to be furnished every afternoon and evening during the show by the Seventh Regiment Band. There will be lectures on cooking and other features.

The friction in Boston over food-show matters has been used by Mr. Callanan as an occasion for urging grocers everywhere to conduct their own food shows, instead of delegating the work to professional promoters.

Taking a little time from his work for the Food Show, Mr. Callanan gave his fellow-grocers an example in advertising that has attracted much favorable attention. He used nearly a half page in a Sunday edition of one of the dailies in which to tell people that he is selling quart bottles of olive oil which contain a full quart each, and that his pints and half-pints are also exactly what they purport to be. In bold type he heads his advertisement with this quotation from a report of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, printed officially February 1st: "There is one retail house in this city selling 32-ounce net quarts of olive oil in bottles."

An extract from the report is given in a frame. In this it is said that the "olive oil as sold in bottles is about the worst bottle fraud found." The report then says that if a customer asks for a quart bottle of olive oil in the stores the so-called large bottle is invariably handed out, which contains 31 ounces gross, whereas the weight of a full quart is 32 ounces net.

In his advertisement Mr. Callanan says that the so-called quart bottles of the old style contain only 18 ounces of oil; that the old-fashioned pints contain 9 ounces of oil, while his bottles contain 16 ounces, and in the half-pints also his bottles contain nearly double the quantity of the others. He adds that his prices are very little higher than the prices of the under-weight bottles.

The Vesey street grocer believes in having the measure or weight stated net and exactly as to the quantity of all food, instead of giving the gross weight, including bottles or other receptacles or packages. Members of the wholesale trade were obliged to sit up and take notice of the advertisement, especially as Mr. Callanan is following it up with others, and there are already signs that his example will be followed in the advertising of other grocers.

organized here last week, with Azel F. Merrell as president, and is to uphold the good name of the oyster as food. It is said that the stories about the oyster beds around this city being contaminated with sewerage and typhoid germs had already caused a loss of at least $1,000,000 in trade, and unless something is done that this business would be practically ruined, as far as the beds in the waters about this city go. The association proposes to co-operate with the State authorities, especially the Forest, Fish and Game Commission, in doing everything possible to prove that the charges made against the oyster are unfounded. Every precaution to safeguard the bivalve from disease has been taken, the officers claim. They even claim to have scientific testimony that the oyster, instead of being a probable source of typhoid, is really so constituted as to act as an antiseptic and a preventative of the disease.

The blacklisting of men who do not pay their debts is legal and proper, say the members of the New York Fruit and Produce Trade Association, and in support of this they point to the verdict of the jury in the suit brought against Pope & Co. for $25,000 damages, an action tried last week. The defendants posted one of their customers in 1905 for not paying a bill and the suit followed. The jury decided after a trial of four days in favor of Pope & Co. The financial standing of the firm which had been posted in 1905 as delinquent was recently declared to be satisfactory. The result of the suit is regarded by the members of the association as a vindication of the methods used by its credit department.

James B. Duke, the president of the American Tobacco Co., gave testimony a couple days this week as a witness for the Imperial Tobacco Co., of Great Britain and Ireland. Because of his illness his testimony was taken at his home on Fifth avenue by a referee, there being present counsel for the Government and for the Tobacco Trust in the suit brought against the Trust. Mr. Duke related that he had engaged in the tobacco business at the age of 14 in the firm of W. Duke & Co., which began to make cigarettes in a barn in Durham, N. C. By 1882 the business had grown so that the company was making 3,000,000 cigarettes a year. In 1889 it controlled 40 per cent. of the cigarette business of the country and was spending $800,000 a year for advertising. Then he induced other manufacturers to join their forces with him, and the result was the formation in 1890 of the American Tobacco Co., whose control of the tobacco trade of this and other countries has since been one of the commercial wonders.

National Association Will Work for Bankruptcy Law Amendment.

Secretary Green Says It is Just What Grocers Need. Business Improved Over Few Weeks Ago.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio,
Feb. 27, 1908.

Since issuing the last correspondence, Senator Knute Nelson, of Minnesota, has introduced the much desired amendment to the bill introduced by Hon. Swagar Shirley, of Kentucky, to amend the bankruptcy act.

Mr. Shirley's bill provided that any person owing debts exceeding the amount of $300 shall be entitled to the benefits of this act as a voluntary bankrupt.

Senator Nelson's amendment raises the amount to $500, as we had desired.

After taking this matter up with the National Credit Men's Association, the National Board of Trade, and others who were interested in amending the bankruptcy act, they have consented to accept our amendment and work with us to the point of having the bill become a law.

For several years we have studiously worked to have this brought about. Thousands of persons have taken advantage of this act and declared themselves voluntary bankrupts for the sole purpose of wiping out their indebtedness for the necessaries of life, thereby defrauding the retail dealer out of payment for necessaries extended in times of necessity and adversity.

The officers of the National Association of Retail Grocers respectfully ask the assistance of the retail dealers of the United States to the extent of either taking the matter up in person or by letter with their representatives in Congress.

If this is done there will be no question but that before Congress adjourns this bill will become a law.

The limit of $500 should protect every retailer in the United States. It is a step in the right direction, and while it may be said that some have not been affected in this way, yet there are very few that have not had some of their customers take advantage of this act to defeat the retailer in collecting his account.

From inquiry, careful observation, and coming in contact with business men in different parts of the country, would say, in answer to many inquiries, that the general business is improving over that of a few weeks ago.

At the present time about 50 per cent. of the large industries are working nearly full time, with a very small percentage working one-half time, and a great many people being out of employment entirely.

It is a time when energy and push among the retail merchants will count.

JOHN A. GREEN,
National Secretary.

State Cannot Compel Weight Branding, Says Nebraska Judge.

Judge Cornish, in the District Court at Lincoln, Neb., during the week, instructed the jurors to bring in a verdict of not guilty in the case of the State against Swift & Co. The packing company has been charged with failing to brand the net weight on the packages of ham and bacon. Judge Cornish declared that the police power of the State could not be extended to the labeling of provisions, and he declared the net branding clause of the State pure food law unconstitutional. The State will appeal.

The Boston Retail Grocers' Association are waging a good fight.

Net Weight on the Labels.

They are demanding of their Legislature a law branding all package goods with their net weight. Opposition is developing from wholesale grocers and manufacturers, on the ground of the extra trouble and expense involved.

To sell package goods unbranded of any weight is unquestionably profitable to manufacturers. Had it not been the National Biscuit Co. would not have withdrawn from a western State rather than put the net weight of its packages upon the labels. Some manufacturers sell a package as three pounds which is three pounds gross. This palpable fraud they excuse on the ground that they are following a custom of the trade, and that the consumer understands. Admittedly the practice has become so common as to be almost a custom of the trade, but assuredly the consumer does not understand.

Other manufacturers do not brand their packages with any weight whatever, but use packages that look to hold about a pound, though really holding some ounces less. These manufacturers know perfectly well that buyers of such packages believe they are getting pounds or half-pounds, as the case may be. While technically clear of blame, they are nevertheless morally guilty of perpetrating a fraud upon the community.

It is an unanswerable proposition that the buyer of a package product is entitled to know, in advance of purchasing, what he is getting. And unless manufacturers realize that they have benefited through fraud and are unwilling for that reason to relinquish it, the "Grocery World" cannot see that there can be any reason for not telling them.

Foolishness Exposed.

The back-down of the Federal Food and Drug Board on the question of an original package shows what gross blundering or arbitrary indifference to law has dominated the decisions of that body on certain phases of the Federal food law. As pointed out last week, the Board, or perhaps more correctly, Dr. Wiley, made an original decision as to what constituted an original package, and which was therefore within the Federal law's jurisdiction. This decision was directly in violation of established law. The Board has itself proved this by promulgating an entirely contrary definition within the last few days.

There was no excuse for this at all. The Federal Board has a solicitor; the books were open to him, and he could not have framed that original definition had he examined them. As a matter of fact, however, he probably did examine them, but was likely dominated by Dr. Wiley against his judgment.

The following extract from the decision now made is worthy of note:—

> This definition of original unbroken package was inserted in the regulations for the purpose of facilitating the administration of the act. It was intended to be, or at all events is, a guide to the inspectors who purchase the samples throughout the United States, as to the nature of an original unbroken package. Upon the basis of this regulation the inspectors have collected a large number of samples, but when an examination of some of the cases has been made, with prosecutions in view, it has been found that no action could be taken because the package bought was not an original package, though apparently so upon a reasonable interpretation of the regulation. Furthermore, the Department is advised that the food commissioners of some of the States, guided by a literal interpretation of the regulation, have refrained from enforcement of their laws upon all packages apparently embraced within its terms.

This shows more clearly than anything else the effect of the Board's ignorant or arbitrary action. The entire operation of the food law, it seems, has been seriously embarrassed by this most foolish and groundless attitude.

The Retracted Charge Against Secretary Smedley.

Every one who knows Secretary Smedley, of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, knows him to possess a personal record as stainless as newly fallen snow. During twenty years' service as secretary of the largest retail grocers' association in the country, with opportunities unlimited for graft and "money on the side," no whisper was ever breathed against him until the foul Montgomery story was started on the greased path that speeds every lie told against the character of a hitherto honest man.

Secretary Smedley's friends, and those who do not even know him but believe in fair play, will read with satisfaction the complete retraction by the author of the only charge that has ever been made against Mr. Smedley's integrity. They will probably also be glad to keep in mind the wholesale grocery firm whose partner is responsible. The member of the firm of William Montgomery & Co. who told this lie was compelled to admit that his charges had no ground whatever. Doubtless he will hesitate before he flings any more accusations of felony about the trade.

The incident furnishes a convincing illustration of two things: First, that some men cannot fight fair; and second, that a fight started in utter unfairness is bound to be waged in unfairness.

To Avoid the Tariff.

There is one thing to be said for the protective tariff which one of the great political parties decries as being the greatest possible enemy to the people at large: it certainly has increased to some extent the manufacturing industries of the country. Foreign manufacturers who have coveted the fertile American market, but who when they paid the high tariff found themselves unable to compete with American manufacturers, have located factories in this country.

At the present time a member of the Swiss chocolate firm of Tobler & Co. is in this country looking for a site for a chocolate manufactory. The United States uses a very large quantity of Swiss milk chocolate, or did before the recent advance in price, and were it not for the tariff the consumption would be much greater. Hence the plan to establish a domestic plant.

For a long time Lea & Perrin's Worcestershire sauce has been compounded in this country from ingredients blended in the old country. This to get the benefit of a tariff which is lower on the bulk ingredients than on the bottled sauce. Other instances are at hand. Turkish, Egyptian and Russian cigarettes cost in their own countries very little money. A Russian cigarette which costs in Russia 12 cents for a box of 10 costs when imported into this countfy and after it has paid the tariff about 40 cents for 10. Naturally this has greatly reduced the possible consumption, and in order to get around it at least three of the largest manufacturers of Turkish and Egyptian cigarettes have within the last few months located branch factories in this country.

This, of course, does not answer the argument which the enemies of the tariff make against it—it is simply cited to show that there is at least one way to climb a high tariff wall.

Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co. Circulates Falsehood.

Tells Consumers that Grocers are Refusing to Sell Its Goods Because Substitutes Pay Better Profit.

The Toasted Corn Flake Co., which is seriously feeling the resentment of several hundred Philadelphia retail grocers at being deprived of the right to buy direct, has descended to falsehood in an effort to stem the tide which is flowing away from its goods. In large numbers the following circular has been distributed among Philadelphia consumers:—

> Be sure you get what you ask for—
> KELLOGG'S TOASTED
> CORN FLAKES
> are being boycotted by some certain retail grocers and taken off the shelves and put out of sight. You ask why? the answer, more profit in substitutes. Your grocer can get them for you if you insist, if he refuses telephone or write to our local representative (E. W. Murphy, 401 Mariner and Merchant Building, Main 69 on the Keystone; Lombard 212 on the Bell) giving your name and address and also your grocers' and we will see that you are supplied with Kellogg's.

TOASTED CORN FLAKE CO.
Battle Creek, Michigan.

The statement contained in this circular that grocers are refusing to sell Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes because they can make more profit on substitutes is a falsehood, and was known to be a falsehood when circulated. The Kellogg people know perfectly well that the grocers are fighting them because they have been robbed of a right which belongs to them by every dictate of justice and logic.

When a party to a controversy begins to lie he always shows the weakness of his case and the depth of his extremity.

A Study in Moral Cowardice

This is a study in moral cowardice, referred for such effect as it may have to all men everywhere who believe in disbursing the square deal.

In another column is reported an incident in the local warfare between the organized jobbers and the retail buying exchanges over the latter's right to buy direct from the manufacturer.

One phase of that incident has been saved for more extended treatment here.

One of the concerns which have refused to sell the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association further goods direct is the Natural Food Co., manufacturers of Shredded Wheat Biscuit. This concern is represented in Philadelphia by one Andrew Ross, who has naturally been forced to assume rather a prominent part in the discussion of his employer's action.

The first thing that counsel for Mr. Smedley did after the execution of the latter's affidavit that all of Mr. Montgomery's statements were false, was to go to Mr. Ross and lay both the Stout and Smedley affidavits before him.

He read them carefully, and the following dialogue then ensued:

Mr. Buckley—Are the statements contained in Mr. Smedley's affidavit true, Mr. Ross?

Mr. Ross—Absolutely, so far as I am concerned. I never even suspected the Retail Grocers' Association of giving rebates on Shredded Wheat Biscuit; in fact, I am convinced that they did not. I never asked Mr. Smedley to make any affidavit, and he never made any. Furthermore, so far as my knowledge goes, the Association was not cut off for any such reason.

The truth thus being established Mr. Ross was asked to sign the following typewritten statement:—

To Whom It May Concern:—

I have read the statements alleged to have been made by one George Montgomery and contained in an affidavit made by Oliver Stout, Jr., on February 17, 1908. I have not, as representative of the Natural Food Company, at any time accused the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association of giving rebates on Shredded Wheat Biscuit, and have not at any time requested William Smedley, Secretary, or any other representative of the said Association, to make an affidavit that such rebate had not been given. To the best of my knowledge and belief the Natural Food Company declined to accept further direct orders from the Association for an entirely different reason.

This, it will be noted, follows almost verbatim the language Mr. Ross used in corroborating the Smedley affidavit. Mr. Buckley was therefore greatly surprised when Mr. Ross showed reluctance to sign it. The conversation that ensued is reported in practically the exact words in which it occurred:—

Mr. Ross—I can't sign this until I investigate the thing. I think Mr. Stout is all mixed up in his facts. I'll have to see Mr. Montgomery.

Mr. Buckley—But what effect can your investigation have upon this statement? Even if you found the Stout affidavit to be a tissue of lies, it wouldn't make the statement you are asked to sign any the less true. You have already said these things are true, what possible reason can exist for not signing them?

Mr. Ross—Well, I don't want to get in it.

Mr. Buckley—You are in it, and this will not get you in any further.

Why They Couldn't Get It Again

There is as much difference in bacon as there is in human character.

You've sold bacon that your customers went wild over. They asked for it again, but you couldn't give it to them because you had bought more in the meantime and it wasn't the same.

Sell Star Sliced Bacon and your customers will ask for it again, too, and this time you can give it to them, for Star Bacon never varies.

Always tender, young, delicious.

No waste in package goods.

ARMOUR AND COMPANY

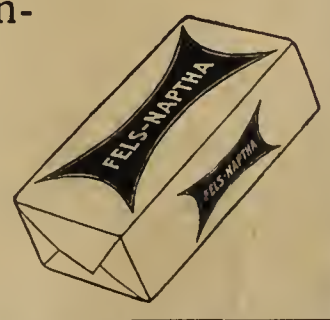
Your Store Should Be Brighter Than Day

Your store ought to be lighter at night than in the day because at night the light is all inside, in daytime it is all outside.

Is it?

A store that at night is only "as light as day" would probably show up rather darkly. Stores that are brilliant and cheery are literally brighter than day.

A few electric lights properly disposed, will make your store inviting and attractive—the lack of them will make a cold and gloomy place that repels everybody.



Take it up with us.

If you know any woman who is so senseless as to spend hours over a steaming washtub, just tell her to quit. She will thank you for the helpful news, that Fels-Naptha soap means a half day's work, needs no hot water and little rubbing.

The woman's interest is your interest!

How can you refuse to do such a simple act of fairness?

And then came out the real reason:—

Mr. Ross—Smedley is fighting us. Why should I do this for him?

Mr. Buckley—I don't ask you to do it for him or for me. Do it for yourself; to satisfy your own conscience and to give Smedley a square deal.

Mr. Ross—I don't see any question of square deal about it.

Mr. Buckley—You don't? Mr. Smedley's integrity has been attacked through the statements made by Mr. Montgomery. He is endeavoring to vindicate himself. You can help him by simply writing the truth. I can't show your verbal statement, but I can show one in writing, and in a matter of this kind five written lines are ten times as strong as the verbal report of a dozen conversations. To let any personal or busines antagonism come into the matter at all is too small to be worthy of you!

Mr. Ross—But what is its purpose?

Mr. Buckley—If you'll pardon me, its purpose is not for you to consider; that's for Mr. Smedley. The only thing you can fairly ask yourself is, is this statement which you are asked to sign true? If it is, and you have already said it was, then I submit that there can be no honest, manly reason for refusing to sign it.

Mr. Ross (very uneasily))I feel as if I should like to investigate the matter first.

Mr. Buckley—Investigate what? There's nothing to investigate so far as you are concerned. The only thing I ask you to sign is a statement that you instantly admitted was true.

Mr. Ross (apologetically)—But the truth often looks harsh without explanation.

Mr. Buckley—This, however, is not susceptible of any explanation. Either it is true or false. You have already said it was true. Where's any room for explanation?

By this time Mr. Ross was laboring visibly in the trough of extreme embarrassment. He is a shrewd man and he knew that he had no logic to support him; that the minute he admitted the truth of the statement he was asked to sign, all decent reason for not signing it disappeared. In short, he realized perfectly that he was doing a mean thing in denying to Mr. Smedley his share of a square deal, and to do him justice he was not comfortable.

His parting statement was "now, remember I don't refuse to sign it; I only say I won't sign it to-day." He was at once asked to name a time when he would say finally yes or no, and he did name the next afternoon, inquiring carefully if Mr. Buckley would be in his office at that time. The time arrived, but not so any message from the valorous Ross.

So that the vindication which has been obtained for Mr. Smedley was secured without any aid from Mr. Ross; in fact it was secured against his opposition so far as he could make opposition.

All of which seems to show that while shredded wheat biscuit may nourish the body, association with it does not necessarily nourish the higher qualities of straightforward manhood.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Pepper.

Pepper is a general term used for various hot, pungent and aromatic pods, berries, fruits or seeds, obtained from plants of the genus Piper.

In the Middle Ages all imported aromatic spices were designated "pepper," and in many cases used as money in the payment of tolls, etc., hence the custom of pepper-corn rentals.

The natural family of these piperaceæ is, however, limited to four plants only, of which Piper nigrum (black pepper), Piper longum, more recently named Chavica Roxburghii (long pepper, although this latter has really no connection with pepper), are the only kinds employed for ordinary dietetic and culinary purposes. The others, Piper cubeba and Artanthe elongata, are chiefly confined to medicines, while C. fastigiatum (cayenne or capsicums), although often called peppers, are really not from pepper plants at all. The nomenclature as to pepper is, in fact, often at fault, and very little is known of the chemistry of pepperworts. On distillation with water, however, they all yield a volatile and colorless oil, very similar to the oils of turpentine, lemon and orange, but with taste and smell of pepper. Black and white, although different in commerce, are both produced from one and the same plant and are just the same growth. The outer skin of the corn being removed by decortication changes the darker into the whiter article.

Want of space forbids any lengthy advertency here to the numerous commercial varieties, but more detailed information regarding the various products passing under the name of pepper will be found under the following headings:—

Black Pepper, White Pepper, Long Pepper, Penang Pepper, Nepaul Pepper, Jamaica Pepper, Capsicums and Chillies, Cardamoms or Elatchee, Cubebs or Bennin Pepper, Grains of Paradise (Guinea Grains) or Malagueta Pepper, Pimento or Allspice.

They are all stimulants of digestion, but in large doses are apt to provoke internal inflammation.

Pickled Limes.

These are mostly imported from Brazil in small kegs of about 7 pounds' weight, and consist of the small-fruited sweet lime.

They are about one-third the size of the common lemon, and of a yellowish-green color when ripe, but in order to preserve the pleasant aroma of the rind they are often preserved while quite green.

Pickling Spice.

Retailers may either buy this ready mixed or prepare it for themselves. The following are a few ordinary mixings:—

1. One and a half pounds mustard seed, 2½ pounds black pepper-corns, 1½ pounds white pepper-corns, 2 pounds cayenne pods, 2½ pounds pimento, 1½ pounds long pepper, 2 pounds Jamaica ginger, ½ pound small mace. Total, 14 pounds.

2. Two and a half pounds mustard seed, 2 pounds cayenne pods, 2½ pounds common black pepper-corns, 1½ pounds white pepper-corns, 1 pound long pepper, 3 pounds pimento, 1½ pounds Jamaica ginger (No. 2). Total, 14 pounds.

3. One and a half pounds cayenne pods, 2¼ pounds black pepper-corns (No. 2), ½ pound white pepper-corns (No. 2), 4 pounds pimento, 1 pound long pepper, 3 pounds mustard seed, 1½ pounds Jamaica ginger, ¼ pound broken mace. Total, 14 pounds.

4. Two pounds cayenne pods, 2½ pounds black pepper-corns, 1 pound white pepper-corns, 1 pound long pepper, 3½ pounds pimento, 2 pounds mustard seed, 1½ pounds Jamaica ginger, ½ pound broken mace.

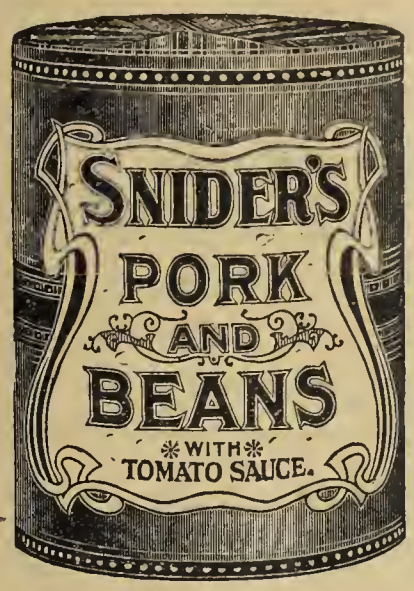
Ceylon Tea.

The astonishing increase in the importations into North America of Ceylon tea has been the marvel of contemporary trade—from 155,000 pounds in 1890 to something over 24,000,000 pounds in 1907.



The official figures show that there have been comparatively trifling variations in the imports of all teas in that period, except for the Spanish war year, when they fell to about 25 per cent. below, and that in which the duty was taken off tea, when they rose to about 11 per cent. above the normal.

Ceylon has won, of course, upon its merits; but not wholly. The enterprising and enlightened methods employed by the planters, in introducing their product into various countries, have had much to do with the winning of the tea drinkers' favor everywhere. For example, not content, as have been the growers of other teas, to let American consumers discover its merits for themselves; and still less to leave its middlemen to essay, unguided and unaided, the marketing of their comparatively unknown product, they early sent a commissioner to this country to watch over the stranger's fortunes, and to study the tastes and needs of consumers in the different sections, that the handlers might proceed along the lines of least resistance, and not waste effort in the attempt to force upon a locale a variety, or blend, suited neither to its climate and water, nor to the habits (which are the result of environment) or palates of its people.

The merchant will naturally prefer to handle the goods that the producers do not seem to lose interest in when they have passed into his hands; and the tea drinker will buy with confidence a tea which he had been taught to believe is offered him as a result of exhaustive knowledge of both his needs and his tastes.

The efficient work of Mr. Walter Courtney, for the past two years the indefatigable commissioner to this country, and the results of that highly successful work, as shown in the figures of increase in American consumption of this tea, are, in themselves, a vindication of the Ceylon planters' business acumen, and of their judgment in the selection of lieutenants for the execution of their strategic plans of campaign. The commissioner has—so to speak—absolutely pervaded the trade, while seeming to find plenty of time to devote to the education, by tongue and pen, of the consumer.

Words AND Their Meaning

Pork and Beans are simply words, they don't mean anything in particular—except a variety of goods packed under this title of an equal variety of quality and character.

Snider's Pork and Beans mean much—this name on a can means that your trade will keep coming to you for more. They are put up with one idea—to be so unusually good that nothing else will take their place. This is the reason that grocers everywhere are not asked for Pork and Beans any more, but Snider's Pork and Beans. You will get a good understanding of the reason if you will serve a can on your own table.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is unchanged throughout. The demand shows some improvement, though is not yet equal to normal. Prices ruling show no change whatever from the list of a week ago.

Coffee.

The Rio and Santos coffee market is very soggy and dull. There have been large sales of options during the week, but they are accounted for by speculative switches from March to later months. They have not been in any sense bona fide sales and so do not evidence any improvement in market conditions. The receipts of Brazil coffee at primal points were some time ago about 400,000 bags behind the receipts up to the same period of the 1906 crop, which aggregated 10,000,000 bags. They have increased, however, until they are now ahead of the 1906 receipts. The spot demand for coffee is moderately good, but is wholly hand-to-mouth. The close financial condition and the fear of the enormous reserve stocks held by the syndicate naturally preclude the carrying of large stocks by ordinary buyers. In spite of the dullness, however, the price of the better grades of Santos is steadily advancing. A mild flat bean or Mocha seed coffee costs 1 cent per pound more than on January 1st, entirely because the finer grades of Santos constitute a large percentage of the 8,000,000 bags which the syndicate has taken off the market. Milds are steady and unchanged. The market is fairly strong, but holders are carrying large stocks. Java and Mocha are steady and unchanged.

Sugar.

The market for refined sugar advanced 10 points early in the week. The only reason seems to be a desire on the part of the refiners to boom the market. By letting buyers in at the old price just before the advance they did succeed in selling a large amount of sugar. Raws are quoted a slight fraction higher, but not sufficient to justify the advance in refined. Outside of the demand to escape the advance, sugar is selling only very moderately.

Syrup and Molasses.

There is no development of any kind to report in this market. Glucose is unchanged for the week and so is compound syrup. The demand for the latter is light. Sugar syrup is in moderate demand at unchanged prices. Molasses is unchanged and as to the higher grades firm. The demand is fair.

Fish.

The demand for mackerel during the week has been comparatively light. The market is strong, however. There is a prospect of further advance in Norway 3s and 4s, on account of scarcity. Irish fish are still very scarce and high. Shore fish are moving out very fairly at unchanged prices. Cod, hake and haddock are unchanged and rather quiet. Salmon is steady and unchanged. Domestic sardines are unchanged and not particularly strong. Imported sardines are strong, scarce and high.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are unchanged and quiet. On spot the market is now about 80 cents delivered, and the feeling seems to be rather weak. Futures are quiet and unchanged. Corn is unchanged and in light demand. Some holders of spot New York State corn are selling at prices which, though considerably below what they some time ago asked, are still a good fair value. Future corn is only wanted in a small way. Peas are quiet, both spot and future. There would be more demand for future peas were it not that many packers are sold up. Apples are unchanged and steady. Some sales of Maine apples are being made at $2.25 for gallons, which is a decline from prices ruling some time ago. Eastern peaches are unchanged and dull. The small Baltimore line is unchanged and quiet. California canned goods from first hands are dull.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are unchanged in price, but in fair demand. Some holders express the opinion that prices may improve a little later. Peaches are selling very fairly at the declined prices. Apricots are scarce and dull. Currants are in good demand at unchanged prices. Raisins are still soft and dull. Apples are unchanged and quiet.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are quoted at $2.40 to $2.45, both on spot and to come forward. The market has been

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for he right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" nd contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried everal, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, robably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of win-ow-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window isplays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new r original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are erhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an verage price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement hould be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If rawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink not pencil).

nterfered with by the coming into he market of imported beans, vhich for pea beans range all the vay from $2.10 to $2.20. Mar-rows average $2.25 on spot, with robably 5 cents less to come for-vard. California limas still rule t 5½ cents spot, with a shade ess to come forward. Dried peas f all grades are unchanged and n good demand.

Butter.

The butter market is steady at a decline of 1 cent from a week ago. The decline is due to the lack of demand from all grades. The consumptive demand for the week has not been as good as during the past month, and the future of the market depends wholly on what the consumptive demand will do. The make of fresh butter is light, as is customary for the season, and the stocks in storage are decreasing very fast. The outlook is for no radical change during the week. If there is any change, however, it will probably be downward.

Eggs.

The egg market has advanced about 3 cents during the week, and later declined about the same amount. The price of eggs is very uncertain at this season, owing to the strong influence which the weather has upon the market. The trade is depending entirely upon the receipts of fresh eggs, which are about normal for the season. A few cold days would probably advance the market 2 to 3 cents per dozen, while a warm season would have a declining effect. The market is not likely to become steady until the middle of March. For the time being it is a supply and demand market in a greater degree than at any other season.

Cheese.

The cheese market is about unchanged from a week ago. The country markets have hardened some, and if anything the general situation is a little firmer, but without change in quotations. If there is any change it will probably be a slight advance. Late-made cheese is becoming scarce and buyers are having to pay more for early-made cheese. Storage stocks are decreasing satisfactorily. Skim cheese is scarce and selling well.

Provisions.

The market for smoked meats has been stationary for the week, and the demand has been very light. Both pure and compound lard have declined ¼ cent per pound, with a light demand reported for both. Barrel pork, dried beef, and canned meats are unchanged and in dull trade.

Produce.

York State potatoes, 88 to 90 cents per bushel; Pennsylvania potatoes, 90 to 95 cents per bushel, demand good; sweet potatoes, primes, $1.25 to $1.35 per basket; culls, 50 to 60 cents, scarce and good demand; Ohio globe onions, 75 to 85 cents per bushel; York State, 70 to 75 cents per bushel; Texas, 80 to 90 cents per bushel crate; Spanish, $1.25 to $1.50 per bushel crate, demand good; carrots, 35 to 40 cents per basket, demand fair to good; yellow turnips, 40 cents per basket, 55 to 60 cents per bushel; white, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; Danish cabbage, $9 to $11 per ton, $2.50 to $3.50 per 100; Savoy, $1 to $1.25 per barrel, demand fair; horseradish, Western, $5 to $5.50 per barrel; domestic, $3 to $4 per barrel, demand fair to good; Pennsylvania celery, 10 to 20 cents per bunch, demand good; parsnips, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; beets, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; watercress, $2 to $3 per barrel, demand fair; parsley, $2.50 to $3 per 100 bunches, demand good; oyster plants, $3.50 to $4 per 100, demand good.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

The month of February certainly sustained its reputation for being the dullest month of the year in the canned goods market here, the stormy, freezing weather of the last three weeks contributing largely to make it so. The continued buying of tomatoes in carload lots for immediate shipment in spite of the weather shows that many jobbers are in need of that article, though the demand for them is not sufficient to cause any improvement in the market prices. As a matter of fact, the offerings continue to be larger than the demand at the present prices, but the packers seem content to wait until the buyers are ready to take them. Were they carrying the quantity that they usually carry at this time in the season, or if the present selling prices were above the cost of production, the situation would be different, doubtless. No one well posted in the underlying conditions of the general merchandise markets can reasonably expect the canned goods market to advance before next spring, unless a decided scarcity in some articles is developed, as in the case of sweet potatoes, which have steadily advanced from $1 per dozen at the first of the year to $1.25 per dozen now. Future tomatoes apparently are not attractive to the buyers at this time, judging by the small demand for them, but the packers are also content to await the demand for them rather than reduce their prices.

An increased demand for cove oysters this week was the result of the freezing weather, which caused a scarcity of the raw stock and the tendency at this time is toward a higher level of prices. Outside of tomatoes and oysters there is no demand for straight carload lots of any other article, the buying orders being usually for small quantities of assorted goods repeated when necessary, the same character of buying as prevailed during the previous month, and the market is in buyers' favor.

At the Cincinnati convention the committees of the National Wholesale Grocers' and National Canners' Associations could not agree upon a uniform contract for the sale of "futures." The jobbers expressed their decided preference for a 100 per cent. delivery contract without any ifs, ands or buts about it, such as is given by the Baltimore canners. All of our contracts for futures call for the full delivery of the quantity sold, and not one of them has ever been the subject or cause of a dispute between the buyer and the seller since the selling of futures was first started.

No. 2.

This week one year ago we reported that 75 per cent. of the future business had been booked for 1907 pack. At this writing it is questionable whether 10 per cent. of the futures of 1908 have been sold, that is, taking for granted that there will be as large a sale of futures as the year previous. Of course, with the future market one year ago 7½ cents less than the spot market at the same time, there may be reason to conclude that the sale of futures will not be so heavy this year. At the same time, while those who trade in futures in the past have had their "experience," nevertheless, notwithstanding all this, there will in all probability be a number of future transactions this year for No. 3 standard tomatoes under packers' label, 1908 packing, at 80 cents, seems to be as the likely settling price, and when the cost of packing is compared with 1907 there is little argument warranting a shading of this figure, consequently the seller and buyer who wishes to trade will, in all probability, accept 80 cents as the meeting ground and the next two weeks will, it is probable, produce a volume of transactions on this basis, which will be more than satisfactory to those interested. It would be wise for those who purchase below this figure to consider well the responsibility of the seller before they attach too much confidence to delivery during packing season, providing the tomato market should at that time do the unexpected thing, as it is accustomed to do, much to the chagrin of those who are on the wrong side of the fence.

Spot corn continues in fairly good request, especially for the shoepeg variety, which is held in exceedingly light supply owing to the light pack of 1907 and the continued popularity of this favored commodity in large consuming centres partial to this particular kind. Southern packed Maine style continues quiet and unchanged from last advices.

Future corn continues to sell, especially for the shoepeg variety and brands of favor and note which buyers are accustomed to handle in their respective markets. A liberal placing of orders of this kind has continued in evidence this week, and some of the largest packers are reporting their position as sold up or nearly so as far as these brands are concerned. But little interest has been shown in future Southern packed Maine style, and both packer and jobber continue to seem at sea as to the future trend of this article.

Spices.

The full list has been in good demand throughout the week. Considerable activity has been noted in China cassia, nutmegs and gingers.

Pepper has been steady and in good demand. Foreign markets are unquestionably firmer on all grades. With light stocks and small arrivals, we look to see spot prices advance, and in our opinion purchases made now will prove to buyers' advantage.

Cloves rather quiet, but unchanged. As stated in a recent letter, it is hard to predict the future of this spice.

Pimento (Allspice).—Good quality is very firm. Some poor grades have been offered at a slightly lower price, but the quality is hardly satisfactory for jobbing.

Cayennes firmer and in better demand, although prices are practically unchanged.

Nutmegs are fairly active at much higher quotations. Grinding goods and small sizes appear scarce.

Cassias.—Canton China rolls are practically out of stock. Market value is therefore firm. Other grades run changed.

Ginger steady. New-crop Jamaica goods have advanced. Foreign markets are much higher than here.

Seeds.—Caraway is active at high price. Poppy, coriander and celery are unchanged during the week.

Sage and sweet herbs unchanged and in fair demand.

Imported Fish Products.

Holland herrings are in very good supply, selling slowly and prices very much in buyers' favor.

Scotch herring dull and prices lower. Large fulls are selling fairly well and stocks have been somewhat reduced.

Irish herrings are in good demand and in short supply.

Iceland fat herrings, which are of exceptionally fine quality this season, are selling very freely, owing to their very low price.

Irish mackerel are scarce and in fair demand.

Norway mackerel are in very much better demand and stocks have been gradually reduced. Prices are firmer and are likely to go higher as Lent approaches.

Imported Oil Sardines.—There is no change in the situation. There are no French sardines in the market, except a few boneless ½s and ¼s; and Portuguese sardines, of which a few shipments have arrived, are in very good demand and selling readily at slightly higher prices.

Sprats.—Unfortunately the catch continues to be a failure, and unless there is a change for the better very soon, we are absolutely sure to have a shortage of sprats this season.

Norway smoked sardines continue in steady and good demand.

Stockfish selling quite freely at unchanged prices.

Olive oil very strong and in good demand.

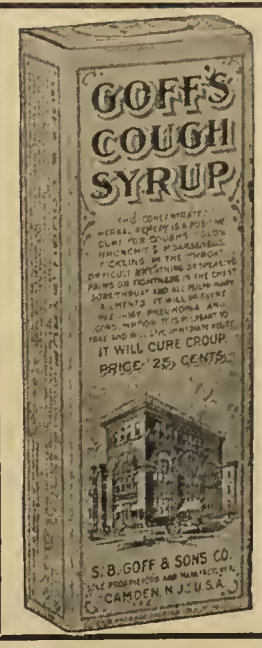
STANWOOD BROS., ISLAND HEIGHTS



I note these correspondents' statement that they have gotten better results out of a circular worded this way than out of any other form they have used. I wish I could know what forms they have used, because this form might be better than any of the others and still not be the best possible form. Those who read this department know pretty well by this time that the form of advertising is not my favorite by any means. For simple price-list advertising, however, nothing can be better, because it shows the regular and the cut price and so makes the reduction clear and attractive. That is probably the reason why Stanwood Brothers have gotten results from this form of advertising—they have made their sales on price and not on the identity or quality of the article. Incidentally, that's a very dangerous thing to do, because it binds a man to always sell at cut prices.

I want to rub that in a little. What Stanwood Brothers ought to think of is not so much the getting of temporary results, though I admit they are highly desirable as far as they go. They ought to think first of making their advertising build up and increase their business permanently. When they put forward the price as their chief attraction, as in this circular, what are they doing? They are teaching their customers to think first of price; to look always for a low price bait. I don't believe this is healthy for any business. If you have never educated your trade to consider anything else but price, all your advertising capital at once disappears the minute you begin to sell at regular values. On the other hand, if you have pushed quality and price, the price at once becomes secondary to quality, and so long as you've got quality you've always got something to talk on. I advise the Stanwoods to think this over; it goes to the very root of success in the advertising business.

I can't but think this advertising is much too laconic to get the best possible results. For example, they advertise "Ketchup, regular 10-cent, 8 cents." Not even the brand is named. Even if nothing more than "White Pine Syrup will cure the most stubborn cough" is used it is something which pushes in the advertisement. "Ketchup 8 cents" is almost worthless as an advertisement. Hardly anybody buys simply "ketchup"; they want a given brand.

Pennsylvania Food Department's Impressions of Breakfast Foods

Chief State Chemist Frear Tells What He Found to Criticize in Examining Nearly One Hundred Samples of Cereals. Finds Many Manufacturers' Claims Exaggerated. Rolled Oats Seem to Stand Best.

The most exhaustive report of Dr. William Frear, chief Pennsylvania State chemist, upon the purity and general character of a large number of breakfast foods examined recently has been printed in pamphlet form by the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department. A copy has been sent to the "Grocery World," and a perusal of the comprehensive work reveals some interesting reflections upon the methods of the largest cereal manufacturers in the country. Dr. Frear sums up his conclusions as follows:—

> The results of this investigation show clearly that the materials used in preparing the cereal breakfast foods are wholesome grains or some of their more valuable products, and that the addition of bran, corn cob, corn stalk, etc., sometimes said to be used as adulterants, is purely imaginary.
> Furthermore, the samples exhibited a good condition of dryness, but many were wormy when received.
> In general, they exhibited no evidence of the use of bleaching agents, except in the case of a few pancake flours.
> The test for tonic materials, such as strychnine, and also for morphine, were negative.
> On the other hand, the net weights contained in the packages were most variable.
> The representations concerning the chemical composition and nutritive value of the preparations were often very highly misleading, and sometimes utterly reckless.
> The cost of these foods was low if they are regarded as confections to please the taste, but very high if they be treated as substitutes for the ordinary domestic cereal products.

According to the report, the State chemist found a large number of fresh cereal samples which had been ravaged by insects. Here is what he says on that point:—

> Freedom from insect invasion and destruction is an important condition for merchantable breakfast food. Many of the samples, when opened for examination, were found to be infested, and many of them exhibited evidences of very extensive destruction. This was true, however, not only of packages that were manifestly shelf-worn, but of many that were fresh in external appearance. In view of the fact that these samples had been shipped in the same case with many other samples and had necessarily been stored for a time in the same lock-closets prior to examination, and also to the well-known fact that the insects causing such destruction are able to pass rapidly from package to package and equally well work their destructive effects, it has seemed fairest not to make a specific report with respect to the particular samples found infested, lest injustice be done to dealers and manufacturers whose goods were sound when sold to the agents.

The State chemist gives rolled oats a rather good send-off in his report. He says:—

> The results from the examination of rolled oats show in brief that the samples do not contain excessive moisture and that they possess nutritive value fully equal to that of average oat kernels. In common with other breakfast foods they were examined to determine whether or not they had been bleached by the use of sulphurous acid. This examination showed no trace of this bleaching agent.
> The weights of the package show a very general departure from the ordinary units of one pound, two pounds, etc., but no instance of false labeling as to package weight was found among the oat products.

Grave charges of exaggerated claims are made against several wheat products:—

> The claims on the labels of some packages of wheat products call for comment: No. 3,687, Pettijohn's Breakfast Food: The label says, "It is particularly adapted for children and persons of sedentary habits * * * Each grain of wheat is freed from the indigestible outer covering." The first statement is doubtless based upon the fact that foods made from entire wheat are more laxative than those prepared from the inner portions of the endosperm. It should not be understood that such preparations as No. 3,787 are medicinal.
> No. 2,657, Cream of Wheat: The label says, "Cream of Wheat * * * contains a very large percentage of gluten." The analysis of other farinas show the lack of foundation for this vague statement.
> No. 2,673, Pillsbury's Best Cereal: This is misbranded, in that the label on the package claims for the preparation a content of 17 per cent. albumen and salts, whereas only 11.43 per cent. of protein and ash is present.
> No. 2,689, Pillsbury's Vitos Wheat Food: Misbranded in that the label claims 16.64 per cent. of proteids and 3.62 per cent. of fat, whereas only 12.69 and 0.98 per cent. respectively were found.
> No. 3,718, Parched Farinose: Side label reads, "Rich in gluten, germ, nitrates, fat and phosphates." The term "nitrates" is doubtless used here in an obsolete sense referring to all nitrogenous compounds. If nitrates were present in large amount, they would be undesirable constituents. The phosphoric acid content was 0.365 per cent., about the same as in many other germ-containing wheat products.

Malta-Vita Pure Food Co.,

Battle Creek, Mich,

No. 3,725, F. S. Wheat Farina: The label claims the presence of "nitrates" like that of No. 3,718. The same comment applies.

No. 3,727, Wheat Farina, is a trifle under the declared weight. In general, the farinas are cracked wheat endosperm, more or less freed from bran coats, free from fine flour, and containing more or less of the germ. Some are cooked or parched, others are sold raw.

The remaining wheat preparations are, with a few exceptions, flaked and cooked, with or without added sauces or flavoring materials. Their analysis show them to be made from whole wheat or some of its products.

The following comments are made for the individual cases whose labels appear to require it:—

No. 2,688, Mapl-Flake: Claims treatment with a blend of cane and maple syrups. The truth of this claim is not readily determined by analysis. Some cane-sugar is present, however introduced.

No. 3,688, Holland Rusk: The label states in large letters, "Made in Holland," under a device representing a Dutch windmill; though in small type, it is made known that Holland, Mich., is meant. The label is misleading and the goods are reported as "misbranded," under Section 6, paragraph 4, of the Act of June 1, 1907. (See also United States Regulation 17, (c), (g), (h) and 19, (b).)

No. 3,706, Dr. Price's Wheat Flake Celery Food: The label says, "One package contains as much food value (nourishment) as three loaves of bread * * * It is a natural food product, as the whole wheat kernel is used * * * It's the only cereal food, when eaten daily, that helps to regulate the bowels * * * All indigestible matter removed."

The flavor of celery is not at all pronounced. Home-made bread contains on the average 35 per cent. of water; the net dry mattter in the package of this wheat flake preparation is 11.72 ounces; the digestibility and nutrient composition of bread is no whit inferior to that of wheat flake preparations; hence, the total weight of bread corresponding to the dry matter in this flake food would not exceed 16 ounces, which if divided between three loaves would, if the label statement were true make each loaf weigh only a trifle over 5 ounces. The usual market loaf sold for 7 cents weighs 18 to 24 ounces, those sold for 5 cents weigh 12 to 15 ounces. The statement "All digestible matter removed," is untrue and misleading. Bran and hairs are present, and the amount of fibre is up to the average for flaked wheat preparations. The statement respecting its being "the only cereal food that helps to regulate the bowels," is likewise untrue and misleading.

No. 3,719 will be discussed in connection with the so-called "malted" foods.

No. 3,735, Hardyfood: The label states, "Hardyfood is brain, nerve and muscle food. It enriches and purifies the blood, assists digestion and builds up the entire system * * * Hardyfood is made from the choicest selected grains and cereals * * * All those portions of the grains and cereals which tend to produce harmful results are removed, and only the nerve, brain, bone, and muscle food retained. It is the only food from which the excess of starch and glucose has been removed, making it especially beneficial for those with impaired digestion. One box of Hardyfood contains more nutrition than five pounds of the best beef."

The fourth sentence of the quotation is very general, but implies that all the bran has been removed. That this is not the case is proven by the microscopic examination, which shows outer bran coat tissue, and, by the chemical analysis which shows as much fibre present as the average flaked wheat product contains. The fifth sentence also is very general, and misleading. Starch is present in abundance, as the iodine reaction shows, and the analytical data indicate that it contains more starch and related bodies than the average flaked wheat preparation. The sixth sentence is equivalent, since the package of this food contained twelve ounces, to a declaration that one pound of Hardyfood contains more nutrition than six and two thirds pounds of the best beef. Medium fat round steak has 92.8 parts of edible substance composed of water, 60.7 per cent; protein, 19 per cent; fat, 12.8 per cent; ash, 1 per cent. It has a fuel value of 895 heat units (calorics) per pound.

Moreover, the meat is more highly digestible than the average flaked wheat preparation. Further comment is probably unnecessary to emphasize the recklessness of the manufacturer in his advertised claims, whether they be judged on the basis of the composition, the digestibility, or the available energy content of the two foods.

No. 3,736, Orange Meat: The label says, "Every particle is absolutely digestible." The percentage of fibre shows that even boiling acid and alkali will not digest all of this food. In fact, both the analysis and the microscopic examination show the presence of bran. The main label is misleading further in that it bears a legend as follows:—

SAME
MADE IN CANADA.

thus implying a foreign origin, an implication which the use of the word in small type does not correct except after careful examination. (See United States Regulation 17, (h).)

No. 3,743, Granose Flakes: Have been deprived of the outer bran coating, but otherwise represent entire wheat. The labels says, "Granose is a perfect diet in cases of inactivity of the bowels * * * and will not irritate the sensitive organs of digestion." Graham flour preparations, containing both bran coats, do irritate some delicate digestive systems. It is not certain that the inner bran coats are actually free from all irritant quality.

No. 3,746, Most: A roasted wheat flour preparation, with some wheat hairs, indicating the use of other than the highest grade flour in the preparation.

As to malted and predigested foods, Dr. Frear has the following to say:—

No. 2,654, Force: The label says, "Prepared by a process of careful malting and heating * * * Force is food with the indigestible parts left out * * * With Force the work of digestion is half done." In my own work, Force was not included among the samples analyzed to determine the water-soluble extract; but McGill (Bulletin No. 84, Inland Revenue Department, Canada) found 29.60 per cent., of which 7.0 per cent. was reducing sugar, which shows that the converting action upon the starch has progressed to an advanced stage. The statement that the indigestible matters have been left out is, however, not true. The sample contains wheat bran particles, being made from the entire wheat. In fact, the results of digestive experiments with Force (Cf. Word, Maine Station, Bulletin 118) show that its organic matter is about as digestible as that of rolled wheat, though its protein is 9 per cent. less digestible; that is, the action of the heat used in cooking these flaked products acts unfavorably upon the protein, while it makes the carbohydrates more soluble in water. What is true of Force, is true also of the other similar preparations tried. It is fair to remember that the adjective "digestible" is used in two senses, one relating to the degree to which a substance can be digested, the other referring to the ease or comfort during digestion.

No. 2,669, Grape-Nuts: The following extracts are taken from the label: "A food for brain and nerve centres * * * In the processes the starch of the grains is largely transformed into grape sugar * * * The human system will absorb a greater amount of nourishment from Grape-Nuts than from a like amount of any other known food * * * Dextrose and grape sugar, made by special treatment of entire wheat and barley * * * Brain workers are driven into dyspepsia, nervous prostration and various diseases because of the lack of the kind of food demanded by nature, from which to rebuild the daily loss occasioned by brain and nervous work. Grape-nuts furnish, in a condensed form, these necessary food elements."

The foregoing analyses show, however, that while Grape-Nuts contain much dextrin, the starch has not been largely converted to grape-sugar. If total energy supplied, or total digestible matter be considered, cane-sugar is superior to Grape-Nuts as their source, and supplies them more cheaply. As for the other claims, it does seem to be established that cane-sugar and probably dextrose quickly renew the vigor of tired muscles; it is not demonstrated that dextrin has like power. Dried fruits are richer in sugar than are Grape-Nuts.

Concerning Grape-Nuts and Force, certain correspondents have urged the suspicion that they contain morphine and strychnine respectively. We tested carefully for these alkaloids and found none. Merrill (Maine Station) tested them for arsenic and likewise failed to discover any by most delicate tests.

No. 3,696, X-Cel-O Malted Wheat Food: The label says, "One pound X-Cel-O equals five pounds animal food." This fiction has been discussed in relation to No. 3,735.

New Brunswick, N. J., February 29, 1908.

THE MODEL CASH GROCERY STORE.

Gentlemen:—In reply to your inquiry of recent date, we enclose a few sample slices of sandwich dried beef, sliced in the highest style of the art, sliced on Johnson's patented "EVERSHARP." These slices, thin as paper, smooth as glass, soft, moist and delicious, were cut the full size of a six-pound knuckle. The whole knuckle was sliced to perfection in six minutes.

I also enclose, in separate wrapper, some very small, very thin slices cut from the meat that covers the knuckle bone. Please notice that the little nub end of gristle and skin remaining unsliced weighs less than a quarter ounce, every particle of edible meat sliced up in thin, bright, salable slices. Of course we never sell any one a quarter pound of these little slices; but every half or quarter pound we weigh up gets alike its equal share of little and broad slices.

Please note the saving in time—as much work done in six minutes as the best circular-knife machines can do in twenty minutes, and then the quality of our work—slices thinner, smoother and more perfect than any other machine can possibly produce. So moist, so soft, so juicy, so broad, so transparently thin they cause enthusiastic comment wherever introduced, resulting in a large increase of very profitable trade.

We sell our machines for forty-six dollars on small monthly instalments, and every machine can be depended on to more than earn its own cost. If you prefer to pay cash we allow you a liberal discount. Hoping to receive your order.

Respectfully yours,

A. W. JOHNSON.

No. 3,704, Malt Wheat Biscuit: The label says, "This unique malt-food alleviated dyspepsia, diabetes and sick headache." This statement respecting the fitness of the food for diabetes is dangerously misleading. That disease requires a dimunition of the dextrose-forming food, and this preparation is as rich in such substance as wheat flour preparations.

No. 3,705, Voight's Cream Flakes: The label says, "It is steam cooked * * * The steaming process malts it * * * In a thoroughly malted preparation there can be no starch to cause indigestion; the heating converts the starch into dextrine, a kind of sugar which is easily digested and therefore agreeable to all stomachs." These statements are misleading in that they misuse the term "malted" and imply that all the starch has been converted into dextrine, etc. In fact, there remains unchanged far more starch than was converted.

No. 3,721, Korn-Krisp: The label says, "Korn-Krisp—malted, predigested, thoroughly cooked * * * One pound contains more real nutrition than two pounds of the best meat * * * Hull has been removed, leaving every particle perfectly digestible * * * Invalids and those with weak stomachs and delicate systems can eat it freely, because being perfectly cooked, and all starch converted into grape sugar (predigested)."

The analysis shows that it has been relatively well dextrinized, but that only a small portion of the starch has been changed to grape sugar. The statement that "all starch has been converted into grape sugar," is recklessly made. No. 2,661, Korn-Kinks, is made from corn almost wholly freed from its bran coats.

No. 3,722, Cero-Fruto: The label says, "Fruit and wheat flakes. Comparative nutritive values: Cero-Fruto, 100 per cent * * * Beef steak (lean), 28 per cent. * * * Bread, 63 per cent." No flakes of any colored fruit were found, and all particles except those of wheat bran, were rich in starch—which is not characteristic of fruits. There is, however, a slight fruity flavor. The comparison of nutritive value requires no discussion after what has been said on this general subject.

No. 3,739, Cero-Nut Flakes: The label says, "Predigested and ready to eat * * * Made from nuts and wheat * * * Being predigested, the starch is thoroughly eliminated, making this food especially valuable to dyspeptics, infants and persons with weak starch digestion."

Wheat tissues are abundant, but none having characters of the oily nuts were found in the flakes. The fat content, too, is very low. The flakes evidently have been dextrined extensively, but not to the destruction of all starch, as the microscope shows.

As to prepared flours, the examination reveals no misbranding with respect to the species of flour used, except in cases which have on the principal face of the package in large type the name buckwheat, though it is explained elsewhere in small type that the articles are mixtures of buckwheat with other flour. It is true the housewife mixes wheat or other flour with buckwheat in preparing pancake batter, but this does not prevent the labels just mentioned from being misleading. They are distinctly in violation of the United States Regulation 17 (h).

The acids of the leavening agents were found to be as represented, usually phosphoric acid. The quantity of baking powder used may be roughly approximated as ten times the total carbonic acid found.

Careful analysis revealed no trace of sulphurous acid, used as a bleaching agent, but several exhibited considerable amounts of nitrous acid, which is used for this purpose.

The sale of flours that have been bleached should not be permitted without a proper declaration of this treatment, for, while it may be said that the effect of the treatment is an improvement in the appearance of the flour, the real object is to make possible the sale as a high grade article of flour known by its color to be an inferior product. It is thus in violation of the spirit of the fourth article of Section 5 of the Act of June 1, 1907, which defines a food as "adulterated" "if it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated or stained in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed." It is not only in violation of the spirit of this article of the act, but also contrary to its letter, if the definition of the verb "stain" be held to be "discolor"; that is, "to alter the natural tint or hue." United States Regulation 12 (e), embodies this view. It says, "The term 'stain' includes any change produced by the addition of any substance to the exterior portions of the food which in any way alters their natural tint."

The justice of this interpretation appears more fully upon a consideration of the claims upon the labels of two of these preparations in question. That of No. 3,686 says, "Presto is composed of perfectly milled, pure and highest quality of blended winter wheat combined with absolutely pure cream of tartar and soda, etc."; that of No. 3,738 says, "Mattie Mitchell—Cornola Flour—Self-rising—Every article having the above trade-mark is guaranteed to be absolutely pure and strictly high grade.

How a Pennsylvania Store Turned the Corner from Credit to Cash

Well-known Lancaster (Pa.) Grocer Tells of an Experience Fourteen Years Ago, When He Changed a Credit Store to Cash Business. Plan Threatened with Failure and Business Fell off Three-fourths. Finally Turned the Corner and Has Been Prosperous Ever Since.

In the "Grocery World" of the 17th of February is published a letter from Mr. A. Russell, of Los Angeles, Cal., that he used to turn his business from a credit to a cash system.

Established 1866.

Important Notice!

To the Patrons of Swope's Store:

On and after Wednesday, August 22d, 1894, all sales and dealings will positively be strictly cash, and no more credit will be given or accounts opened after that date. In strict justice to our good paying credit customers, as well as for our own protection and security, we have adopted this measure. Great reductions on all Goods will naturally follow--as a cash business will enable us to sell at much LOWER PRICES, and be the means of LARGE SAVINGS to our patrons.

Our present prices for best quality of Goods are equalled by few dealers and surpassed by none.

For upwards of 30 years, through booms and panics, we have paid one hundred cents on every dollar's worth of goods we received, this is the highest guarantee that our stock is of the first grade and quality. Jobbers and manufacturers vie with each other to fill our orders with the choicest Goods in the market.

Having a brisk and extended patronage beyond our locality in the City, together with a large trade from the country, is an assurance that our stock is always prime and fresh.

As a "credit business" involves much labor, time and patience, not to mention the errors, disappointments, vexations and loss, we will be able to give more attention and better service under a strictly "CASH SYSTEM" than heretofore.

With many thanks for the lucrative patronage in the past (especially those who have dealt with us so many years) we hope that with the inauguration of the new system we may merit your favor and patronage in the future.

Respectfully yours,

ISAAC SWOPE, Manager.

As a wish is expressed to know how the letter worked, we concluded to send in a copy of one we used fourteen years ago to turn our credit business to a spot cash basis. If our venture and results will be of interest to your readers you are at liberty to publish them.

Will state first that Lancaster has a population of 45,000. We are located three and a half blocks from the business centre, half a block from one of the main streets. Our store would be called a neighborhood store. Our trade through several specialties extended over the greater part of the town. Two-thirds of our trade was cash and one-third credit. The one-third soured the whole batch and our returns were very discouraging.

For twenty-eight years we did a credit business. Many of our customers had been regularly on our books for twenty-five years. In a few instances we had three generations of the same family

The Lever That Moves Mother's Oats

All live grocers push some things more than others. He who has no favorite among his goods is never a man who does much business.

So you will push some one brand of rolled oats more than others. Which will it be?

Here's the nutshell claim of Mothers'Oats to your preference:

Best oats made, therefore will suit consumers better; we never force you to sell at a given price by advertising a price to your customers; you can get 12 cents for Mother's Oats without the least trouble; we pay you a net profit of one-half cent each on all coupons you cash for your customers; our premium plans are more successful with consumers than any others ever devised.

Now ask other brands for their story.

on the books. Fourteen years ago we decided to do a spot cash business or shut up shop.

The inclosed circular we distributed among our customers and posted in our store six weeks before the day set to inaugurate the cash system. This gave all a chance to prepare for the new order of business. What was collectable on the books would be collected. What couldn't might go by the board, but not another cent added to it.

The announcement raised a bigger storm among our trade than we expected. Instead of taking kindly to the change all were more or less offended. Nearly all the prompt and good-paying customers quit dealing with us at once, and many never returned. Only the slow and "paid on account" kind remained until the last credit day.

By the 22d of August, 1894, our business dropped to one-quarter of what it had been before we made our cash announcement. We expected our trade to fall off one-half, as many of our credit people often bought for cash, and we would have been well satisfied with that if all cash.

For weeks the cash venture hung at a dead balance. Then slowly she swung towards cash. In less than six months our cash business increased 25 per cent. over our former credit business, and by the end of our cash year 50 per cent., and is still rising. Now, nearly fourteen years, our business is still spot cash and is all we could desire. Our only regret is that we ever did a credit business.

For several years many customers tried to break our cash rules—took offense and never came back to us again. Our success had been so unqualified that it gave us little concern. New faces appear in our store every day. There is none of that close-easy familiarity that a credit system entails and so fatal to a successful business. Every sale is cleaned up and done with right then and there. No annoying disagreeable aftermath.

Lower prices, which we could well afford under a cash system, and our specialties, together with a little backbone, did the trick.

We used no premiums, coupons or gifts; never solicited one cent's worth of trade.

We keep the store clean and cash—that brings the answer.

If our experience will be of any benefit to any fellow grocer we shall be very glad, for we know the sorrows and troubles of a credit grocer.

Question: A. S. Shull, Martin's Creek, Pa.—I have been a subscriber to the "Grocery World" for many years—never have asked for any give-for-nothing information but now take the liberty to do so. A owes B for labor $10. B owes A a promissory note of $20. B is a doubtful payer. Can A offset his labor bill on the note he holds against B, or must he (it being labor) pay the $10 and take his chances of ever getting the note paid?

Answer.—The answer to this question depends on whether the note is due or not. If both debts are due, one can be set off against the other. There is no indebtedness on a promissory note, however, until the note is due. If A's cash debt to B is due to-day, February 25th, and B's note to A is not due until March 1st, there can be no set-off, because under the law B owes A, at this time, nothing. My advice to this correspondent is to delay the payment of the $10 until the note is due, and then it can be set off against the other debt.

How many of you have taken advantage of the offer made by S. B. Goff & Sons Co., of Camden, N. J.? All that have, appreciate by this time the benefits it contains. Those that have not do not realize exactly what they are missing. To the up-to-date storekeeper 70 per cent. is an attraction, and that is what the firm offers. Remember, Goff's remedies are standards, and are sold by 14,000 grocers.

Like to Eat Husks?

A meal of corn hulls would be like a meal of husks, and yet every brand of corn but Winorr cans the hulls with the kernels. Naturally not as bad as the hulls alone, but it's common sense that it takes away some of the goodness.

A special process we have removes the hulls from the corn we afterward pack under the brand Winorr. The result is a brand of unequalled tenderness, succulence and deliciousness. Try this on your trade.

We also pack a full line of finest quality Berries and Vegetables, moist and condensed Mince Meat, Catsup and Salad Dressing.

What's a Fair Profit?

I wish some of you fellows with a conscience would tell me what's a fair profit.

I confess I can't get at any sort of standard.

A lot of us here in Pennsylvania are afraid these thieves who built the State Capitol are going to get off because about the only thing they've been able to prove on 'em so far is that they took about a thousand per cent. profit.

I asked a lawyer up-State the other day:—

"Is it a crime to take a big profit?"

"Certainly not," was his answer; "who's to say whether it's fair or unfair? There's no standard."

That's exactly what puzzles me—what's fair profit and what's unfair? Is it possible to take such a big profit that it amounts to robbery?

I've discussed the question a whole lot with a whole lot of people, but I can't get any real light on it.

I know how you fellows make up your profits—you figure out your cost and then add on what you think's fair. But you may think 50 per cent.'s fair, while another man in the same business may think 75 per cent.'s fair and another a hundred per cent. Who's wrong? All of you can't be right.

Take strawberries. If you pay 40 cents a quart, you're usually willing to let 'em go for 50. And yet I know a couple of fruit stores in the heart of the city who'll get 80. Are they robbers or are you easy marks?

I know what you're going to say now. You're going to say that it depends on the people you're selling—what's fair for one class wouldn't be fair for another.

But that ain't getting at it. That's only expediency; that don't touch the real question at all.

I know a man in the optical business. He tells me he makes 300 and 400 per cent. profit—pays 75 cents or a dollar for a pair of glasses, and sells 'em for $4 and $5.

"Great hen!" I said to him once, "ain't that pretty close to robbery?"

"Certainly not!" he said, all worked up, "everybody in the business charges that much!"

Which means only that it ain't robbery if more than one does it.

I know a man in the truss business—sells 'em at retail and fits 'em on. He makes about the same—300 or 400 per cent. Sometimes more. Only the other day this man told me he got $10 for a truss that cost him $1.23!

"Holy mackerel!" I said when I heard it, "how can you sleep at night?"

"Trusses always pay a big profit," he said, not stung at all.

Same way with tea in the grocery business. That pays more than almost anything else. Why? Because it always has—that's the only reason I've ever heard. I suppose it may have come down from the old times when tea was new and used very little.

Don't you see the trouble? Nowhere is there anything to go by. Who's to say?

One man got off a novel view of the thing to me the other day.

"A fair profit is all the traffic will stand," he said.

"Which means that picking a man's pocket is honest up to the point where he finds it out?" I asked.

"It's not a parallel case," he said.

"I think it is," I replied. "In my judgment the fairness of a profit has nothing to do with the victim's ability to stand being soaked. No, sir, it rests on something entirely different, but as to what it is, you can search me."

Do any of you fellows know?

Dear Mr. Stroller:—Being a dry goods dealer, I guess I am not supposed to get into your grocery business; anyway your conspiracy exposed article is all right. We have it in this business and we barb wire the manufacturer who tries to make us sell his goods, no matter what the profit. I think they had better back up to the round house and get another start.

The retailer is the actual risk taker, as his patrons are protected by the law even if they are in the false pretence class. On the other hand the retailer has a stock that the jobber or manufacturer can get at. We have another source of competition which you have touched on in one of your former articles. I refer

Corn Syrup Decision

SYRUP LABEL DECISION.

Controversy Over Pure Food Law Question Finally Settled.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—An important question in the administration of the pure food law was settled to-day in a decision made public by Secretaries Wilson, Cortelyou and Straus. It bears upon the controversy regarding the labeling of syrup. The decision follows:

"We have each given careful consideration to the labeling under the pure food law of the thick viscous syrup obtained by the incomplete hydrolysis of the starch of corn and composed essentially of dextrose, maltose and dextrine.

"In our opinion it is lawful to label this syrup as 'corn syrup,' and if to the corn syrup there is added a small percentage of refiners' syrup, a product of the cane, the mixture, in our judgment, is not misbranded if labeled 'corn syrup with cane flavor.'"

It is understood that the decision also has the concurrence of the President and a majority of the pure food and drugs board. Dr. Wiley, chief of the chemistry bureau of the Department of Agriculture, dissented on the ground that the label should be "glucose."

Hominy Almost Out of Market.

Moulding of Corn in Bins Make it Impossible to Manufacture an Adequate Supply. Price Much Above Normal.

The supply of hominy is at present very light and the price considerably above normal. As a matter of fact, the market is almost bare. The cause is the impossibility to get an adequate supply of good corn.

The present price of hominy in a large way is $1.57 to $1.60 per 100 pounds. Throughout the winter the price has been around there, as against a normal price of $1.15 to $1.25.

The weather when the present supply of corn was harvested was very wet, and it has been found impossible to dry the corn out. It has moulded in the bins and thus became unavailable for hominy purposes.

FLOUR.

Flour is lower. Monday we start in selling our best for $6.50 a barrel. That sounds good. Eighty-two cents for an eighth sack. The majority wants the sack, so go ahead and sell flour.

FRESH TOMATOES.

The vegetable buyer has made a nice little deal on fresh Florida tomatoes. You'll see a new display on the stand marked 15 cents a box. Mention them. Fifteen cents! It's a regular summer price. But he bought a big bunch of them, so let us see one or two boxes on every order you take.

We want to crowd the store on off days. The management has a few ideas regarding the method of doing it. We want to know what you personally think, not what you have read or what other concerns do, or what the other fellow says, but what, in your personal experience and personal opinion, would bring men and women and children to our store in remarkable numbers for a limited time.

KEEP IN LINE.

It's important that you should keep in line. In other words, be with us heart and soul. If you're not do one of two things—quit the job or come and talk it over. Half-hearted men are in the way. If you don't believe in us you can never blaze your way ahead in this business

POTATOES.

We have a car of the prettiest rose potatoes that ever filled a bin. Sound as a dollar. Even size. Dandy cookers; without spot or blemish. Let them go for 90 cents a bushel. We want to turn these into money in the next ten days, so let's see what you can do.

GRAPE BARRELS.

We have maybe three hundred grape barrels that we are unable to dispose of to any of the local manufacturers. They make mighty handy ash barrels, and we'll sell them delivered for 10 cents a piece and allow you a commission of 2 cents for every one you sell. We'll advertise them for one day to help you out, and it's up to you to do the rest.

Saintly City, Minn., Commercial Travelers.

The Saintly City Council, No. 50, United Commercial Travelers of America, adopted at their last meeting the following resolutions against parcels post:—

We, the undersigned committee of Saintly City Council, No. 50, United Commercial Travelers of America, a St. Paul organization of over one thousand commercial travelers, city salesmen and jobbers, being a large segment of the commercial life of the Northwest, do hereby voice our unanimous, earnest and most emphatic protest against the passage of the proposed parcels post legislation now being agitated in our National Congress.

And particularly do we protest against the passage of the bills known as H. R. 255-256-257, as introduced by the Hon. Mr. Henry of Connecticut.

Summarizing the bills, their adoption would mean:—

First.—The practical elimination of the country merchant, and the material decrease in the business of all retail merchants;

Second.—By reason of curtailed business the enforced reduction in forces or in salaries of all employes by wholesale houses.

Third.—The building up of catalogue houses upon the business taken away from the concerns your petitioners represent, and which will be transferred to the said catalogue houses by the passage of a parcels post law.

We cannot feel that it is the spirit of our Congress to strike so vital a blow at the commercial interests of our country, and we believe that every honorable effort should be put forth to forestall the passage of any bill that strikes at the very vitals of our commercial system.

We feel that the suggestion of a merchandise delivery system upon rural delivery routes does not fundamentally alter the parcels post proposition as represented in the past two Congresses, and by them adversely considered.

We regard the proposed discrimination of rates in favor of citizens living on these routes as a subterfuge to quiet the opposition of retail merchants and farmers, and we regard such discrimination as obviously class legislation, and being in restraint of trade.

We deny that a parcels post service on a rural delivery route would be of great convenience or benefit to the rural sections of the country, but on the contrary that it is calculated and designed to aid the mail order houses located in a few large cities by the delivery of their catalogues and merchandise largely at government expense; further, that a parcels post would stimulate the growth of mail order business and thus promote the centralizing of wealth in the large cities to the detriment of the country at large.

The present postal law which permits a carrier on the rural route to deliver without the payment of postage, parcels weighing in excess of four pounds is much better calculated for the accommodation of farmers, who may wish to send for small purchases from a neighboring town.

It seems an absurd argument that the weight limit should be increased from four to eleven pounds for parcels in order to accord with countries with whom we have reciprocal post relations when none of these are European countries, to which the great preponderance of our foreign mail is sent.

But this increase in weight limit would lead to a vast increase of cost in the maintenance of domestic mails, both for transportation on railroads and the delivery of the same.

The deficit of ten million dollars annually occasioned by the maintenance of the present system of carrying and delivering packages would surely be quadrupled at a conservative estimate.

The first-class of letter mail is not only self-sustaining, but pays the government a profit. The cost of the delivery of the average letter on which 2 cents is paid is but three-fourths of a cent, and we contend that the greatest good to the greatest number of people would be done by the reduction of letter postage to 1 cent. This would be an improvement which would virtually benefit eighty-five million people, who now pay more than double the cost for the carrying of their letters. Let the cost of the carrying of packages be more equitably adjusted, to be borne proportionately by those who send packages.

The parcels post is virtually a socialistic plan for the government to maintain an inland express and drayage system in competition with private enterprise, and the argument that this competition may result in forcing lower rates from express companies is specious, but it should be remembered that express rates can and should be regulated through the medium of railway commissions.

In conclusion we would call the attention of our representatives in Congress to the universal protest of commercial bodies all over the country voicing the sentiment of retail merchants, traveling salesmen and jobbers, which accord with the spirit of these resolutions.

As against these is the influence of those who are and who have been in the past interested in a decrease of postage and an increase of the weight limit for parcels for the purpose of extending the mail order business, which is blighting the prosperity of the country towns and villages that afford markets for the farmer and enhance the value of his property, besides supplying him with many advantages in the enjoyment of life.

The Boston (Mass.) Retail Grocers' Association has petitioned the Massachusetts Legislature to pass a law providing that all sealed packages, such as barrels, casks, baskets, pails, cans, jars and bottles containing food shall be marked plainly with the net weight or measure of the contents.

The retailers' representatives, in explaining the matter to the Legislative Committee, said they were placed in a position of selling packages which they knew did not contain the amount they were supposed to contain. A notable instance was in the case of lard sold in pails, which were

Hams That Always Sell

There is another sort of ham much less preferred to the absolutely unidentified and unbranded ham, and that is the ham of the packer who gets good raw material to-day and poor to-morrow.

Both of these kill the grocers' trade, because they are so irregular. They please his customers to-day and provoke them to-morrow. No trade can last long under hot and cold applications.

sold as three, five or ten-pound pails, whereas in reality the pail was included in the weight.

Opposition to the bill is coming not only from the representatives of the wholesale grocers, but from the packing house interests and the confectionery manufacturers. The jobbers are opposed to the bill because it would occasion much unnecessary labor in the marking of all packages; that the State should not enter into the practice of passing legislation which would conflict with legislation in other States.

Packers have also appeared before the committee in opposition to the bill. They claim that it would seriously interfere with the packing industry, especially in regard to lard. They claim that lard was put up in pails for the convenience of handling and also because it was the most sanitary manner of getting it into the hands of the consumer. Every consumer, they contend, was aware that he could not receive a net weight of three, five or ten pounds of lard and have the tin can thrown in for nothing. In a three, five or ten-pound pail the amount of lard contained therein would probably be less than half a pound below those weights.

Agricultural Department's Original Package Brief.

In Support of Its Corrected Definition of Original Package the Department Issues Extensive Legal Document.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Feb. 27, 1908.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued, under the title of Food Inspection Decision No. 86, an extensive brief upholding its latest definition as to what constitutes an original package. As stated in the last "Grocery World," this definition is directly contrary to that originally adopted by the department. The brief is simply a rehash of the established decisions and authorities on the subject of an original package, all of which were as available for the department when the first incorrect original package definition was framed as they are now.

We were the first house to pack coffee in one-pound tins, and in that form we pack Sterling coffee, which in all our long experience has proved acceptable to more classes of trade than any other blended coffee we have ever known. A rich, mellow, fragrant coffee, full weight, and with all its strength retained by the air-tight tin.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

A St. Patrick Window.

This is a display of bottled goods, such as pickles, olives, mint sauce, caper sauce, etc. Everything in the window is green.

First cover the floor with green wall paper. Next arrange the shelves in the centre. These are made of halves of boxes (sawed diagonally) of different sizes. These are covered with either green wall paper or crepe tissue paper.

On the top of these shelves is a gilt harp 10 or 12 inches high. This can easily be made of three sticks and some twine for strings.

Next place a row of olives in a semi-circle in the front of the window. From the neck of each bottle run a green ribbon or twine to the harp. On top of each bottle is a tiny frog. At the harp is a large frog. (I borrowed my frogs from a druggist. "Frog in the throat" advertisement.)

On the floor are scattered snakes, clay pipes, Irish potatoes, paper shamrocks and frogs.

The background is made of green lard cans.

No. 2.

The arch in this window is shirred with white cheese cloth. The shamrocks are cut out of cardboard and painted green and gold. In the centre of each is an electric light.

The pyramid of bottled goods in the centre is made by first placing a cheese box lid on the floor, then place a row of bottles around outside of this, then a row on the edge of the lid. Next get a smaller lid that will fit inside of these bottles and place a row of bottles around the edge of it and so on as high as you want to go.

On top of this pyramid place a gilt harp, such as in window No. 1. Back of this cross two Irish flags.

The olives on either side of the arch are built up on panes of glass. The large bottles on top have a bow of white ribbon about the neck.

The background is a strip of 30-inch green wall paper. The white strips with shamrocks on are cut out of crepe tissue paper of shamrock design. The larger shamrocks between the strips are also cut out of the tissue paper and glued on.

CORRESPONDENCE

As to the Sale of Produce in Allegheny, Pa.

Allegheny, Pa., Feb. 20, 1908.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Can you give me any information regarding cities that have and regulate the sale of food commodities by weights and measures?

Do you know of any cities that have special laws regarding short berry boxes and fruit baskets? Any information that you can give me on this subject will be greatly appreciated by me.

The City Councils of Allegheny passed an ordinance which went into effect the 1st of February and is now being enforced by Superintendent Smith, of our Allegheny market, for the inspection of weights and measures. Out of thirty-three measures inspected by him in one day three passed the standard adopted by the United States. In the inspection of the scales he has found a large number of the newest designs do not come up to the standard.

He states that almost every one selling articles coming under liquid measure have been using dry measures, and that all run up as high as one-half of one-half pint short of the standard test. Oyster dealers that have a big trade selling oysters at 25 and 35 cents a quart have been cleaning up a nice margin off of the public.

Another good feature that the city authorities have taken up for the benefit of the retail merchants of this city is, that no foreigner will be given a lease on any stand in the market that cannot produce his naturalization papers.

Yours truly,
Retail Merchants' Assn.,
Jos. C. Kane, Sec'y.

Private Food Importations Must Conform With Law.

Makes No Difference that They Are to be Given Away and Not Sold, the Federal Food Board Rules in Latest Decision.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Feb. 27, 1908.

The Federal Food and Drug Board issued Food Inspection Decision No. 88 during the week as to "Private Importations." The brief text follows:—

PRIVATE IMPORTATIONS.

Recently certain shipments of foods and of drugs have been offered for entry into United States, and an examination has disclosed the fact that they were adulterated or misbranded under the food and drugs act. The shipments were refused entry into the United States, whereupon representations were made to the Department that the materials were for consumption by importers or for free distribution among the friends or employees of the importers, and not for trading purposes, and the Department was requested on this account to allow the entry of the misbranded or adulterated food or drug.

The provisions of the food and drugs act make no distinction between foods and drugs imported for consumption or free distribution by the importer and foods and drugs imported for trading purposes. The law provides that no misbranded or adulterated foods or drugs shall be admitted.

Notice is given that these so-called private importations will be subjected to the same restrictions as ordinary imports.

Well-known Western Canner Presents His Side of Futures Question

Tells Why He Thinks Jobbers Have No Right to 100 Per Cent. Delivery Contract. Says Risk of Poor Crops is Too Great. Inadvertently Presents Invincible Argument Against Selling Future Canned Goods at All.

The "Grocery World" will pardon me if I take exceptions to the editorial published recently on the subject of the canned goods contract presented by the Wholesale Grocers' Association at the Canners' convention in Cincinnati. This editorial was doubtless written without taking into consideration at all the position of the canners on this subject, and for your information I wish to give you the substance of an address before the convention by Mr. Olney, chairman of the committee of canners, with some few facts which may be startling to your readers.

In the matter of guaranteed deliveries Mr. Olney says:—

As a rule, practically all the canning factory products are furnished under contracts made in the Winter and Spring between the packer and the grower, for growing a certain number of acres from seed furnished by the packer at a stipulated price; and such products as are grown from the contracted acreage are to be delivered to the packer in a certain condition at an agreed price. The grower only contracts to deliver what is actually grown from the specified acreage; he cannot afford or agree to do more. The packer is put to the expense of making his sales, which in many instances is quite heavy, and cannot wait until knowing whether or not there is to be a crop, before formulating his plans. He has to arrange for a certain amount of competent and special help; has to make provision for the principal part of his cans, boxes, labels and other supplies. Should he be called upon to respond to damages under a guaranteed delivery clause in a contract for canned products over the maturing of which he has absolutely no control, and which may be entirely impossible for him to furnish (in case of loss by failure of or damage to crop)? What are short deliveries the result of? Is it because the packer has not contracted the acreage and done all that he could to furnish the goods contracted? The following are some of the reasons contributing to disastrous results at times:—

"Seed which does not germinate because of too wet, too dry or too cold weather; or if the seed is not damaged, the growth is often retarded because of these same weather conditions.

"An insect or blight may invest the pea crop over night and ruin it.

"A field of beans, promising one day, may be worthless the next because of rust.

"Cyclone, hail storms and floods are not unknown to canners.

"Late frosts in the Spring and early frosts in the Fall are not uncommon."

Considering all these varying conditions, and where in the vocabulary of reason will there be found anything making the packer responsible for these conditions, and therefore liable for damages?

On the other hand, suppose that after having made arrangements for packing the product of a full crop, he receives one which happens to be followed by a declining market, why should the jobber be privileged to cancel part of his order, when the packer has in good faith gone ahead and put up a pack of goods for the very purpose of meeting his contracts?

Referring to the matter of destructive elements in crops, the writer had the honor of attending a meeting in 1906 at the State University at Urbana, Ill., called by Prof. Forbes, State Entomologist, for the purpose of going over his work in this very matter of crop destruction. There were present at the meeting the officers of the Western Packers' Canned Goods Association, the officers of the Park Associations throughout the State, of the Horticultural and Agricultural Associations, Farmers' Clubs, Market Garden Growers and others. Prof. Forbes read from the report of the department at Washington, a statement to this effect:—

The average yearly losses from the destruction of crops and vegetation in the United States by insect and other pests amounts to more than the amount of money spent in carrying on the entire Civil War. In other words, the money value of the vegetation and crops of the country destroyed in this way is sufficient to carry on two civil wars continually.

These statements were so astounding that they were almost beyond belief. Our country has not yet recovered from the effects of the Civil War in a financial way. We are still paying interest on bonds as a result of that war, and yet the losses to crops

Tell This to Your Customers

Celluloid Starch is the only starch made that requires no cooking. No starch puts such a beautiful finish on fine laundry work. No starch pays grocers such a handsome profit, because a good part of our advertising appropriation is expended for Universal Coupons. You Can't Match It Anywhere

If you want to give your customers the very finest corn ever packed it must be "Ye Country Gentleman." Don't the following reasons convince you that this is true?

1. We grow our own seed at a cost of 13c per lb.
2. We grow every kernel of corn that goes into our cans.
3. Our farms are in the Natural Corn Belt—it doesn't grow as fine anywhere else.
4. We cook our corn by the New Automatic Process during which the cans turn continuously bringing the corn to the heat instead of the heat to the corn. This means that every grain is cooked the same—which isn't the case with the ordinary process because the corn nearest the tin is cooked too much when that in the centre is done.
5. The contents of every can is exactly the same, white, perfect, delightfully flavored. Open a sample, compare it with your best corn and you will see what this means.

Iroquois Canning Company, = = Onarga, Ill.

in one year are sufficient to pay the expenses of two civil wars, according to the statements of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Prof. Forbes also made the statement that in five counties in Central Illinois in the year 1906 more than 160,000 acres of corn were absolutely destroyed by insect pests. Mr. Ira S. Whitmer, of the Bloomington Canning Co., Bloomington, Ill., made the statement before the meeting that their own company at Le Roy, Ill., out of an acreage of 800 acres planted to corn, lost half of it, the entire 400 acres being swept clean of corn, not a spear left.

This is not an exceptional case, but simply illustrates the conditions that are catching the canners one place or another every year.

Under these conditions, can anyone with reason insist on a full delivery contract?

This matter is so thoroughly understood that in some States the State law releases parties to contracts from their obligations in case of what are termed "Acts of God," such as crop failures, destruction by fire, etc. If the wholesale grocers present to the canners a contract asking them to make themselves liable for conditions over which they have no control, they are going beyond the State laws in this very matter.

The jobber, on the other hand, makes his contract with the canner at no risk whatever other than the correctness of his own judgment as to his probable demands. The jobber goes into the market and sells futures to the retailer, and expects to make full deliveries if the goods are packed. He expects to receive full deliveries if the goods are packed. He has nothing at stake, no risks to run. Why should the privilege be given him of cancellation when crops are full and deliveries 100 per cent.?

I believe that if you had fully taken into consideration the canners' side of the question you would have altered your editorial very materially.

L. J. Risser,
Iroquois Canning Co.
Onarga, Ill., Feb. 21, 1908.

Note.—No better argument than this has ever been framed to show the consummate foolishness of selling canned goods before they are packed.—Ed.

AMONG THE TRADE.

John A. Graham was given sixty days' imprisonment and his wife was fined $100 during the week for selling oleomargarine unlawfully. Graham was convicted of the same offense over two years ago. Craven Brothers, who were convicted at the same time, were fined $500 each, and a man named Faulkner was fined the same amount. Graham, however, at that time was let off with a fine of $300.

Packers of lobsters have announced to their agents that the price of the 1908 pack would probably be even higher than in 1907. The price has about doubled in ten years.

Another campaign will probably be begun locally against the Standard Oil Co., on the ground that much of its "headlight" oil is below the legal 110 degree standard. Dr. Charles H. Lawall, State chemist, recently analyzed several samples of the Trust's oil and found that some were as low as 102 degrees. There have been a large number of oil stove explosions of late, and the investigations of these cases will probably be used against the Trust. It is charged that there is no proper inspection at the Philadelphia headquarters.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXXI.—The Waste of Haste.

Haste makes waste of time.

Too many merchants are to-day hurrying through one job and rushing into another without giving a moment's time to considering the best way to do the new task, so the best results can be accomplished with the least labor. It is no uncommon thing to see a man rush into a task in this unprepared manner and after working on it for about a day find out some method by which the same results could have been accomplished in half the time.

When business men are themselves doing these things day after day, what is to be expected of those who work for them and under their direction? Clerks are even more apt to waste their time in this manner, especially if they have taken up a regular routine of duties. Not because they want to put in their time without making anything for the employer, but because they fall easily into ruts. They will continue to carry out the daily programme week after week in the same way, without trying to simplify it in any manner.

Managers should so arrange business duties as to give themselves time to think of the best methods of doing not only the things they expect to do themselves, but also to simplify the work of the office force, the factory force, the sales force, the shipping force, etc.; in fact, in whatever part of the business simplification is needed, and once the manager starts on this kind of work he finds that every part of the business needs it, and every employee, from the office boy up, can be made to produce more results in the same length of time by merely taking time to first figure out the most simple way to accomplish desired results.

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

How to Answer the Salesman

When the jobbers' salesman comes to you this season to get your future canned goods order, ask him about this 100 per cent. delivery.

He will probably tell you that his employer can't give you more than he gets himself, and that on the brands he is offering he has only a pro rata delivery.

Remind him that on Blue Bell and Clover Farm Canned goods—none better in Maryland—both the jobber and you can get a 100 per cent. delivery.

What's the Difference?

The answer—"the bottom is as good as the top." You know what this means in Evaporated Apples. It means that your customers will keep buying that kind, and we know you will keep buying that kind to supply your customers. APELPI on a package of evaporated apples is a positive guarantee that the fruit is the finest that can be had, and its preparation can't be excelled.

PEANUTS—FIVE A BAG

Everywhere you go you hear that cry. Don't you think you should have some of the trade that the peddler has? If you knew that with an you could clear 300 per cent., would you not put one in when you learn that any boy can run it, and that there's nothing to get out of order, and that it will pay for itself in one month's time? We think you will, and we will be pleased to furnish further particulars and prices on request.

How to Answer Their Questions

Put a box of I-V Washing Tablets on your counter. They will be such a novelty that every woman who comes in will ask what they are and what they will do. Tell them this:—

1—They contain no acid of any sort.
2—They wash clothes without rubbing.
3—They make clothes beautifully white;
4—They can be used in hard water;
5—They take stains from table linen without any rubbing whatever.

Any one of these points would sell a package—just see the women's eyes glisten when you name them all.

"Is This What I Made?"

If the cook who invented Baked Beans with tomato sauce were to come back and open up some of the cans labeled Baked Beans he would go gladly back to oblivion.

For "Baked Beans" doesn't always mean baked beans any more. In most cases it means beans boiled or steamed, dampened with a little cheap catsup and packed. The result is an attempted fraud on the palate of him who knows the real thing.

L. & S. Baked Beans are really baked in the good new way. We guarantee that absolutely. Baking makes the bean over. Instead of swelling and mushing it up like steaming or boiling, it leaves it just as firm but mealy and melting.

And our tomato sauce is tomato sauce made by an expert.

WHERE the GLASS JAR COMES IN

The glass jar in which Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa—and that only—is packed offers the entering wedge to a sale, because it is unusual.

No woman ever saw cocoa packed in glass before; the sight is novel; she asks about it, and if you help a little, she buys.

Bought once, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa will always be bought again, for it has a flavor which has never been successfully imitated. Our exclusive making process removes the bad, develops the good, and the result is the smoothest, most delicious drinking cocoa on the market.

What Washing Powder Do You Sell?

Some old and half-forgotten brand, sold only because you always have sold it?

Or Snow Boy Washing Powder, a powder made of pure soap and other cleansing ingredients, quickly cleaning everything water won't hurt; containing none of the skin-eating alkalies that some of the old brands do; carrying beautiful and high-grade premiums to your customers?

There is room in your store for a good washing powder, but be sure that you handle the best.

It Made No Difference to Us

No gelatine sold in this country was less affected by the Federal Food Law than Chalmers'.

Our brands complied with the legal standard even before there was one. How could they help it? They were simply unsophisticated gelatine, made of pure unadulterated calves' stock and spring water. There was nothing to change about them, nothing to alter in any way.

We take a just pride in the fact that while the Federal Food Law caused some manufacturers to completely transform their business, it made no more difference to us than if it had never been passed.

Two styles—granulated and shredded.

They Thought We'd Fail

Lots of people said we'd fail when we started to pack Hoffman House Pickles in tins.

As a matter of fact, we've succeeded better than even we expected. There are special reasons why tin makes a better pickle package than glass. And then Hoffman House Pickles are entirely different from other pickles. They are tenderer, daintier, more likable in every way. Special ways of manufacture account for that.

See what you can do for these.

"Figures Don't Lie"

SUPPOSE somebody paid you for all the eggs broken in your store or while being delivered. Did you ever stop to think how much money it would mean to you?

¶ Do you know that the average breakage of eggs is eight to a case of thirty dozen? Suppose you sell 100 cases a year, that's 800 broken eggs; suppose you only pay 20 cents per dozen for them, that means 66⅔ dozen or $13.35. Suppose we can show you how to save nearly every penny of this sum! Suppose we can show you how to handle eggs in half the time without breakage, would it interest you? We will do so gladly if you will write us, and the information won't cost you anything.

The GREAT Ramly

Is the one spelled R-A-M-L-Y, the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. So good, other cigarettes are made to look like it, so they will sell on the Ramly's reputation.

If you want to give your customers an ideal smoke, sell them the Ramly. You won't have to tell them about it the second time—they'll ask for it.

It's the Cleanest Store in Town

The grocer whose customers say this of his place has accomplished something which will cause those who deal with him to forgive much. They will even pay him higher prices without grumbling just because the cleanliness of his place leads them to believe his goods are worth paying more for.

The grocer's dirtiest job is filling orders for oil and gasoline. He can't turn a faucet on or off, fill a measure and empty it into a receptacle without taking the odor to his counter. With our up-to-date tanks he touches nothing but a clean lever, the receptacle is filled automatically. A clean, sanitary, safe and economical way to handle a dirty job. Our booklet on this subject is an education in itself, would you like to read it?

Have You Said This?

"You couldn't hire me to sell Ariosa Coffee because I can sell my own package coffee!"

But look what the sale of your own package coffee loses for you. It loses the advantage of the advertising we are doing to your customers, all of which helps actively to sell Ariosa. It loses the selling force of the fact that every man, woman and child in your town has heard of Ariosa and knows what it is.

And it loses the vouchers that come to you with Ariosa; vouchers, that if you will work hand in hand with us, will bring you several hundred dollars of merchandise every year gratuitously.

Money Savers

This truck will do more work than two double teams at about half the expense. The delivery wagon shown below will do more work than three teams at a third the expense.

Saving money is making money. You want to make money, don't you?

When you can do your hauling and delivering cheaper and quicker by Rapid Automobiles than you can by horse-drawn vehicles you have two very good reasons for using them. There is another, the Rapid Machines are so handsome they are the most effective kind of street advertisements.

Here You Have It — The Five-Jar Fixture

This fixture is made in both Oak and Cherry; is substantially made, with 3-coat finish. Instead of the old-style hinges it is operated by lifting upon bale and swinging to right, thus completely exposing Jar for use. It fills the want of a larger jar display, occupying no more room than the 4-jar fixture. Besides being a silent salesman, it is an economizer. Top Jar revolves, thus making it convenient for the merchant. All trimmings nickel plated. Write for prices, etc.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

No Friends Among the Wheelwrights

Wheelwrights don't think much of the "J. M." delivery wagon; it doesn't make enough money for them. No wagon pays fewer visits to the repair shop, or makes its visits shorter.

The most celebrated delivery wagon made—the best wagon ever built for the grocery trade. Strong as iron, yet easy-running; finest steel tires, and wheels from second-growth hickory.

If Murdoch's Corn and Laundry Starches were not as good as Trust starches, we shouldn't ask you to buy them simply because they were independent.

We do urge their independence, but only in connection with a most positive claim, that MURDOCH'S starches are better than Trust starches.

And we believe the average grocer, all things being equal, would rather buy goods from an independent than from a Trust.

BACON

AS A BREAKFAST FOOD

There are dozens of breakfast foods on the market but none of them can take the place of Bacon; nothing is so thoroughly satisfying and nothing adds so much zest to one's life as a breakfast, the foundation of which is

Burk's "Butternut Bacon"

This Bacon is selected from corn-fed hogs, specially cured with granulated sugar, mild and of exquisite flavor and taste.

It is put up in narrow strips, strung with white cord, cut absolutely square, making any waste impossible; wrapped in highly glazed and parchment paper and embellished on two sides with an attractive blue and white label. A red seal is attached to the cord, stating the specific merits of this bacon, which is also known to the trade as the "Five B" Bacon, because of its name

Burk's Butternut Boneless Breakfast Bacon

This Bacon was first introduced at the National Export Exposition, held in Philadelphia in 1899. It has had a steadily increasing sale each year, and today is the best known and most used Bacon in Philadelphia.

Burk's Lard

Is guaranteed to be absolutely pure and to contain nothing but what results from the rendering of good, wholesome hog fat and to contain all its original properties, none of which has been extracted.

Many brands of Lard are "pure," but the rich oils have been extracted so that the manufacturers can make a larger profit.

Such Lard is not to be compared with Burk's, because it lacks richness, and while cheaper in price is in reality dearer because a larger quantity must be used to produce the result.

Pennsylvania Wholesale Grocery Salesman's Commissions Cannot be Attached for Debt

Case Brought by Maryland Concern Against Salesman of Thomas Roberts & Co. Ends in Decision that Commissions are Practically Wages and as Such are Exempt from Attachment. But Where Salesman Employs Brokers His Share of Their Brokerage Can be Attached.

A Pennsylvania court has just decided in a case brought before it that the commissions of a wholesale grocery salesman which remain unpaid in the hands of his employer are not subject to attachment for debt.

The case was that of O'Neill & Co. against Alfred K. Beasley, salesman for Thomas Roberts & Co., a Philadelphia wholesale grocery house.

O'Neill & Co. had a claim against Beasley, Roberts & Co. owed Beasley some money for commissions and O'Neill attached it in their hands. In a long and comprehensive opinion the court decides that it is not subject to attachment.

Beasley was first sued in a justice court of Maryland, and judgment was granted against him. The case was then transferred to Pennsylvania and foreign attachment issued. The salesman-defendant drew no salary, but was paid in commissions under a contract dated January 6, 1906, by which he was to cover Maryland and the District of Columbia for Roberts & Co. upon the following terms: Upon all goods where the profits of the house averaged 8 per cent. he was to receive 40 per cent.; where they averaged 7 per cent. he was to be paid 37½ per cent., where they averaged 6 per cent. he was to be paid 30 per cent., and 25 per cent. where they averaged 5 per cent. The agreement also provided that Beasley was to employ brokers if he liked, but if he did, he should pay their brokerage himself.

At the time of the attaching of his commission Beasley had two funds in Roberts & Co's hands. One consisted of the commissions due him for his own personal work, and the other of other moneys representing his share of the commissions due upon goods sold by his brokers. The court decided that the first fund could not be attached, because it was practically wages, and wages were not subject to attachment in Pennsylvania. The second fund, however, could be attached, because it was in no sense wages, being only Beasley's portion for work actually performed by others; in other words, profits and not wages. The attachment was therefore permitted to rest as to 10 per cent. of the fund garnished, that being about the percentage of his business which Beasley said was done through brokers. The claim was for $99.45, and the 10 per cent. attached more than paid it in full.

Charges of Tea Misbranding.

Ceylon Tea Interests Contend that Certain Brands Sold as "Ceylon-India Blends" are Wrongly Labelled Because they Contain Congou. Status of Such Tea Under the Law.

It is understood that the official representatives of the Ceylon Government in this country may soon bring charges of misbranding under the food law against certain of the large foreign packers, notably Lipton & Co. The charge will be based on the alleged fact that certain of the Lipton brands, though sold as Indian and Ceylon blends, really contain a good percentage of Congou tea. This they claim is misrepresenting Ceylon-India tea, as it is putting out a blend under that name which is really not a Ceylon-India tea at all.

There seems to be ample evidence that certain of the Lipton blends do contain Congou tea. In no sense does this make the tea any poorer, in fact, there is some reason for believing that it improves it. Since it costs as much as Ceylon-India, it is not used for adulteration. Nevertheless, the Ceylon people claim that such a mixture is misbranded under the Federal food law, and there can be no question, if it contains Congou, but that it is. They object to it because a person who drinks tea containing Congou will get an impression of Ceylon-India to which Ceylon-India tea containing no Congou will not conform. The user will thus be apt to conclude that the real Ceylon tea is not genuine or is inferior, since it does not conform to the false standard set up.

Short Weight and High Priced Butter Helps Oleo.

So Says Iowa Dairy Commissioner in Reporting Large Increase in Oleo Sales in His State.

Mr. H. R. Wright, Dairy Commissioner of the State of Iowa, expresses the belief, which he backs with figures, that the high prices ruling on butter during the last year have been largely instrumental in increasing the sale of oleomargarine. He makes the following statement:—

> Manufacturers of oleomargarine are more than ever pushing the sale of the uncolored product in the State of Iowa on its merits. While there are still innumerable instances where oleomargarine is sold or furnished to the consumer as butter, it is true that a very large number of retail dealers are attempting to sell oleomargarine for what it is, and in strict compliance with the law. Statistics show considerable increase in the manufacture of oleomargarine for the year ending June 30, 1907.
> The prevailing high price of butter for the last eighteen months has been a great factor in this increase, and the fact must be recognized that when butter retails at from thirty to thirty-five cents a pound the legitimate demand for oleomargarine is necessarily increased. This is particularly evidenced by the increased number of retail dealers' licenses issued in this State.
> The best argument at the command of the dealer in oleomargarine is the presence on the market of butter of poor quality. The next best argument is the presence of too many so-called pound bricks of butter actually weighing an ounce or more short in weight. The dealer in butter who sells a product of poor quality or a short weight package is the greatest enemy that the butter industry has at the present time. His practices besides being dishonest, make possible too often successful competition by the dealer in oleomargarine.

The commissioner also warns against the presence in butter of more than 16 per cent. of water.

Benzoate and Sulphur Questions Apparently Settled.

Board Says One-tenth of One Per Cent. Can be Used and Sulphur in Ordinary Quantities. Believed to Finally Settle Both Problems. Almost No Restrictions at All as to Sulphur.

Although not ostensibly handed down as a final decision, the Federal Food and Drug Board has issued a new ruling on the question of using benzoate of soda and sulphur dioxide in food which everybody believes does actually settle these questions finally. The decision is as follows:—

> The question of the addition to food of minute quantities of benzoate of soda and of sulphur dioxide will be certified immediately by the Secretary of Agriculture to the referee board of consulting scientific experts.
> Pending determination by the referee board of the wholesomeness or unwholesomeness of these substances, their use will be allowed under the following restrictions:—
> Benzoate of soda, in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent. may be added to those foods in which generally heretofore it has been so used. The addition of benzoate of soda shall be plainly stated upon the label of each package of such food.
> "No objection will be made to foods which contain the ordinary quantities of sulphur dioxide, if the fact that such foods have been so prepared is plainly stated upon the label of each package.
> An abnormal quantity of sulphur dioxide placed in food for the purpose of marketing an excessive moisture content, will be regarded as fraudulent adulteration, under the Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, and will be proceeded against accordingly.
> "Food inspection decision, No. 76, issued July 13, 1907, is hereby amended accordingly.

The food authorities have temporized so long with these two questions, particularly that concerning benzoate, that, as stated, the above decision is accepted as evidence that the board is getting out of the matter by shelving the question indefinitely.

The percentage of benzoate now authorized as a preservative is the same as all manufacturers use, viz., one-tenth of 1 per cent. Some surprise is expressed as to the board's liberality toward the use of sulphur in dried fruits and molasses. The thirty-five-one thousandths of 1 per cent authorized by Food Inspection Decision No. 76 is now swept aside, and users of sulphur are now permitted to employ it in "ordinary quantities." This leaves them to be the sole judge, and practically amounts to no restriction at all.

A 3-cent counter is a big feature in a Maine merchant's store. Among the many articles he offers are: 1 dozen pens, a bottle of ink or mucilage, a 60-inch tape measure, a dozen shoe laces, sleeve elastics, toilet soaps, 6 colored pencils, 1 dozen Japanese napkins, child's harmonica and a blank book.

A furniture dealer in a small town took this means to prove to the patrons of a soap club firm that they had lost money by the deal. He found the transaction had cost each family over $14 for the soap and the premium, plus the freight. Taking a sample of the soap he carried it to the best grocer in town and found he sold that soap for $5.50 per gross. He found, too, that he could sell practically the exact counterpart of the premium Morris chair for $6, so that the soap club patrons paid $14 and cartage for what they could have bought in their home town for $11.50. This dealer sent for one of the Morris chairs and displayed it in his show window with an explanation of the entire transaction.

A telephone can be made of decided service in advertising a special sale. Have your most pleasant-voiced clerk call up every woman on the line and tell her that you have just opened up and placed your line on display and would be glad to have her examine it as soon as she can find it convenient to visit your store. Such an act will impress every woman that she ought to call to repay you for your trouble, and will also serve to acquaint your trade with the arrival of your goods.

Food Authorities Run Coffee Fake Down

Begins First Prosecution Under Federal Food Law Against Boston (Mass.) Concern that Said Caffeine was Removed from Its Coffee.

The Federal food authorities have begun an action against a New England coffee concern, which is charged with making false representations regarding the alleged removal of chaff and tannin from their brand. This is the old tannin fake which was originated by the Tabard Inn Food Co. and adopted by four or five concerns in various parts of the country.

The concern which is made defendant in the action now brought is the Clark, Coggins & Johnson Co., of Boston, Mass., and the prosecution is based on a pound of coffee shipped from that city to Washington on May 22, 1907. The brand contained the statement that the contents were detannated coffee which was made healthy "by the removal of bitter tannin bearing cellulose by a special process."

The information declares that the branding on the can was misleading in that a purchaser would be led to believe that caffetannic acid or tannin, which is an ingredient common to coffee, had been removed, when it alleges in fact it was not removed.

Concerning this fake, the "Grocery World" published an article from Dr. Henry Leffmann, of Philadelphia, several months ago, demonstrating beyond all argument that it was chemically impossible to remove caffeine from coffee, for the reason that caffeine is the active principle of coffee, and if it were removed the substance would cease to be coffee.

It is said that several other suits will follow against other defendants on the same charge.

Selfishness and Inconsistency.

The selfishness and inconsistency of the wholesale grocers who are opposing the right of retail buying exchanges to buy direct has already been shown up in divers ways; listen to another bit of proof about it:

The jobbers say their attitude has been taken in all fairness; that all they ask is that the trade be properly divided into manufacturers, jobbers and retailers, and that the jobber be made to buy of the manufacturers and the retailers of the jobbers. A fair classification, and one existent since trade began, they say.

And yet these estimable gentlemen who build their cause on fairness and mouth the word so lovingly, tie themselves absolutely up to one match manufacturer and boycott all the others! "It's good business to do so," they may answer. Of course, and the very minute "business" comes in, principles go out. So it is a matter of business to have the retailers cut off if they can, but in this case it happily happens to be in accord with "principles."

So long as the jobbers continue to say that no retailers' organization has the right to buy from anybody but a jobber, because they are retailers, they must admit if they have the slightest inkling of what consistency means, that no jobber has the right to manufacture or pack anything, because that work belongs to the department above him.

No such purely artificial subdivision of the trade has ever lived or ever could live, for it would prevent men from getting what their power entitles them to have. Nobody will stand that very long.

The Benzoate Decision.

The decision at last made by the Federal Food and Drug Board giving the use of benzoate of soda a legal status as a preservative, if not used in excess of one-tenth of 1 per cent., confirms another opinion which the "Grocery World" has again and again expressed since the question first arose. Sulphur dioxide used for bleaching molasses and dried fruits is also permitted to be used "in ordinary quantities." This gives even a wider latitude than in the use of benzoate, for it establishes the user as the judge, with almost infinite discretion.

Thus are Dr. Wiley's cumbrous salt and steam plant theories brushed aside again.

The "Grocery World" has persistently expressed the opinion that the food authorities would not, and legally could not, forbid the use of these substances in minute quantities, for the reason that they could not be shown to render food injurious to health. The writer has discussed this phase of the food law with many chemists; he has not found one who contended otherwise. And for this reason and this reason alone, it can be depended on, the present decision is made. Not to do the trade a favor, not to grant any concession, but to do that for which there was no legal alternative.

For the present, Dr. Wiley's sun seems to be in the descendant.

The Defense of Scrapple.

The "National Tribune" is so pettish over the fact that its ignorance of a great National dish, scrapple, has been exposed that it cannot let the discussion drop. Here is what it says in its last issue:—

> The editor of the "Grocery World" has the illogicalness of a woman or a very young man. If this scrapple habit has been as extensive and pervading as he represents it must have been formed at least as far back as war times, and there would have been some manifestation of it then. If it was so delicious as he represents, the Pennsylvania boys would certainly have had some of it sent them as a pleasing variant of our steady diet of hardtack and ventral parts of the hog. Were it not from the fact that a manufacturer has built up a great trade with Pennsylvanians who left the State years ago we would assume that scrapple was like Quaker Oats, Force and other dyspepsia-creating breakfast foods, the demand for which has been built up by cunning advertisers, whose greed for gold makes them reckless as to the awful result of making this a land ridden by dyspepsia and cursed by biliousness.

Of course, the attack on breakfast foods is nonsensical, for whatever may be said about cereals they could never create dyspepsia.

Here we have one of the most illuminating revelations of what comes from not eating scrapple. The editor of the "National Tribune is a hopeless antique, still mooning along in war times, loudly crying that because he didn't see any scrapple in the 60s it couldn't exist now! There are no such points of view among scrapple eaters.

Why?

Here is a dispatch from Pittsburg, Pa., that is worthy of note:—

> Pittsburg, Feb. 28.—It's dangerous to hug the butcher's boy in the presence of a third party. Miram Casche, aged 14 years, was before Judge Ford, in Juvenile Court this afternoon, charged with taking wearing apparel from a house where she was employed, which did not belong to her. Judge Ford asked Miram what she had to say for herself.
> "I'm afraid to say anything," she declared. "You see it's this way, Judge. The butcher's boy is a fine-looking young fellow, and every day when he'd come to our house the missus would take him in and hug and kiss him. One day I got mad at the missus and told her husband about it. The missus was so mad that she declared she would have me before you within a week. Well, I'm here, Judge."
> Judge Ford questioned the girl at length, and found to his satisfaction that she was telling the truth. The woman who had complained against Miram failed to put in an appearance and testify, and the Court dismissed her.

And yet all grocers and meat dealers agree that the supply of clerks by no means equals the demand. How odd.

Oleo Reforms.

The Western oleo interests have at last unearthed a butter trust, and are setting it up to knock it down in their oleo advertisements. Here is a sample taken from a St. Louis paper:—

> It is a strange coincident that six months ago one could count on one hand the grocers who had licenses to sell oleomargarine, yet to-day, there are over a hundred retail grocers in St. Louis and a good number outside of the city who are not only selling it but making good money.
> The peculiar part of it, too, is that some of the most prominent grocers of the West End, men who sell only the best grade of groceries and who urge the sale of profitable products are now handling
> BLANTON CREAMO BUTTERINE.
> They would not put it in stock if it was not a meritorious article and did not pay a big profit.
> We are taking out seven to ten licenses a day for retail grocers of St. Louis, which shows that the retailers are waking up and intend no longer to be servants for the butter trust.
> The grocer who thinks for himself is the one who is selling Blanton Creamo Buttering and it is surprising to note the number who are getting wise to the fact that selling butter means no profit while selling Blanton Creamo Butterine means a good profit.
> Shall we send a notary to your store to take your acknowledgment without any expense?

Nobody could possibly object to oleomargarine so long as it comes forth in its true colors like this. Of course, that reference to the butter trust is an advertising fake, but the idea of advertising butterine as butterine is honest and shows a great change from old methods.

The oleo industry is not reformed, however; there are still about as many thieves and liars in it as ever.

Dr. Wiley and the Trade Journals.

In the course of an address delivered before the Wholesale Grocers' Association on Thursday evening last, Dr. H. W. Wiley, of Washington, D. C., who was present as a guest, is credited by the Philadelphia "Press" with the following language:—

> The tirade that trade journals have been making against the National and State officials and their efforts to improve foodstuffs should be stopped. It does not cause them to lose sleep and only hurts the grocers, wholesale and retail, because it generates a feeling of unrest and suspicion and people do not buy as freely as they might. The opinions of experts have been printed in the trade papers, but as I said before, you know what I think of experts.

The "Grocery World" does not know whether Dr. Wiley included this journal in his reference to critical trade journals, but it assumes that he did, since no grocery trade journal has critcised the Wiley attitudes more than the "Grocery World." There is really only one thing to say in answer, and that is that every one of the five or six reversals which the three secretaries have recently made of Dr. Wiley's policies has been in exact conformity with opinions expressed by the "Grocery World."

That being true, and it is absolutely true, the "Grocery World's" criticisms not only become legitimate, but they become the expression of the official truth. It is Dr. Wiley who has created the unrest; not the trade journals.

AMONG THE TRADE.

The Postum Cereal Co. has transferred its Philadelphia account from H. H. Stoop to Charles C. Miller & Co.

A controversy between two of the largest condensed milk packers has reduced the price of several brands of condensed milk in the local market. There is no market decline, however, milk being very scarce and some packers being almost out of the market.

Rolled oats in bulk advanced 15 cents per barrel during the week. This makes the present large way price, barrels, $6.

Soap Powder Season is Here.

Start the Spring season with a full line of Chas. W. Young & Co's soaps and soap powders. This firm's soap powder is the best powder on the market; it is absolutely pure, white and will not harm either the hands or clothes. The box fronts and wrappers are redeemed for gifts.

The Merchant Who Starts Crooked.

Two young men have just started in the wholesale syrup business at 12 Vine street under auspices which may not bring them the success they might otherwise deserve.

There is much in starting right, I think.

These young men were up to to the time of starting their own business, employees of the Central Refinery, 248 North Delaware avenue, Philadelphia, one being the shipping clerk and the other salesman. Their trade name is the "Philadelphia Refinery," and their location immediately around the corner from their old employers'.

So far, so good.

The partner in the new concern who was the Central's shipping clerk naturally had at his command a list of all the Central Refining Co's customers. As soon as the new concern started in business, these customers began to receive postals like the following:—

> Dear Sirs:—We quote table syrup flavored as Apollo Brand at 28 cents. If in the market would be pleased to hear from you.
>
> Yours respectfully,
> PHILADELPHIA REFINERY.

"Apollo" is a brand long used by the Central Refinery Co. It sells at somewhat more than 28 cents.

Now, I have no direct evidence at all that this shipping clerk secretly copied the lists of his employers' customers and is now using them to dishonorably work up business for himself. Naturally, the fact that he had access to them, that the persons on that list are now receiving his postals and that the postals name a brand which, as shipping clerk for the Central Refinery, he knew the addressee of the postal had been getting, are significant. I am entitled to draw a conclusion from these facts if I like.

But I hope for the sake of these young men themselves that they are not guilty of such a thing as this. Nobody who begins business on stolen capital can ever thoroughly succeed. Providence couldn't afford to put such a premium on fraud.

There have been many other cases like this looks to be. I have personally known of several where an employee actually filled a pile of note books with the secret details of his employer's business — stolen details. After he had the thing pat he resigned and began on his own account on the information he had filched.

Call such a man a thief and he would probably resent it in the sincerest indignation. Yet he is a thief, and a mean thief at that.

There is no excuse for the crooked merchant, naturally, and yet there is possibly a symptom of extenuation for him who starts straight, but who is later harassed by competition into departing from the straight line.

But there is neither excuse nor extenuation for the business man who starts crooked. He has made a deliberate choice. Very likely he will be crooked all his life.

The New York Letter

Treasury Department at Odds with Federal Food Board. Arbitration Upheld in Grocery Differences. Firms Booked for Food Show. Lenten Grocery Prospects. Brooklyn Retailers Declare for Quantity Basis of Buying. Small News of the New York Trade.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, March 6, 1908.

Much interest has been awakened, especially among wholesale grocers and importers, by an order received here this week releasing about 200 consignments of various food products that had been held at the Customs House on the orders of the Pure Food Bureau of the Department of Agriculture. The order of release came from the Treasury Department at Washington and this has led to the report that after this the Food Bureau's authority in these matters will not be so great as heretofore. Until this order came, the customs officials were guided entirely by the directions received from the Food Bureau as to holding or releasing shipments of food, about which questions were raised under the Food and Drug Law.

The report is that the Treasury Department will no longer extend this degree of courtesy to the other department and that when there is no question as to the quality of the food, then the customs officers may decide as to holding consignments.

In the 200 or so instances in which releases were ordered, the questions were chiefly as to whether or not the labels conformed to the provisions of the law. Quite commonly, it is said, the variation from the law was technical and not likely to lead to deception.

Another question was as to bottles of olive oil and wines which were labeled quarts and pints, although the quantity was actually less than those standards.

In all the cases the importers were willing to relabel the imports in any manner that would be agreeable to the officials, but the importers objected to reshipping the food back to Europe to get new labels. The Food Bureau has been ordering, as a rule, the return of such food to the European shippers. The reason given is that otherwise there is a premium on incorrect and deceptive labels, since shippers are willing to assume the risk of detection, if the only penalty is the placing of correct labels on the goods in this country. As only a portion of the cans or bottles or other packages can be examined, it is argued, those shippers who are inclined to evade the law could often get a large part of their shipments through the lines without detection, and as to the rest, the placing of new labels would be an easy task.

The return of the imports was, therefore, looked upon as a real penalty, but the present order of the Treasury Department makes a change in this policy. Collector Fowler says that the order is specific as to certain shipments and is not a general order. Yet some of the wholesalers think that it will be followed by similar orders in other cases and that as a result, shipments and deliveries will be facilitated and much vexatious delays of the past will be eliminated.

As nobody, not even any of the importers who have been asking for a more lenient administration of the law, openly favors anything in the way of actual deception of the public, the question is as to what is likely to deceive the public. If the officials are of different opinions as to what should be done, it may also be said that the men in the trade are also divided in opinion. Some say that the most stringent regulations should be enforced so that loose methods may not again creep into the food business.

While the importers say that the question as to the quantity of oil, wine or liquor in bottles is absurd, because everybody knows that full quarts or pints are not intended by the use of such words, others feel differently. Some retail grocers are making a feature of selling quart and pint bottles that have the full quantity and making plain this distinction to customers, who otherwise might not think about it.

Arbitration as a method of settling trade differences was sustained by the special term of the Supreme Court in a decision handed down this week in favor of William Hills, Jr., the importer of this city, against the Diehm-Fansler Grocery Co., East St. Louis. The controversy was over a transaction in raisins and dates sold to the grocers last August. It was claimed by the grocers that some of the stock was not up to samples and that Mr. Hills failed to keep his agreement, because the dates were placed in a warehouse, but not in cold storage. The issue was first submitted to arbitrators in accordance with the rules of the Dried Fruit Association of New York, and the decision was against the grocers on both the points which they raised. The East St. Louis company then tried to prevent the decision of the arbitrators from being confirmed by the court, but this has now been done. It is possible that there will an appeal.

Some of the retailers have noted lately that the jobbers are getting more insistent in getting ten-day payments. This is said to be not altogether due to the financial conditions. It is complained that grocers who are members of buying exchanges are prompt to meet the bills of the exchange, but take their time about paying the jobber. So it is suspected that the jobber is trying to even things up with the members of the exchange, although he may be as liberal as ever with those who give him their entire trade. Retailers think that this policy will not tend to draw any of their num-

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXXII.—Plans Without Executors.

The man who can plan, but not execute, needs a partner.

Many men have the ability to plan things so they can be carried through to success, but cannot themselves follow out the plans and make the right kind of an ending. Such men sometimes class themselves as failures, when in reality they should make a great success if they could start out by first finding a partner who had plenty of executive ability. The two are then in a position to work to advantage, one plan and the other execute, each carrying on his own part of the business at hand, and there is no conflict if each knows his limitations.

There are plenty of men who have their abilities limited in certain directions, and the first task is for them to discover their own limitations. After this is once accomplished, the next step is for each to find the man who has the qualities lacking in his own makeup, and be sure that that man has also found out his own limitations, for there is no more dangerous partner than he who has limitations of ability and does not realize it.

Most men are better adapted to the management of some particular part of a business than to the entire management, and such men would make their greatest success in a business which was large enough, so their entire time and attention could be given to the part they fitted best. Circumstances often prevent men from fitting in the right notch in their own business, such as lack of capital, inability to find other men to fit in the other notches, etc., and in such cases they would often prove much more of a success to themselves if they took the right kind of a position with another house than to try a business of their own. With the opening of Lent, the retail grocers report fully the usual increased trade in various lines that are in special call at this season. If some see the change more particularly than others, this result may be ascribed to better preparations and a more attractive display of the desirable kinds of food. That is the explanation given to your correspondent by one of the veterans in the business, who said that he never fails to rearrange his stock well before the opening of Lent, so as to show his customers that he is prepared to serve them.

At the last meeting of the Brooklyn Retail Grocers' Association there was a general discussion of the efforts of jobbers to stop manufacturers from selling to retailers. Several of the most prominent members spoke in favor of the quantity plan, under which the manufacturer will sell in the prescribed quantities and at the prices laid down to anybody who has the money, whether jobber, buying exchange, chain store or individual retailer.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed Wednesday against the W. H. Hart Co., wholesale apple dealers at Poughkeepsie, and a receiver was appointed with authority to carry on the business temporarily. It is said that the company bought $150,000 worth of apples last year and was shipping them at the rate of several thousand barrels a week, when the slump came in October and prices fell. The apples, kept in storage since in this city and in Southampton, England, are now being sold.

On the petition of creditors, filed Tuesday, the bankruptcy court appointed a receiver for the Marquise Chocolate Co., manufacturers of chocolates and candies at 85 Ninth avenue. The company was incorporated a year ago with an authorized capital stock of $100,000 and its present assets are estimated at $20,000, comprising merchandise, machinery and accounts.

A petition in bankruptcy which was filed last December against Samuel Parrish, a retail grocer at 850 East One hundred and fifty-sixth street, was this week dismissed by the courts.

Among new corporations filing certificates in the last week were the following:—

WE believe grocers have more influence with their customers than any manufacturer could possibly have through advertising, no matter how good it might be. We advertise Snider's Pork and Beans with Tomato Sauce extensively, in most of the big national mediums, to help the demand for this product, but we particularly want the grocer to know how good it is—because we are certain if he does, that no matter WHOSE Pork and Beans his customers ask for, he will tell them to take because he will want them to be grateful to him—

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market has been fairly active during the past week, considering the usual limitations of the season. The line is about steady and unchanged, low grades still being in light supply and firm in price.

Coffee.

Following the liquidation of March options, the market for Brazil options has remained at a practical standstill during the past week. The speculative contingent has apparently reached the point where it will neither buy nor sell, fearing the enormous syndicate holdings which hang over the market like a cloud. The better grades of Santos continue scarce and tend higher. The assortment is very poor. The demand for spot Rio and Santos coffee is from hand to mouth and at unchanged prices. Java and Mocha are steady. Milds, particularly Bogotas, are very firm and would advance were the financial situation different.

Sugar.

The sugar market is unchanged for the week. Raws, however, are firmer and the general outlook is strong. Reports from Porto Rico indicate a reduction of 15 per cent. in the production and it is also established that the Java crop will also be 10 per cent. smaller than last year. Refined sugar shows no change for the week, except the fact that the Federal has advanced 10 points more, making its price nominally 10 points above other refineries. This condition has practically never existed before; the Federal is usually below its competitors, but it seems to be managed in such an erratic fashion that its movements are hard to forecast. Though 10 points higher, the Federal will still sell at its competitor's prices. On Friday the refined market advanced 10 points.

Syrup and Molasses.

The glucose market is unchanged. Compound syrup is in fair demand at unchanged prices. Sugar syrup is selling very fairly, particularly for export. Prices on some grades have advanced. Molasses is unchanged and in fair demand. High grades are firm.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are unchanged, both spot and futures. The spot market still feels a little weak, but no further change has occurred in price. The demand is very fair. Corn is unchanged, a moderate business being done in both spot and future. Several packers named a price of 90 cents on Maine corn during the week, this being 5 cents above last year. Peas are unchanged. Spot goods are dull. Futures could still be sold, but there is trouble getting packers to confirm new orders, particularly on cheaper grades, which have been in particularly large demand. Peaches are unchanged and dull. Apples are weaker. There have been sales of New York State gallons at $2.50, and of Maine brands at $1.95. The market is undeniably weak. The Baltimore small line is unchanged and dull. California canned goods are quiet.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are unchanged in price and in good demand. Jobbers are putting out a good many on to-day's prices. Peaches are selling well at the reduced prices. Some grades have dropped as much as 5 cents per pound. Apricots are very scarce and for the present occupy an unimportant place. Currants are quiet. Raisins seem to have become completely demoralized. Some bank holdings of choice seeded have been unloaded on the local market this week at a price which has enabled jobbers to offer them to the retail trade at 6¾ cents. Apples are weak and declined, demand light. Dates are active at unchanged prices. Figs and citron quiet.

Beans and Peas.

Imported pea beans are playing havoc with the market for domestic beans. The latter can hardly be obtained below $2.40 to $2.45, while foreign beans are freely offered at $2.15 to $2.20. Marrows average $2.20 and are in fair demand. California limas are unchanged. Split peas are unchanged in every grade and firm. There is great scarcity of raw material and even higher prices are not unlikely.

Eggs.

The egg market remains about the same as a week ago. The receipts of fresh eggs show an increase and the demand also. The price for the coming few weeks will depend wholly on the weather.

Cheese.

The cheese market remains stationary. The consumptive demand is normal and stocks in storage are lighter than usual at this season. No material change is looked for during the coming week.

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

"Skipper" Sardines.

THEY'LL SUIT YOU TO A TEA

There's a Difference. There is much difference in the quality of Sardines and the preparation of same prior to the sealing of the tins as there is in ham or bacon properly and improperly cured.

Here's the Difference. "Skipper" Sardines must be alive when taken out of the water. Fish which are dead when taken from the water are not fit to eat, yet tons are canned every year.

"Skipper" Sardines are scientifically cured under the most complete sanitary conditions. If this were true of all Sardines we would not have so much to say about quality.

"Skipper" Sardines are all autumn caught. Spring-caught fish are not fit to eat, still tons of spring-caught fish are canned every year and consumed by the unsuspecting public.

"Skipper" Sardines are not only packed in pure Olive Oil; but the oil is first grade. This cannot be said of the oil in which many other brands of Sardines are packed.

Until you have tried "Skipper" Sardines you will never be able to say you have tried the best.

Butter.

The receipts of fresh butter have shown an increase during the week. There has been a lighter demand at the same time for everything in the butter line and the inevitable result was a decline of 1 cent per pound, both in tubs and prints of all grades. The future price depends on the consumptive demand entirely. There is not likely to be any further increase in the make for some time. Storage stocks are decreasing very satisfactorily, but if there is any change it will likely be a slight decline.

Provisions.

The market for smoked meats is in about the condition of a week ago. The consumptive demand is about normal and the stocks are very large. Both pure and compound lard have declined ⅛ cent, owing to large stocks and light demand. There is some buying at the revised price, and it is not thought that the market will go lower at present. Barrel pork, canned meats and dried beef are unchanged and steady. The demand is good for the season.

Produce.

Ohio globe onions, 80 to 85 cents per bushel; York State, 70 to 80 cents per bushel; white Texas, $1 to $1.15 per bushel crate; Spanish, $1.50 per bushel crate, demand good; Pennsylvania potatoes, 85 to 90 cents per bushel; York State, 75 to 80 cents per bushel, demand fair; sweet potatoes, primes, $1.25 per basket; culls, 50 to 60 cents per basket, demand fair to good; carrots, 40 cents per basket, demand fair to good; yellow turnips, 35 to 40 cents per basket; white, 20 to 25 cents per basket, demand fair; Western horseradish, $5 to $6 per barrel; domestic, $3 to $4 per barrel, demand fair; Danish cabbage, $7 to $9 per ton; Savoy, $1 to $1.25 per barrel, demand fair; beets, $1.25 per barrel, demand fair; parsnips, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; oyster plants, $3.50 to $4 per barrel, demand good; parsley, $3 per 100, demand good; watercress, $2 to $2.50 per bushel, demand good.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Baldwins, $2 to $3.50 per barrel; Greenings, $2.50 to $3.50 per barrel; Hulbersons, $3 to $3.50 per barrel; Spy, $3 to $3.50 per barrel; Spitz, $3 to $3.50 per barrel; Kings, $3 to $4 per barrel; Russets, $2.50 to $3.50 per barrel, demand fair; bananas, Jumbo, $1.65 to $2.25 per bunch; firsts, $1.45 to $1.75 per bunch; 8-hands, $1 to $1.25 per bunch; 7-hands, 65 to 85 cents per bunch; 6-hands, 40 to 60 cents per bunch, demand poor; grapefruit, $3 to $5 per box, demand fair; California oranges, $2.25 to $2.50 per box, demand fair; pineapples, $3.50 to $4 per box, demand good; lemons, $2.50 to $3 per box, demand fair; tangerines, $5 to $5.50 per strap, scarce and in good demand.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

Developments in the canned goods market here were of an unimportant character during this week, two lines of goods furnishing probably 75 per cent. of the business done, namely, tomatoes and cove oysters. The market for tomatoes opened dull on Monday, quite dull, but a fair demand for them began in the middle of the week and continued until the close of business. The buying orders came from several markets that have not bought any of that article here recently, and that is the encouraging feature in the situation. The prices have not stiffened up as yet, and the market is rather in buyers' favor. The beginning of the buying for the spring and early summer trade will be the signal for an upward turn in the market, from the viewpoint of the seller. Some inquiry for future tomatoes during the week led to anticipations of activity in that direction, but it did not materialize, and both sellers and buyers continue to pursue a waiting policy.

The activity in cove oysters during the last three weeks has been sufficient to absorb the offerings of them at the low prices, and now there is a strong upward tendency, not so much because of any actual scarcity, but because keen competition in January had forced prices to a point that showed the canner no profit, if not an actual loss. The outlook is for a light spring pack.

In other lines of goods the demand was of the same character as prevailed all month, namely, only for such goods as were actually needed, and then only for small quantities. While the holders of the goods profess a willingness to wait for business to revive, yet some sellers show a disposition to entertain offers close to their asking prices, and now may be the opportunity to anticipate your spring wants.

THOS. J. MEEHAN & CO.

Baltimore, Md.

No. 2.

We are having a better demand for spot tomatoes, though the market is without any changes. Seventy-seven and a half cents per dozen seems to be the bottom price for good goods.

There is some inquiry for future tomatoes, but no change to report, and there is very little business being done.

We note quite a fair inquiry for standard Maine style sugar corn at a low price. While there is not very much business being put through, yet there is a sign of more interest in this line. The inquiries certainly indicate that buyers are beginning to need this line and it is fair to suppose that some business will soon be in sight.

Oysters.—Trade is not active, though there is some inquiry and the situation from the packers' standpoint is in excellent shape. There has practically been no packing done in Baltimore in February. In spite of the fact that the weather conditions have moderated considerably, the very cold weather, however, which we had two or three weeks ago was such a sharp blow to the catching of oysters that as yet there has not been any material sign of improvement, as far as the receipts of raw stock in Baltimore are concerned.

Dredging stops March 15th; the oyster season nominally continues until the middle of April or the first of May, but after March 15th the stock available for packers, under the most favorable circumstances, is bound to be light, as they have nothing to depend on except tonging.

Sugar.

There has been a buyer for every pound of raw sugar offered during the past seven days at the prices ranging from 3.70 to 3.89 cents. There has been an outlet for the supplies manufactured in Cuba, Porto Rico and San Domingo. They could be sold and have been sold at quotations showing an advance with each day's business. No matter what the state of oversupply is at the present time, or the influence that the Cuba crop grinding season has exerted in other years, the fact is with us and not to be controverted that notwithstanding every unfavorable condition that exists, the market has regained strength and buoyancy and the prices recorded show substantial advances. The market started this year upon a profitable basis, declined from 3.92 to 3.67 cents, great quantities of sugar being sold at the different levels, and no improvement in the relation of supply to demand having happened, or new facts having arisen, every indication pointed to the continuation of the decline to as low as 3.60 cents. Three and sixty-seven one-hundredths cents seems to have been the stopping point. Perhaps Cuba would have held her supplies and refused to sell had the market descended below that figure; perhaps not. Owners of sugar have had one element of prime importance in their favor—the fact that Cuba was to outturn a crop from 275,000 to 300,000 tons less than last year. That estimated shortage has all along had its effect in keeping this year's values upon a higher range than otherwise would have been the case, and it has been the reliance upon which hope has been based that prices would advance after the congestion in supplies had been alleviated. The refiners are demonstrating a willingness to carry sugar, they are taking the supplies offered as they come to market, even though the receipts at our refining ports continue double the quantity we need each week and Cuba is manufacturing 75,000 tons every seven days. We will have a strong market while there are buyers. Just as long as the refiners bear the weight, prices will be maintained. Not over one-third of the Cuba crop has as yet been sold. If we have good fruit crops this year and a good business in refined sugar, the raws that the Cuban, Porto Rican and other planters have to sell us will yield them excellent returns. The planters are passing through the hardest part of their crops in so far as concerns values, but they have been finding good markets; there will be room for profit as the season progresses, and with business good for all of us, the probability is that 1908 will turn out a very satisfactory sugar year.

Refined Sugar.—The Federal yesterday morning about 11.15 advanced list prices 10 points, announcing that they would accept orders for limited quantities basis, 4.80 cents, less 1 per cent. for cash, permitting fourteen days' delay inserted in contracts, requiring assortment at the expiration of that time, and then allow an additional delay of two weeks—virtually one month in which to take the sugar. The American Sugar Refining Co., Howell and Arbuckle hold prices firm, net basis, 4.80 cents, less 1 per cent. for cash, prompt or privilege of customary delayed shipment. All refiners guarantee their own prices on day of arrival.

Spices.

The market it rather active, with considerable interest shown in gingers and cassias. Foreign cables report a steady and generally unchanged market.

Pepper.—Steady and in very good demand. Futures are not active, prices remaining about the same as during the last thirty days.

Cayennes.—Quite steady at recent advances.

Cloves.—Steady and firm at practically unchanged prices. Demand not so good during the week.

Pimento (Allspice).—Fairly active at very steady prices. Good select stock is exceedingly scarce.

Mace.—In fair demand at unchanged prices.

Nutmegs.—Very steady at present advances. Foreign markets are higher than our own. We expect to see a slowly advancing market.

Gingers.—Very active on spot and in big demand at present. Prices are much firmer and the tendency is upward.

Seeds.—Caraway in fair demand at steady prices. Poppy and celery unchanged, but coriander is much firmer and has been advanced at least ¼ cent during the week.

Cassias.—Very firm at steady prices. China cassia in rolls is practically off the market.

MARKET NOTES.

Florida strawberries are still fairly abundant and comparatively cheap. The range is 25 to 40 cents per quart. The fruit shipped in refrigerators is of good quality, the ordinary crate fruit not so good. The demand is fair.

A few Florida cucumbers are now coming forward, averaging $5.75 per crate. The quality was mostly small and undesirable. Hothouse cues are high—$2.25 per dozen, and the demand is fair.

Florida tomatoes range from $3.50 to $3.75 for the best fruit, $2.50 to $3 for the ordinary grade. Hothouse tomatoes are slightly easier—15 to 25 cents. The demand is good.

New Bermuda potatoes are still only in fair demand. Prices are about the same—$6.50 to $7.00 for No. 1's and $5.50 to $6 for No. 2's.

Florida beans are too high to sell largely—$3.50 to $4.50. The demand is light.

Florida eggplants range from $2 to $2.50 per crate. The quality is good and the demand fair.

Radishes average $3.50 per 100, reds, and $3.50 to $5 per 100, whites. The demand is good.

Florida oranges are about 50 cents weaker. The present range is $2 to $3.50. Continued heavy receipts and light demand are responsible. California oranges are constantly improving and their competition is therefore being felt.

Long Island rhubarb and nearby hotbed stock averages $8 per 100. Michigan rhubarb ranges from 60 to 90 cents per dozen. The demand needs a little warm weather to wake it up.

Florida grapefruit is a little weaker, ranging now from $3 to $5. Heavier receipts seem to be the reason.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

Sunbury, Pa., Feb. 17, 1908.

Editor Science of Advertising.

Dear Sir:—It seems to us that your critic on advertising is roasting every fellow on advertising; every country or town of this size, printers does about the same in setting up an ad. Are they all wrong, or is your critic the only man that is right? Why don't he come out once in a while and admit that such and such an ad is good? Inclosed find one of our poor circulars and tear it all to pieces; we are, however, receiving lots of benefit even if our name is on top of the circular. We shall put the name anywhere as long as it brings results and don't think it hurts the circular's pulling power.

Yours truly, DAVIS & CO.

Well, gentlemen, since you ask me frankly which is right, the country printer or I, I say to you equally frankly, I think I am. I have worked in three country printing offices in my time, and never found but one among these, and all the others that I have known about, that was anything like decently equipped. I apply that both to materials and ability. That is why I criticise so many products of country offices that come into this department. They are often set by careless boys, from old and battered type, and no printing can look well under such conditions.

Evidently Davis & Co. have ideas of their own on advertising, and if those ideas are the product of their experience, they have a right to have them. The circular which they inclose is a large affair—9 x 14 inches, and here it is, reduced and reproduced below:—

EAST END CASH STORE

What text this advertisement has is snappy and well written. The typographical appearance is fair—might be improved, I think, by the use of a border. Some of the little paragraphs go far enough in what they say about the goods, in my judgment, and others do not. Naturally, it is impossible to pick out any given paragraph and say: "this would have brought more results had you said a little more about the article." Since it is logical, however, that the more persuasive you are in endeavoring to sell an article, the more likely you are to sell it, I think it is reasonable to suppose that the more persuasive an advertisement becomes, the more likely it is to succeed. Along this same line of argument, it can scarcely be denied that the little paragraph, "Oyster Crackers, Fine as They Can Be Made," is more persuasive and forceful than "Baked Beans, per can, 10 cents."

The very size of a circular like this commands attention for it, and even if it had many more technical defects than it has, it could still expect to get some results.

ASSOCIATION NEWS.

San Francisco, Cal.

Secretary Connolly, of the Associated Retail Grocers of San Francisco, Cal., makes the following statement of his organization's results for 1907:—

As a result of the efforts of the State Association, of which we are affiliated, we secured four laws at the last Legislature: 1. The State Pure Food Law. 2. Four years for a bill to outlaw. 3. Mutual Fire Insurance Law. 4. A felony to pass worthless checks. In May the Ghirdardelli Company was induced to protect a fair profit on their chocolates. In July the Pacific Coast Syrup Company set a selling price on their Tea Garden Drips. In August one of the newspapers devoted a whole page in calling us a trust, because we asked the manufacturers to assure us a fair profit for distributing their goods. This only made us stronger than ever. In October we succeeded in getting bottled beer back to its original price. The N. K. Fairbank Company assure us they will soon set a retail selling price of 25 cents on their Golddust. They are protecting Cottolene now. The profit we have been getting on flour for the last two years means hundreds of dollars to our members. With one exception, every large grocery firm in San Francisco are now members of our Association. This is because we have accomplished to much for our members in securing a fair profit on many staples. The millers are complaining that some few of our members are selling Oregon flour. We promised the millers that when they protected prices on their flour we would not handle Oregon flour, as our profit would be satisfactory on California flour; all our members should live up to this promise.

Well-known Broker Takes Issue with Canners on Future Canned Goods Contract

Mr. H. S. Strasbaugh Says Mr. Risser, of the Iroquois Canning Co., has Forgotten Several Things. Crop Failures Never General. Sale of Futures Not Compulsory. Jobbers Should Not Suffer for Crop Failures. Mr. Risser's Rebuttal.

Have just read with interest the remarks of the well-known Western canner, Mr. J. L. Risser, presenting his ideas on the sale of futures and the editorial note following, which practically and almost, if not quite, properly covers the proposition, with the exception of one thing, which the editor does not seem to take into consideration, and that is that it would be a physical impossibility to sell all canned goods during the packing season. At the same time it would be possible, beyond a doubt, to sell a great deal larger proportion at that time and a smaller percentage of futures than has been the custom in recent years.

The estimable gentleman from the West in quoting from Mr. Olney's address to the National Canners' Association, evidently believes, or would have your readers believe, that crop failures are the rule and not the exception, that the non-germination of seed, the pest of insects or blight, the disastrous rust, cyclone, hailstones and others, late frost in the spring and early frosts in the fall are annual events in many packing localities rather than the exception in all or, indeed, exceptional in a few localities from year to year. In attempting to justify such remarks, our esteemed friend seems to be unconscious of the fact that the domains of Uncle Sam are so boundless that the disasters referred to seldom, if ever, cover the entire borders or a major part of them to such an extent that serious calamities are possible.

In referring to the 160,000 acres of corn destroyed in Central Illinois in 1906, would it not be well for Mr. Risser to consider the conditions surrounding the corn market that year, the low prices that were being obtained for corn as a result of the enormous pack of nearly 25,000,000 cases the preceding years, 1904 and 1905, and with due consideration to these figures, it is also worthy of mention that the pack of 1906 amounted, according to the published figures, to 9,561,960 cases. Notwithstanding the fact that Central Illinois may have suffered a hardship which demanded sympathy from every canner, as far as these individual losses were concerned, and yet on the other hand, congratulations from every canner, because not another case was packed during that year when the price of corn was in its lowest depths, on account of overproduction. While it is a recognized right of States to enact and enforce laws according to the dictates of their citizens, is it not questionable as to whether the citizens of these States have a right to enforce their laws upon buyers and citizens of other States who refuse to enact and enforce similar laws? While it may be unquestionably right for the citizens of States to trade among each other according to the laws of the State which might be "the release of parties to contracts from their obligations in case of what are termed 'acts of God,' such as crop failures, destruction by fire," etc., who is sure of any reason of logic or fairness in a proposition to impose these same laws upon the citizens of other States who have never been in sympathy with the enacting of the same sentiment in their laws or being subject to such which are not on the statute books of their own States? We seriously doubt the expediency of such intimations, at least until the National law compels every buyer and seller to release parties from their contracts, providing they have a crop failure, which in all probability is far distant, as the same facts and conditions would be most carefully studied and weighed before our National representatives would impose such a law upon the nation.

From the remarks of Mr. Risser, one might suppose that the sale of futures was compulsory, and while the writer is willing to grant that possibly the necessity of the sale of a certain proportion of futures is compulsory, at the same time the percentage of futures ordinarily sold is many times more than this necessity demands, and if those who have been accustomed to indulge in the speculative future transaction would reduce their future transactions, say, 50 or even 75 per cent., the canned goods industry would be benefited thereby and the remaining small percentage which is sold could be sold on 100 per cent. delivery contracts, and if in the event of a crop failure or other disaster in any one locality, the chances are largely in favor of the packer being enabled to recover by purchasing from a packer in a neighboring State goods of equal quality, entirely satisfactory to his buyer and his buyer's customers, and without any financial loss whatsoever.

On the other hand, why should the jobber be a party to the germination of seed or any of the other lines suggested which are far beyond his control and good business acumen? If the packers select wrong seed or attempt the propogation of same, under favorable conditions, why should the jobber be a party to this transaction? Every heart knows its own troubles and the jobber is not an exception. In case of short crop the retailer demands of him delivery to the letter, and the shorter the crop the more strenuous the demand. In addition to this, there are numerous other conditions that are liable to cause the jobber to suffer a loss; for instance, financial difficulties, the loss of an important head salesman through sickness, death or otherwise, his place of business might be destroyed at a time when he would be seriously handicapped if he were compelled to take his goods according to contract, and there are many other emergencies which might be noted. Consequently, if certain percentage of futures must be dealt in, why not let it be a small percentage that will insure safety to both buyer and seller and the greatest amount of protection on a 100 per cent. delivery contract, with no "ifs" and "ands," showing preference to neither buyer nor seller and each principal realizing that if he enters into a contract that it is a contract, and feeling that it is useless to waste the time and money required in closing such contracts without they are to stand as they are written, usual business courtesy, fire and element clauses excepted; the necessity of pro rata deliveries should not be a part of the business man's contract, whose time to him and his associates is money, or should any wish to engage in a one-sided contract, denying to others what is demanded by himself, for, as a prominent writer has put it, "There is no freedom on earth or in any star for those who deny freedom to others."

Yours truly,

Mr. L. J. Risser, of the Iroquois Canning Co., whose recent defense of the packers' refusal to adopt the grocers' form of future canned goods contract appeared in the "Grocery World," writes the following reply to the editorial note which appeared at the end of that article:—

> I note the comment at the close of my article: "No better argument than this has ever been framed to show the consummate foolishness of selling canned goods before they are packed."

Answering this comment I wish to say that since the Lord created the earth and the worlds, and established the proposition of dealing in futures, there has never been, and it is safe to say there never will be, a change in this policy. A proposition of selling the products of the soil, or rather contracting to deliver a crop to be grown, is no more foolish a proposition than to put seed into the ground and expect a crop from same. The Lord has certainly promised a seed time and harvest, and on the strength of the promise of the Almighty, it is perfectly proper to expect a harvest of some proportion when the seed is planted. The Lord, himself, does not promise a definite amount of harvest, and it would be discounting His wisdom to go any further in this direction than He has indicated in his providences.

It is no more unreasonable for a business man to provide for the future by making contracts for futures on a pro rata basis, than it is for the farmer to make his provision for the future by putting his seed into the ground; and it would be just as unreasonable for the buyer of futures to refuse to take a crop he has contracted for, when grown, as it would be for the farmer to refuse to receive more than a certain percentage of the crop that the Lord gives to him.

I want to say just this; that there will be no change, whatever, in the natural inclination of mankind to deal in futures, no matter what may be said on the subject otherwise. People in trade must anticipate their wants as well as the human family generally. Even the Lord, Himself, commended the little ant for its shrewdness, and denounced those who did otherwise, as sluggards.

MOTHER'S OATS

We Want You to Want to Sell Them

We realized long ago that instead of making a grocer sell Mother's Oats, it was better to make him want to sell them.

That we do first by making them the most salable rolled oats on the market, and second by doing nothing to prevent him from getting out of them all the profit he feels entitled to.

We never put a retail price on Mother's Oats, either in advertising or any other way. They ought to retail around twelve cents, and they mostly do retail around there, largely because in all our advertising we never make any attempt to boom them for less.

Then the coupon deal helps lots, too.

The* Great Western Cereal Co., Chicago, Ill.

Certainly, a sluggard in business is out of place, and a business man should follow the example of the ant, even though he may be dealing in futures, and he will not be far wrong. What would you think of a publisher who did not contract his supplies ahead? There is no line of business that does not take into consideration the proposition of futures, and it is only the abuse of this proposition that needs correcting.

L. J. RISSER.

Onarga, Ill., March 3, 1908.

NOTE.—The "Grocery World" cannot agree with Mr. Risser that trading in canned goods before the crops are even sown is parallel to any of the matters he cites. Naturally, we do not question the propriety of sowing crops and banking on expectations of them; what we do question is the wisdom of gambling with those expectations.—ED.

Value of a Contract Not to Re-engage in Business.

An interesting case has just been decided in the Philadelphia Common Pleas Court, involving the question as to how far the seller of a grocery store who agreed not to engage in business within a certain territory is bound by his agreement after the store is sold again.

The case was that of Ebert vs. Kauffman. It seems that Kauffman had sold a retail business for $3,500. The agreement of sale contained the clause: "I hereby bind myself not to engage in the same business within ten years, within five miles of present location."

The original buyer resold the business to Ebert, the plaintiff in this suit. Kauffman, considering himself released by the second sale from his agreement not to re-engage in the business, started in again within the forbidden territory. The second buyer at once entered suit to restrain him and won. The court decides as follows:—

> Our opinion is that such a covenant as here found adheres to the good will, and the right of enforcement will pass to an assignee of the business.

This means, therefore, that if A sells a business to B and agrees not to re-engage in the same business, any subsequent holder of that business can enforce his contract against A. B may sell to C, C to D, and so on indefinitely, but the contract remains alive no matter how many times the business is transferred.

Question: Jerry Charles, Freeburg, Pa.—I am informed by a grocery friend of mine at Lewistown, Pa., that the inclosed agreement, signed by customers of his, is not collectible in their county, as the district attorney so informed him. Is this a fact? As this is a copy of the agreement used by the Retail Grocers' Association of Philadelphia, I always considered it collectible in any part of the State.

Answer.—The copy of the agreement inclosed is as follows:—

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT.

THIS AGREEMENT, between....., party of the first part, and ..... Grocer, party of the second part, witnesseth:

That the party of the second part hereby agree to extend to the party of the first part..... credit on all goods desired to be purchased by the party of the first part of the party of the second part, not to exceed the sum of $..... in any one.....

That the party of the first part is to pay for the said goods..... or..... In case of default in payment as agreed, and that it should be necessary to begin legal action for the collection of moneys due on any goods purchased and sold under this agreement, it is expressly agreed that in consideration of the extension of credit as aforesaid, the party of the first part waives all rights of exemption, to which he or she may be entitled under the Statutes of Pennsylvania, particularly under the Act of April 9, 1849, and its supplements, with 5 per cent. added for collection.

That this agreement shall be in force for five years from date.

Witness our hands and seals, on this .....day of ....., 190

.....Seal.
.....Seal.
.....Seal.

Witness:
.....

The above is substantially the form of credit agreement approved by the Pennsylvania Retail Merchants' Association and distributed with their authority. There is not the slightest reason why the agreement should not be enforceable in this correspondent's county, or in any other part of Pennsylvania, or, with slight modification, in other States. A condition could not exist whereby this agreement could be enforceable in one county of Pennsylvania and unenforceable in others, as questions of waiver of exemption are questions settled by State laws and not by county legislation.

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

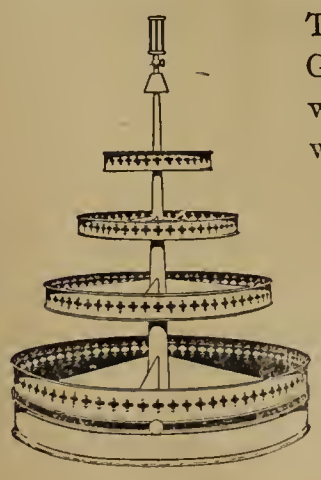
[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

SLEEP.

It has come to the ears of the management that some of you are keeping pretty late hours. This being personal it belongs only to us to advise. Our advice is cut it out. Most fellows of your average age require eight hours' sleep. It takes that to remain in good standing in the grocery business. It takes that to keep the eye clear and the brain alert and to keep the spring in your heel. But above all (health excepted), it takes eight hours' sleep to rise in the work in which you are engaged.

A BACK NUMBER.

We will bring to light Monday morning twenty-five or thirty boxes soap without a wrapper; a strong smelling, ugly colored, unshapely piece of old time goods. A regular back number. Not a cake of this soap will ever go back in the cellar. So make up your mind to sell it. We'll clean it up at 4¼ cents a cake, or $2.60 a box of seventy-two cakes. The floorwalker will keep track of all sales. It's a good honest soap at that, and you needn't hesitate to push it out.



DON'T CHEAPEN LENT

By offering salt herring and salt codfish continually. There's little money and little attraction in either one. Caviar, glass anchovies, French sardines, Scotch kippered herring should be thought of. Get that beautiful (and it is beautiful), line of smoked fish in your mind. Sell Lenten things that will make people talk about us. Certainly many customers will tell you they're too expensive. Tempt them. Make them look.

SELLING RAISINS.

March finds us with an unusual stock of package raisins and package currants. Break open a package, especially raisins, and show them to every man and woman you wait on the coming week. Make the price 12 cents. Describe them as absolutely seedless; refer to their wholesome looking appearance; their size; their moistness; and put emphasis on the package being sixteen ounces. Tell about the short-weight packages that are sold often for more than our full weight. Let us clean up a lot of these.

It is to Laugh.

Do you know, it's a mighty hard thing to put ourselves in the other fellow's place!

I often wonder why the Creator didn't want to make human nature perfect, while he was about it. Why he couldn't have given all of us a mind clear enough to see the other side and act accordingly.

I've known a whole lot of men who in a thousand years couldn't be made to see any side of the case but theirs.

And that's why consistency so often becomes a rhinestone.

I had a heated little argument with a grocery friend of mine the other day which came to nothing, except a headache for me.

A man came in his store to buy a pound of sausage while I was in there. The store, by the way, is not far from Pittsburg.

The grocer waited on him himself, and I noticed right away that the atmosphere was very frosty. Two or three pleasant little jollies that the fellow got off about the weather and so on, were just answered, and that's all.

The thing was so pronounced that when he had gone I said to the grocer:—

"Have you got anything against that fellow? You weren't exactly warm toward him."

"I sure have," was the reply, "he's trying to drive us out of business. Trying to play cute tricks on us by buying over our heads."

"What do you mean by that?" I asked.

"He belongs to a social club down here in ——— street," he explained, "and he got up a scheme last fall of ten of the members clubbing together and getting goods at wholesale. They buy sugar and flour and canned goods out in Pittsburg, and of course we lose the business."

"Where do they get a jobber out there that will sell consumers?" I asked.

"Oh, they buy of a little fellow in Pittsburg who claims to do a wholesale and retail business both," was the answer.

"We're not going to let it pass," contiued the grocer. "We've had it up in our association two or three times already and we're going to take it up again. The first thing these fellows know they may find they'll have to buy everything in Pittsburg. They won't do that long, because it's too inconvenient, so in that way maybe we'll be able to break it up."

"But if you don't break it up you'll simply throw away a part of the trade of ten good customers," I suggested.

"I'm willing to lose my share," he said, "they've got no right to go over our heads that way. The proper place to buy groceries is at the stores of their own town. If we don't take the thing in hand there is no telling where it'll go."

"Have you got a good association here?" I asked him.

"Fine as silk!" he said. "Every grocer in town belongs but one, and he's not much good. We've got the liveliest little secretary you'll meet in a day's travel. We're going into co-operative buying next fall."

"Co-operative buying!" I repeated, smelling something.

"Sure! Going to buy together. We can save about 10 per cent. that way. Didn't you ever hear of what they do in Philadelphia? Tell me they've got a thousand members and buy five millions a year!"

"I suppose you all buy of jobbers now, don't you?" I said.

"Of course we do now. None of us is big enough to do anything else. But wait till forty-five of us begin to buy together. The jobber can go hang—we'll buy as cheap as he will."

"Looks like a good scheme," I said. "Just about as good as the scheme of your ten men who go to Pittsburg and let you go hang."

"Eh?" he said.

I showed all my magnificent teeth in a horse laugh.

"Well, you're a dandy!" I said, "you're all right! Saying one minute it ain't right for ten of your customers to buy together over your head, and admitting the next minute that that's exactly what you're going to do to your jobber! Oh, ain't that funny!"

He had sense enough to get red.

"You don't mean to say that's the same!' he blustered.

"Why ain't it?" I asked.

"Because it ain't!" he said brilliantly. "We're trying to buy our goods cheaper so we can save money for the general public. If we buy cheaper we can sell cheaper, can't we? Ain't that a good thing to do?"

"Nothing the matter with it at all," I said, "but how is it different from what your own ten customers are doing? They're only doing for themselves what you say you're going to try to do for them. Ain't they got as much right to cut down their cost by not paying you a profit as you have to cut down your cost by not paying the jobber a profit?"

"It's entirely a different thing!" he spluttered, and do you know, I couldn't make him see the point in nearly half an hour's red hot talk. At any rate, if he did see it he wouldn't own up.

Maybe I'm twisted myself. Maybe there is a difference. It does seem to me, though, that the grocer who joins a buying exchange has no real kick coming when his customer does the same thing. He'll do right to fight it, of course, just as he'd fight any competition, but he has no room to put up any howls about principle.

At least, that's the way it looks to me.

THE MODEL CASH GROCERY STORE.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., February 29, 1908.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your inquiry of recent date, we enclose a few sample slices of sandwich dried beef, sliced in the highest style of the art, sliced on Johnson's patented "EVERSHARP." These slices, thin as paper, smooth as glass, soft, moist and delicious, were cut the full size of a six-pound knuckle. The whole knuckle was sliced to perfection in six minutes.

I also enclose, in separate wrapper, some very small, very thin slices cut from the meat that covers the knuckle bone. Please notice that the little nub end of gristle and skin remaining unsliced weighs less than a quarter ounce, every particle of edible meat sliced up in thin, bright, salable slices. Of course we never sell any one a quarter pound of these little slices; but every half or quarter pound we weigh up gets alike its equal share of little and broad slices.

Please note the saving in time—as much work done in six minutes as the best circular-knife machines can do in twenty minutes, and then the quality of our work—slices thinner, smoother and more perfect than any other machine can possibly produce. So moist, so soft, so juicy, so broad, so transparently thin they cause enthusiastic comment wherever introduced, resulting in a large increase of very profitable trade.

We sell our machines for forty-six dollars on small monthly instalments, and every machine can be depended on to more than earn its own cost. If you prefer to pay cash we allow you a liberal discount. Hoping to receive your order.

Respectfully yours,

A. W. JOHNSON.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

This window display proved very satisfactory in both attraction and sale-producing qualities.

This car was built in window 2 feet 8 inches x 6 feet 3 inches, car built accordingly in size, and constructed as follows:—

Canned vegetables for sills, a thin strip of wood for rails, rounded pasteboard for wheels, box lumber, rounded at ends, for floor and platform; box lumber, rounded, as floor for roof; muslin is used to round off roof, and another strip of wood for elevated section, on this a stick of wood, painted black, is placed for trolley pole.

Backwards and Forwards

You grocers know the ups and downs of the breakfast food business. You know how dozens and dozens of products have come on the market, filled your shelves and stayed there. Could we possibly point to a more convincing argument in favor of the quality of Egg-O-See and E-C Corn than the fact that the sales of both are constantly growing.

Between the broom handles on the board are scrub brushes and around the edges are clothes pins. A clothes line is run from broom to broom, on which are clothes pins. The sign, "Enemies of Dirt," is on cardboard and tacked outside of the brooms.

An Interesting Body of Men.

We are in receipt of a copy of the February issue of "Industry," and one of its important features is a beautiful half-tone cut of the branch managers of the Lutz & Schramm Co., of Allegheny. They are a representative looking body of men, and it speaks well for the house that they will have only men of high-class associated with them. Lutz & Schramm Co. have the reputation of putting out only strictly first-class goods and their Pickles, Baked Beans, Catsup, and entire line of Preserves, cannot be excelled.

We would be pleased to have for publication in this column the ideas of our readers upon trade topics, it being understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for any views expressed therein. All communications must be accompanied by the writer's name and address as an evidence of good faith, but not necessarily for publication. All inquiries within our power to answer will also be noticed in this department.

Wanted—A Position.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I am taking the liberty of addressing you regarding a position. I have no doubt but that you receive inquiries from time to time for men to fill various positions.

You are probably aware that the above firm sold its business last August, following the death of our ———. Owing to the ill health of my brother for several years before his death, I was obliged to assume entire management, as well as act as credit man, which was my part of the work. In addition to the experience as a member of this firm, I was also partner in a retail business prior to my going into the wholesale grocery business, seven years ago. Having been connected with a mercantile business all my life, I have gained experience as clerk, salesman and manager, which is valuable in holding a responsible position. I am thirty-seven years of age and married. If you learn of such opening as you think I might fill, I will be glad to hear from you.

Yours truly,

P. S.—I can give any amount of reference you might want.

The "Grocery World" will be glad to furnish the name and address of the writer of the above letter to any person interested.

Logan, Johnson & Co. Come Back.

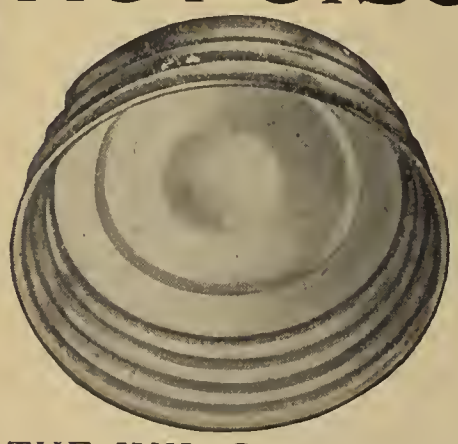
Boston, Mass., March 3, 1908.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—We have your edition in which you criticise our labels rather severely. On looking this matter up we find that the label you referred to is one that was approved by the National Food and Drug Committee, but as it was allowed at a time when everyone was using stickers, preparatory to getting in line with the Food and Drug Act, it might seem to any one not knowing, that the goods were not properly labeled.

We, of course, prepared new labels as soon as possible, and are rather surprised that you should have obtained such an old one as this must be, because the new labels carry the formula on the body label, which was a decision made after the time the labels referred to in your edition were placed upon the goods.

We inclose you a label which has been approved by the National board and is all right in every State. The goods are pure, for as any one knows that knows anything about preserves, it is impossible to make up a raspberry or strawberry preserve and prevent crystallization without the use of a small percentage of corn syrup. This does not make it a compound, as you charge in your article, and, in fact, in our State of Massachusetts, corn syrup and sugar are synonymous, so that we would not even have to specify them on the label if we sold our goods only in this State.



We appreciate fair criticism and if you had referred to us before writing this article we could have given you this explanation, as both the Board of Health of our State and Dr. Wiley, of the National Committee will inform you that we have endeavored very carefully to conform to all the requirements of the law.

Yours truly,

LOGAN, JOHNSON & Co.

As to the age of the label recently commented upon in the "Grocery World," the package bearing it was purchased at a Philadelphia

Having It All the Time

Take a butter made from the finest, cleanest, richest milk, in sanitary dairies, and inspect it every now and again until it's turned out to the consumer, and you can hardly help having perfect butter.

And as long as these conditions continue, you will have it all the time.

That is exactly the point of Gurnse butter. It is fancy, and is always fancy, and the dealer who sells it can count on every pound being like every other pound.

Nothing is more important in getting and holding a butter trade.

retail store a few days before the article appeared.

In the above letter was inclosed another label reading and arranged as follows:—

LOGAN, JOHNSON & CO.
BOSTON, MASS.
RASPBERRY
Prepared with Gran. Sugar, enough Corn Syrup to prevent crystallization and one-tenth of one per cent. Sodium Benzoate.

To the best of the "Grocery World's" knowledge and belief, the Federal Food and Drug Board has never approved such a label as this; in other words, a label which applies the unqualified word "raspberry" to a product containing glucose. Certainly if they have approved it they have done so in direct violation of their own regulation reiterated very many times. The "Grocery World" also disputes on the authority of many manufacturers, this firm's statement that raspberry and strawberry preserve cannot be made without glucose. They can be and are so made every day.

The "Grocery World" reiterates its opinion, formed under the direct authority of the legal regulations of the Department of Agriculture, that the above label is still illegal, and that any person selling goods bearing it is liable to prosecution. In the "Grocery World's" judgment, the proper designation for these goods is "Compound Raspberry Preserves."

Wanted in Public Libraries.

Worcester, Mass., March 2, 1908.
Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I am a patron of the magazine room of the public library in this and, occasionally, in other cities, and have noticed that every trade except the grocery is represented by one or more periodicals. These papers, I understand, are donated by the publishers, to a large extent. I think it lies in your power to benefit the grocery trade by having copies of your paper on file in public places.

Hoping you will not consider this suggestion out of place, I remain,

Yours truly,

Dear Sir:—The death of Wm. Warden, president of the National Bank of Union City, Pa., occurred at his home this morning at 5 o'clock. He was one of the old residents and has always been identified with the business interests of the town. At one time he was a member of the firm of Dabney, Warden & Laubender, general dealers in merchandise, back in the 70's, and then with Garrett Smith in produce, hay and grain, and later in manufactures. He was a public-spirited citizen, always looking out for the interests of the town.

The Breakfast Food Bulletin.

Westboro, Mass., Feb. 28, 1908.
Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—On page 10 of the "Grocery World" of date, January 6, 1908, you have an article on "No Adulterations in Breakfast Foods," and you refer to Dr. Frear, State chemist, and say his report will be out in about thirty days.

Can you tell me where I can get his report, or would you be kind enough to have one sent to me.

Sometime I may be able to return the kindness.

Yours truly,

The Colored Insert.

In these days when the average business man is inclined to see panic and hard times at every turn, the confidence displayed by the American Slicing Machine Company, in the business situation and the business future of the country is refreshing. This confidence is exemplified by their beautiful colored insert in this issue of the paper. So far from decreasing their advertising appropriation for the current year, they are going ahead on a larger scale than ever.

Of course, there is another kind of confidence that enables them to do this and that is the confidence that comes from the verdict of nearly nine thousand progressive merchants who have pronounced the American to be the only practical slicing machine and the best investment they have ever made for the store. That is why so many American Slicing Machines are sold each year on the recommendations of satisfied customers to their friends.

The mahcine brings the merchant all the sliced meat trade of his locality because the sanitary method, the greater bulk and the appetizing, uniform slices make an irresistible appeal to the housewife, and the saving of waste enables him to make a better profit on each sale. Any merchant who fails to investigate the machine thoroughly is turning away trade that might be coming to his store and losing money that might be in his cash drawer.

Do You Sell It?

We notice in our rounds among the grocery trade that State House Brand Ceylon Tea, packed by the popular wholesale grocery firm of John Scott & Co., Inc., is making a decided hit as it should, as it is a decidedly superior article in tea and a trade winner to those who push it.

Defensive Tactics Needed Against Delayed Transportation Claims

Great Need of Organized Action Against Railroads and Ocean Steamships which Arbitrarily Treat Shippers' Claims. Steamships Particularly Flagrant.

What is greatly needed in the grocery trade, according to many opinions heard expressed, is an organization of offense and defense against unfair treatment on the part of transportation companies. In this is included railroad companies, boat companies and, perhaps, more particularly, ocean steamship companies. These concerns are all large, and in many respects shippers are absolutely at their mercy. They accordingly use their power both in perpetrating impositions upon shippers and in arrogantly refusing to right them after made.

The conduct of ocean steamships in this respect has been little touched upon. They are often worse than railroads. In the first place they insist upon the consignor signing a contract which goes as far as any contract can to exonerate the carrying company from every accident or mistreatment that could possibly affect the goods in transit. If the contract is not signed the goods are not received for shipment.

When the goods arrive in this country they are perhaps damaged. The steamship company is not particularly interested. They have a contract which blocks any damage suits, and they rely in all cases upon the statement that the damage came from some heavy storm, or "act of God," for the effects of which they are not responsible. Under the contract which has been signed, the consignee must actually prove that the goods had careless treatment en route, which it is next to impossible to do. Consequently he bites his nails and takes his medicine.

In the great majority of cases a steamship company would pay righteous claims like this rather than stand a law suit. They realize that most of their victims—none of their victims in small cases, in fact—will not sue them, for business reasons, and they accordingly take advantage of what amounts to practical immunity.

Railroad companies are often less arbitrary than steamship companies, because they are more directly subject to the law than ocean steamships, but there has always been great difficulty in getting them to attend promptly to claims. Like the steamships, the railroads know that in small claims shippers hesitate to sue, because an offended railroad can make the situation intensely unpleasant.

An organization to promptly begin legal action on all claims not settled within a reasonable time would clarify the situation in a very short time.

There has been a little Boston hothouse asparagus in market, ranging from $6 to $6.50 per dozen. The demand has been good, considering the price.

Virginia to Have a Food Law.

The House bill creating a dairy and food commissioner for Virginia was called up by Senator Hart, of Roanoke, and passed by the Senate under suspension of the rules on Wednesday morning. Senator Hart said that since the passage of similar laws by the Federal Government and many of the States, Virginia was being made the dumping ground for a great mass of food products that had been rejected elsewhere as unfit to be eaten.

These Fish Cannot be Excelled.

The Niagara Fish Company, of Lake street, Buffalo, N. Y., make a specialty of winter-caught fish that are taken at a temperature of 40 degrees below zero, and are immediately frozen so solid that the delicious flavor of the fish is retained. Their lower Lake fish cannot be excelled and bring you the best quality at the lowest price. The firm has for years made a special study of the conditions. It will pay you to get in touch with this firm by sending for their Fast Day Art Calendar and price-list.

The Garden Barrow You Need.

You surely want the best garden barrow made when the cost is about the same as the ordinary kind. The 211 Garden Barrow, sold by James M. Vance & Co., of Philadelphia, is admitted to be the best on the market and a trial order will convince you of the truth of this statement.

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

Here You Have It

The Five-Jar Fixture

This fixture is made in both Oak and Cherry; is substantially made, with 3-coat finish. Instead of the old-style hinges it is operated by lifting upon bale and swinging to right, thus completely exposing Jar for use. It fills the want of a larger jar display, occupying no more room than the 4-jar fixture. Besides being a silent salesman, it is an economizer. Top Jar revolves, thus making it convenient for the merchant. All trimmings nickel plated. Write for prices, etc.

Two Reasons for Horses

You prefer horses to automobiles for delivery for either one of two reasons:—

Either you love horses, or believe they're cheaper.

If you love horses, we have nothing to say except that it's an expensive love, when automobiles do so much more work for the money.

If you believe horses are cheaper delivery than the Lindsley Car, you're wrong, begging your pardon. The Lindsley Car will run 30 miles on one gallon of gasoline, and it will carry 1500 pounds during every foot of the way.

Can horses do that? Write about it.

Do You Want to Make $300 More Every Year?

It is a mighty nice thing to be able to increase your profits by such a tidy sum as $300 a year on an investment of less than $20, but that is what you can do if you will put in an Acme Peanut Roaster (equipped for kerosene, gas or gasoline), the simplest and cheapest automatic roaster made. Anybody can operate it. There is nothing to get out of order and little or no expense in running it.

Give your customers a chance to buy freshly roasted peanuts and you will make from $1 to $3 a day. We would like to tell you more about it.

ATSATT BROS.

24 Pearl St. MATTAPOISETT, MASS.

WE HAVE THE BEST OF REASONS FOR TALKING ABOUT IT

We make a point of exploiting the fact that you will find "The Bottom as Good as the Top" in Apelpi Evaporated Apples, simply because usually the top is very much better than the bottom. We pride ourselves on this particular brand, have built up a big demand for it on its quality alone—you can do the same thing.

HERE IS YOUR QUESTION ANSWERED

Why put in Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa when you are selling five brands now? Well, because it is different from the rest, for one reason. It is the only cocoa packed in glass. It stands alone, and you know how novelty helps a thing to sell. The grocer who infuses a little novelty into his business is the grocer who succeeds.

Another thing, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa is better than the rest. That isn't a bluff, honestly. We take out of our cocoa, in the making, a substance which other manufacturers allow in, greatly to the injury of the flavor of their goods.

Now do you know why you should sell it?

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

40 cents a pound

Packed in ½-lb. jars, 6 and 12-lb. boxes

CROFT & ALLEN CO. Philadelphia PENNSYLVANIA

WHY AND BECAUSE

Why has the Exton Cracker kept growing in popularity from 1847 to 1908? Because you can induce people to buy some other oyster cracker only once, and because you can induce them to stop using the Exton only once. Why does the Exton cracker lead and the others follow? Because there is no other oyster cracker for the Exton to follow, so it must lead.

If You Want Dividends From Our Money

Here is what we honestly believe to be the very best line of tinned meat products packed—the "Veribest" line.

There is strength in a full line. It is not only a good deal more systematic to handle one manufacturer's line, instead of the corned beef of one and the ox tongue of another, but it is self-protective.

You are dealing with one concern instead of four or five.

This is true always, provided it is a good line. The "Veribest" line has to be good. Even if we weren't good enough business men to make it as good as it could possibly be made on general principles, the Government inspection would.

These are superfine products, and they always will be superfine. To sell them is to get dividends from the most extensive meat advertising in the world.

THE CORN WITHOUT HULLS

Specialties Like This Boom Trade

Winorr Corn is canned corn in the sense that it is corn packed in a can, but it is not canned corn in the ordinary sense at all.

Canned corn means corn packed with the hulls on. Good, nevertheless? Yes until you taste Winorr, which is packed without the hulls.

Winorr Corn is a delicious specialty — just the tender, delicious, milky kernels of fancy sugar corn.

You can sell it just as surely as thousands of other grocers do.

Watch the Insects Swarm to the Light

Almost every living thing is attracted by light—particularly is this so with the greatest of living things—human beings. The store-keepers who do the biggest business keep their places working for them after business hours. They put goods in their windows at bargain prices, then "turn on the light" so people can see them. One person attracted, who becomes a customer, pays what the light costs, the rest are extra profit. Write us and we will show you how to make your store work for you while you sleep.

Do you know how cheap Electricity is? Ever think of using it to Grind Coffee? Ask the Manager of the nearest Power House. He will post you on the convenience and economy of Electricity in your business. An will save your clerks' time, your customers' time, and advertise your store. Write for catalogue describing our various Electric Mills, with capacities for granulating from four ounces to nine pounds of coffee per minute.

The illustration shows our double mill No. 08712, with motor for direct current; one mill fitted with grinders for granulating, and the other for pulverizing. Each iron hopper holds six pounds of coffee. There are two speeds, fast and slow, which can be instantly changed from one to the other; at fast speed this mill granulates three pounds of coffee per minute. Fitted with ¾ H. P. motor for direct current, or with ½ H. P. motor for alternating current. The latter for slow speed only. Can be regulated while running for grinding either fine or coarse.

We will gladly give any information desired about these mills.

You Can't Match It Anywhere

If you want to give your customers the very finest corn ever packed it must be "Onarga Country Gentleman." Don't the following reasons convince you that this is true?

1. We grow our own seed at a cost of 13c per lb.
2. We grow every kernel of corn that goes into our cans.
3. Our farms are in the Natural Corn Belt—it doesn't grow as fine anywhere else.
4. We cook our corn by the New Automatic Process during which the cans turn continuously bringing the corn to the heat instead of the heat to the corn. This means that every grain is cooked the same—which isn't the case with the ordinary process because the corn nearest the tin is cooked too much when that in the centre is done.
5. The contents of every can is exactly the same, white, perfect, delightfully flavored. Open a sample, compare it with your best corn and you will see what this means.

$3.00 FROM $1.50

James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet has been on the market so long that it seems hardly necessary to speak of its quality; most people know it as the finest, cleanest rennet made.

Not all grocers know that they can double their money on this specialty, however—an unusual chance with an article so high-grade.

Costs $1.50 per dozen, brings back $3.00.

"The Pickles and Table Condiments prepared by The Williams Bros. Co., Detroit, Mich., are the very best. For sale by the wholesale trade all over the United States."

They're Tired of the Imitations

Don't you think your trade are about tired of the rainbow-hued imitation gelatine that desire for novelty has given some vogue during the last few years?

Don't you think they'd like some real gelatine—the pure, fresh, old-fashioned gelatine made of fine calves' stock, clear spring water and nothing else.

You'd probably be surprised at the eager welcome Chalmers' Gelatine would get from your customers. Try it. Granulated or shredded.

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It costs you nothing to find out what our plan is—can you afford not to?

Could You Make a Living Then?

Suppose you sold nothing but bulk sugar, could you make a living?

No, you couldn't; and the chance is the more you sold, the further away from a living you'd be.

When you count the work of handling sugar, and the cost of the work, and add to that the loss every grocer makes through "good measure," you'll find you're practically making nothing on sugar at all.

But you could make a living on Franklin Carton Sugar alone. Every package pays a clean-cut profit—not eaten up either by too much work or overweight. As a business proposition it's five times as good as bulk sugar can be at its very best.

Clean, sanitary cartons that preserve strength and freshness. Two-pound cartons and 2, 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100-pound cotton bags : : :

Our Scales Stand the Test

The new low platform No. 140 DAYTON Scale

The State of Massachusetts recently passed a new Law defining the duties of the Sealer of Weights and Measures, in connection with the computing devices used on computing scales.

Our modern up-to-date computing scales meet every requirement of the law and test out with greater exactness than any other known style or make.

Greater than this, however, is the test of service between merchant and customer. Merchants use them for the protection of profit and the saving of time. Customers trade where they are used because they know they are sure of a square deal.

Moneyweight Scales are an absolute necessity to the economical and successful retailing of meats and groceries. We build them on all the known principles of scale construction adaptable to all kinds of merchandising.

The increased confidence of the merchants of Massachusetts in our computing scales is shown by the enormous increase in sales since the law went into effect. We are strong advocates of laws which will give the greatest protection to both merchant and customer.

For those who are now using old Dayton Scales or computing scales of other make, and wish to bring their equipment up-to-date, we have a very attractive exchange proposition which will be sent on request.

Do not wait for our agent to call on you, but send for him.

DELAY IS EXPENSIVE.

Handsome Presents Go With It

ROYAL PEANUT BUTTER is the kind that brings it—Universal Coupons, which you can exchange for almost anything you want. In addition to this it is the most carefully prepared product of its kind ever made. The man and the monkey are both animals, but there is a mighty difference between them. There is just as much difference between Royal and ordinary peanut butter. Your customers will tell you so if you get them to try Royal Peanut Butter.

Take Your Choice

Let us assume that two concerns are making Macaroni, Spaghetti, Noodles and Pastels.

One of them cares nothing for you, does all of its work on your customers to make them demand that you should handle the goods, whether they pay you a profit or not.

The other goes straight to you, works with you to make you want to sell the goods, spends its advertising money with you, gives you Universal Coupons to make the goods more interesting, and does everything possible to make you a friend instead of a lackey.

Whose goods are you going to sell?

Our Macaroni, Spaghetti, Noodles and Pastels are as good as our bread.

We've Taken You into Partnership on These Goods

We divide our profits with dealers by putting our advertising appropriation into Universal Coupons to enable them to get anything they need in their stores or homes without paying for it.

A floor treated with Moore's Wax will last twice as long as one that isn't. Your customers are getting this wax from paint stores. You might as well have this money. If you were buying corn, and two samples were before you, one shading from yellow to light brown at the edges of the corn, showing that it has been cooked too much near the tin, and the other pure white, every kernel sweet and perfect, which would you buy. The one you would buy is the one your customers will keep buying—"Onarga Country Gentleman," cooked by the new automatic process—perfect, unmatchable.

No Rival for Winorr

THE CORN WITHOUT HULLS

"I wouldn't handle it; I'm selling enough brands of canned corn now?"

Do you say that to our Winorr proposition? If you do, you can hardly know about Winorr, because in the ordinary sense it is not canned corn at all. It is a corn specialty—corn packed without the hulls. You have nothing like it now, and for that reason it competes with nothing and has no competition.

True, it may cut in somewhat to your sales of other brands, but what of it, if it makes you as much profit and gives the customer better satisfaction?

We also pack a full line of finest quality Berries and Vegetables, moist and condensed Mince Meat, Catsup and Salad Dressing.

We are the largest canners of Sauer Kraut in the United States.

Oleo Men Go Into Magazines

Forced to Do Something to Counteract the Continued Heavy Handicap of the 10 Cent Federal Oleo Tax. Western Oleo Man's Vigorous Defense of Substitute Product.

Driven by the continued existence of the Federal 10-cent oleo tax law of 1902, which they have vainly tried to repeal, the oleo interests are now going into the magazines with their arguments, striving to overcome the public antipathy to their product.

Somebody has sent the "Grocery World" a copy of the last issue of "The Ohio Magazine," which contains an article on "An Appeal for Oleomargarine," by Henry C. Pirrung, who is connected with one of the large Western oleo concerns. The article is long and cannot be reproduced entire. The salient parts appear below. Mr. Pirrung endeavors to demonstrate four things:—

First, that oleo is practically chemically identical with butter.

Second, that it is better than butter because it does not deteriorate.

Third, that if it were not for oleo the price of butter would advance to a prohibitive point.

Fourth, that the placing of a 10-cent tax on oleo has caused the first milk and butter famine in years.

The main portion of Mr. Pirrung's defense is as follows:—

> Butter made from milk and cream and the product of a dairy, whether it be produced on the farm or manufactured in a creamery, has for its basis a certain fat value, and it is this value that chiefly concerns nutrition.
> Chemically speaking, after deducting the water, salt, ash and other non-oleaginous substances from butter, there remains a residium of 100 per cent. fat. This fat is of extreme importance to the destruction or promotion of health, because of its susceptibility to contamination, and, more particularly, to atmospherical changes which cause butter to become rancid. Great care is exercised in manufacturing butter to keep it sweet, large quantities of high-grade salt being introduced for this purpose; yet science has so far failed to discover an effective remedial agent to prevent speedy deterioration, on account of these fats being manufactured in their raw state.
> Coupled with its non-keeping and variable qualities, differing with each churning and maker of butter, a far more important reason for a butter substitute presented itself, namely, "quantity." The demand for a uniform grade of butter was far in excess of the supply, consequently, the luxury of fresh butter was beyond the purse of all except the rich, and the inferior grades of butter were used for baking and cooking.
> Inventive, adaptable and appreciative genius immediately combined reason and science, concluding that, if butter were the fat extract from milk and cream, and milk, being the direct natural result of Nature's marvel of converting the mammary fat glands of the animal into the fluid product milk, why could not a new butter be made from the primary fat? Further reasoning admitted that this method would lessen the danger of contamination, lessen the process of manufacture and thereby lessen the cost of the product. Also, greater quantities could be produced, assuring, above all, uniformity of quality.
> Science followed reason by selecting the choicest fat of the beef, freeing it from tissue and fibre by a simple but effective cooking process, from which resulted a choice oil called "oleo oil," which was microscopically and chemically the counterpart of butter fat.
> Another fat was later discovered which proved an equivalent to beef fat, in that by the process of melting and cooking the select leaf fat of the pig called "neutral," which, added to the beef fat, made a combination more acceptable and adaptable for butter purposes than the original "oleo oil." To these two ingredients were added milk and cream, sufficient to blend and harmonize the other fats, and the same amount of salt and color usually used in making butter.
> To the satisfaction of reason and science this "new butter" product proved a revelation, not only in that a more uniform, equally nutritive and cheaper product was discovered, but one which would not become rancid, because all of the fats used in the composition were thoroughly cooked..
> The fact that this new process of butter-making necessitated the cooking of fats, was more satisfactory than any other, because it eliminated the use of the only raw fat on our table, and brought into use a thoroughly cooked butter product.
> Unluckily, but subsequently fortunate for this new discovery, manufacturing pirates and unscrupulous dealers debased this food article and sold it for butter with such abandon and audacity that many States passed stringent laws to regulate its sale. * * * * * * * *
> During the season of 1905 and 1906 statistics of the Elgin Butter Boards, both East and West, proved that the quantity of butter was short and, in consequence, the price correspondingly high, and as the year progressed the quantity grew less and the price higher, until forty cents per pound was asked for butter by the retailer.
>
> Just at this time statistical events proved that a transposition of the old adage, "Necessity is the mother of invention;" occurred, as "invention was the mother of necessity," because the sale of butterine, even in its uncolored state, increased until the shortage was relieved. The sale of butterine for the year ending June 30, 1907, aggregated 71,366,775 pounds.
> In addition to all of the foregoing stipulations for regulating the sale and manufacture of oleomargarine, the Pure Food Department of our Government has placed inspectors in all factories, whose duties require the inspection of all materials composing butterine, sanitary and hygienic conditions, in fact—every infinitesimal detail pertaining to the product.
> We, therefore, find that this product has been under governmental supervision and inspection since 1886 and that under the stringent laws enacted to safeguard its purity and healthfulness the Government has, during this long interim, approved of its manufacture and sale.
> It seems only reasonable to assume that if this product had not been exceptional in all of its qualifications, to even satisfy the most scrupulous, its manufacture and sale would have been prohibited. Yet, in the face of this incontrovertible and sweeping governmental indorsement, the "Dairy Press' has insistently belittled, maligned, bedraggled and falsely accused this product and its manufacture, and unreservedly denounced legislation and legislators that in any manner favored butterine.
> Can this not be construed as an indirect affront to our Government?
> What motive is back of all this "Dairy Press," "Dairy Union," "Elgin and Butter Board" agitation?
> It is justifiable to assume from a competitive standpoint that butterine has kept butter to a normal standard of quality and price.
> Figures of the "Elgin Butter Board" show that creamery butter is, on the average, five cents per pound higher since the amendment of 1902 taxing colored oleo 10 cents instead of 2, became effective, and this average increase means a gain of 23 per cent. over former prices. This, however, is only the average increase in the price of butter, which, at certain seasons of the year, mainly the severe Winter and early Spring months, is nearly doubled, on account of the insufficient quantity.
> This is all the more significant when one considers that only a few years ago our exporting of butter was a conspicuous item, while today, and during recent years, our exports of this commodity are and have been so meagre as to almost escape notice in our foreign commerce. And yet—retaining all of the butter production of our country for home consumption, the dairy industry has been unable to supply either the demand for butter or milk—as forcibly evidenced by the several milk famines, especially in New York and Chicago, during the past two years.
> We never experienced a milk or butter famine prior to 1902, but with the encroachment of municipalities on our farm and prairie lands, owing to the tremendous and astounding increase of population, it is only reasonable to assume that more frequent shortages of dairy products are awaiting us.
> In the light of these conditions and facts, and in justice to those whom all food laws should serve as a benefactor—the consuming public—is it not high time to lay aside either the hypocritical or pantomine mask worn by the opposition and declare their intention as to their desire for future legislation? * * *
> There seems to be but one remedy to please all interests, and that is, to put up butterine in individual "Government stamped" packages, ranging from one to ten pounds each, with such superscription containing the word "oleomargarine" that will safeguard the consumers and prevent deception in its sale. A small tax of say one-fourth cent or one-half cent per pound should be placed on this product, to reimburse the Government for the actual expense of supervision, and make the penalties for deception or fraud so heavy and severe that no one will dare infract.

Pittsburg Produce Jobbers Lose Their Case.

Court Decides Pennsylvania Railroad Company has Right to Charge Storage for Holding Unloaded Cars on the Track.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Pittsburg, Pa., March 10, 1908.

The local produce men have lost their freight charge case The suit brought by the P. R. R. Co. against the M. O. Coggins Co. to recover freight storage charges has been decided in favor of the railroad.

The suit was an amicable one to settle the question of storage which has been the cause of constant warfare. The Pennsylvania entered suit against the Coggins Co. to recover $200 alleged to be due for holding unloaded cars on track. The company admitted it owed the railroad company more than $3,000, but as the proceeding was an amicable one the amount was not important. Judge Evans upheld the contention of the railroad that the storage was a just charge, and at the same time declared the Wilbert law, which provides that the maximum charge for demurrage or storage, or both, should not exceed the regulation price of $1 a day, unconstitutional. The Coggins Co. gave immediate notice that the case would be appealed and such action has already been taken by its attorneys. A large number of suits have been entered against leading firms in the produce business here, but the local people will fight the railroad because they are confident the Wilbert law is a good one and will stand the review of the Supreme Court.

This storage charge was put on at the request of certain big receivers in hope that it would stop the peddling in the yard and make it a wholesale section. The retail dealers said it was a scheme to freeze them out, but the jobbers denied that.

Retailers' Annual Dinner a Success. New Exhibitors for the Food Exposition. Jobbers Said to be Preparing Fight Against Kirkman & Sons. Sugar Refiners Will No Longer Guarantee Prices Beyond Thirty Days. Banana Trust Suit Thrown Out. Erie Preserving Co. in Trouble. Small News of the Trade.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, March 13, 1908.

About 300 members and guests of the New York Retail Grocers' Union were present at the annual dinner and reception given Wednesday evening, the 26th anniversary of the organization, in Vienna Hall. Officers of grocers' societies in Brooklyn and the Bronx were present to show the good will of all toward their Manhattan brothers. The event was most successful from a social point of view. The feast was such as left nothing to be desired in that respect. There were excellent speeches, plenty of music and dancing in the latter part of the night.

The speakers included August Eitzen, the toastmaster; Fred. Otten, the president; Henry Lohmann, the president of the United Retail Grocers' Association of Brooklyn; H. C. W. Beckmann, the president of the Manhattan and Bronx Retail Grocers' Association, and L. J. Callanan, without whom no grocers' banquet in New York is complete.

Among the points emphasized were that the position of grocers is now much more comfortable than formerly, because whatever complaints may be made by food inspectors, the responsibility is placed properly on the packer or wholesaler. It was also said that the public is getting better food than formerly as the result of recent movements and legislation, and this is for the interest of the retailer who is brought into the closest relations with the consumers.

President Otten said that as the result of organization the retail grocers have achieved a position as solid and substantial merchants which was not accorded to them in days within the memory of most of the members. He took occasion, however, to say that in order to get the best results the members should be more regular in attendance at the meetings instead of turning out in force only on some special occasion like that they were then celebrating.

Mr. Lohmann spoke for closer relations between the various societies of grocers in order to combat evils that confront all and to work together for desirable ends.

Mr. Callanan confined his remarks to the preparations for the Food Exposition which the New York Union will open on March 26th and of which he will be manager. He said that according to all indications this will be the most comprehensive exposition of the kind ever given in this city. The fifty-three spaces already leased will be occupied by forty-six different firms and companies, so that nearly every space will represent a separate exhibitor, instead of various exhibitors having each several spaces.

In addition to the list of exhibitors at the coming food exposition, published last week, the following have since leased space: Hobart Electric Co., John M. Chapman Co., Egg-O-See Co., Mohawk Condensed Milk Co., Louis Meyer, Genesee Pure Fruit Co., Beadelston Worez Co., E. Pritchard, Anger Baking Co., Duffy's Apple Juice, J. R. Smith & Co., Dustlay Co., S. Liebmann's Brewing Co., Royal Chemical Co., Standard Butter Cutter Co., Runkel Bros' Co., Salada Tea Co., Hecker, Jones-Jewell Milling Co., Drake Bros' Co., Worcester Salt Co.

It is said that a number of the jobbers of this city have arranged in the last few days to take up their fight with Kirkman & Sons by pushing soaps of the Pacific Coast Borax Co. and of A. Hoefner. These companies, it is said, have offered terms which will enable the jobber to sell to retailers slightly below the prices the latter have been paying for Kirkman soaps, at the same time presenting attractive premiums.

The jobber is to be enabled to do this and at the same time retain a profit satisfactory to himself. This is a continuation of the battle which began when the jobbers tried in vain to get Kirkman & Sons to cease selling to retailers and to sell only to jobbers.

Committees have been at work in the last week arranging for the annual convention to be held by the National Association of Wholesale Grocers, June 3d to 5th, in Atlantic City, N. J. Among those who are to speak at the banquet on the second day of the convention are United States Treasurer Treat, Governor Fort, of New Jersey; Governor Hughes, of New York, and Dr. Wiley, of the Government's Food Bureau.

Notices have been sent out by the American Sugar Refining Co. and the National Sugar Refining Co. that they will no longer guarantee prices more than thirty days, the object being to stop buyers from making contracts for more sugar than they are ready to take within the prescribed time after the orders are booked. The refiners evidently intend that if the buyer wishes to speculate he shall take whatever risk there is of prices falling.

The first of the cases against a number of employees of the American Sugar Refining Co., who are accused of trying to defraud the Government, was placed on trial this week before Judge Chatfield and a jury in the United States Circuit Court in Brooklyn. Eight men have been indicted for conspiracy, the number including Oliver Spitzer, the company's dock superintendent, and Thomas Kehoe, the weigher, who was in charge of the scales which were fixed, it is charged, for the purpose of underweighing the sugar as it was unloaded on the dock and thus depriving the Government of revenue.

Spitzer was also indicted on the charge of trying to bribe the Secret Service agents, who made the arrests, to drop the case, and the bribery case was placed on trial first. The two Secret Service agents, Richard Parr and J. O. Brezinski, were among the witnesses. They said that the loss to the Government on the single cargo unloaded at the time of the arrest was about $3,000. After Kehoe had checked the weights the Treasury agents appeared and caused the sugar to be reweighed. Testimony was given as to a machine for making sugar scales register below the true weight. The scales used on the dock raided by the Treasury agents had a wire spring in the scale beam, according to the testimony which the Government is to produce, it is said. The first case is still on trial.

The much talked about suit of the American Banana Co. against the United Fruit Co., in which damages in $6,000,000 were asked for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, was on Monday dismissed by Judge Hough, in the United States Circuit Court, who held that the court did not have jurisdiction. The plaintiff claimed that the defendant intrigued so as to induce the Government of a Central American country to seize a strip of land on which the plaintiff had its plantations.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Pineapple Cheese.

A hard yellow make of cheese moulded into the form of a pineapple. Pineapple juice possesses in a remarkable degree the power of curdling milk.

Pimento, Jamaica Pepper, or Allspice.

Is the dried unripe berry of the pimento tree, known as Eugenia pimenta or pimenta officinalis. The tree is a fine evergreen, growing twenty to thirty feet high, of the myrtle bloom order, very common in Jamaica, West Indies and South America. Its leaves are of oblong or oval shape, of a deep shiny green color, and about four inches long. It is largely cultivated in plantations called "pimento walks," but grows to perfection, in a wild state, in Jamaica, whence British importations have been mostly derived; hence the name Jamaica pepper. The berries are light and brittle, of roundish form and crowned with the remains of the calyx, generally in the form of a raised, sear-like ring. Each corn contains two dark brown reniform seeds. They are called "Allspice," from the fancy that they have the flavor of cinnamon, cloves and nutmegs combined. The corns are about the same size as huckleberries, and are sometimes adulterated with mustard husks. There are also inferior kinds, such as pimento acris.

Pistachio Nuts.

These are the fruit of a kind of turpentine tree, called by botanists pistachio vera, a native of Western Asia, and much cultivated in the Greek Islands. The tree grows ten to thirty feet high in several countries round the Mediterranean, also in Persia and Mexico. It is an evergreen, and has small flowers without petals, from which spring the oblong and pointed, or olive-shaped droops, not unlike filberts in size and shape, and are known under various names as above. The kernel, of a bright greenish color, is very pleasant, rich and oily, and is covered with a yellowish, or reddish outer husk or skin, but which splits into two halves when fully ripe. It loses much of its beauty by drying, but improves in flavor. It closely resembles a sweet almond to the taste.

Pistachio kernels are mostly used as a dessert fruit, but also in French confectionery and in perfumery.

The Wholesale Grocers' Platform.

The annual meeting of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, held in Philadelphia last week, was marked by the to-be-expected self-gratulation over the attack which the jobbers have recently made upon the rights of organized retailers. From the reports of the president and secretary the "Grocery World" makes a few extracts, reproducing them with what it deems to be pertinent comment.

The president, Robert C. Bursk, reported in part as follows:—

> The third object of the Association is to establish harmonious relations between the manufacturer, jobber and retailer, to the end that the jobber be universally recognized as the best channel through which the manufacturer should distribute his products. I need not impress upon you the importance of this object, which is probably receiving more attention to-day from the different organizations throughout the country than any other.

Admitting for the minute that the jobber is a better man for the manufacturer to deal with than the retailer, and the "Grocery World" believes that with certain qualifications he undoubtedly is, why is he? There is only one reason—the manufacturer's convenience: because it is easier for the manufacturer to sell a hundred cases and keep one account than to sell a hundred orders of one case each and keep one hundred accounts. If there is any other reason why the jobber is the better distributer for the manufacturer, the "Grocery World" has never heard of it.

This then being established as the standard, in what way does the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association fail to conform with it? Isn't it possible for the manufacturer to sell the association one hundred cases and open one account, precisely as with any other jobber?

> The solution is entirely in the hands of the jobber. No one can question the unfairness of the manufacturer who recognizes the wholesale grocer as the most economical and convenient distributer of his products, who distributes a percentage of his business through the jobber and the balance direct to the retailer at the same price. What is more unfair than the manufacturer who comes to you with a contract which you are compelled to sign, to sell his goods at a certain price, and who will go to combinations of retailers with the same contract, and yet allow them to violate it by giving rebates and dividends, and in that way absolutely discriminating and placing at a great disadvantage the great number of retailers who are not members of these combinations?

This is half true. Admittedly would it be unfair for the manufacturer to sell a jobber one hundred cases at $1 a case and at the same time sell one case to a retailer for $1. But no manufacturer does that or ever did. To sell a jobber one hundred cases at $1 a case and at the same time to sell an organized body of retailers one hundred cases at $1 a case is not only not unfair, it is the only fair and decent thing to do.

The contention that it is unfair to tie up a jobber with a limited price, while permitting a retailers' association to rebate, is true. Both should be put on the same footing, and so far as the "Grocery World's" knowledge goes both are.

> We must recognize the fact that there are many conflicting conditions in the distribution of manufactured products in which the jobber, retailer and manufacturer must be considered, but I believe to-day that the great majority of the retailers throughout the country are in favor of the jobber as the proper distributer of goods, for this great majority or retailers is being discriminated against even more than the jobbers. The jobber has a duty in this matter also. He must, in order to have the co-operation of the retailer, clean his own house. If you are selling any consumers, cut them out. You can't afford to be a competitor of your own customers.
> The question of just who is a consumer has never been clearly defined, but until it is you can afford to take a broad view of it. Some day in the near future I believe that the jobber and retailer of the country will get together and agree upon who shall be considered a consumer.

But it is much more important to decide what shall be considered a jobber. "Jobber" of itself is an empty name.

> Some manufacturers have recently adopted the policy of distributing their products through the jobber, and many others are seriously considering it. The success of this object depends entirely upon you, and the eyes of the manufacturer are on you now. When the manufacturer adopts this policy your work just commences. We have got to make good. We must absolutely stand by the manufacturer who stands by us. Many manufacturers are afraid you won't, and that is why they are watching and waiting.
> You will be interested in knowing that two of the manufacturers who adopted this policy on the first of the year have both increased their business since then over last year; and one of them, with the most numerous competitors, and against whom the greatest fight has been made, increased his business 33 1-3 per cent. Could this have been possible without the co-operation of the jobber, his buyer and his salesmen? The importance and absolute necessity of this co-operation cannot be too strongly impressed upon you.

The only way in which a manufacturer who has had his goods thrown out of a thousand live retail stores can have increased his business during that period is by jobbers giving him special orders as a sop. That, the writer happens to know, is exactly what has happened in this case. It is not in any sense a legitimate increase in business, for it is one thing to have retailers distributing goods to actual consumers, and another to have jobbers—who never considered it good business to do so before—buy them out of gratitude.

But in all probability these jobbers will push the two brands in question—for a while.

An Empty Fraud.

As shown by some matter published elsewhere in this paper, there is a campaign on in California against the long-continued practice of facing prunes and other dried fruits, but particularly prunes.

The opponents of the practice denounce it because it is dishonest. But it is not dishonest—it is simply silly. The only party to a sale of prunes who might be deceived by the fact that the top layer is better than those below is the consumer. And the consumer does not buy prunes by the box. Both the jobber and the retailer know prunes are faced, so that the thing becomes simply a silly little empty fraud that captures no one and is therefore useless. Stop it by all means.

Devilish Competition.

Really some of the devices of mercantile competition are little short of devilish in their evil ingenuity and their total disregard of others' rights. Witness the tale which some competitors of the Heinz Co. gave wings to only a short time ago—that the concern named had contributed $50,000 to the cause of prohibition.

The story certainly succeeded in doing what the author intended. Just now prohibition is a tender subject and lines are being very sharply drawn. Hundreds of saloons and liquor-selling restaurants where Heinz products had been used promptly threw them out. Much harm had been done by the time the firm ran the lie out and scotched. Whatever its views on the liquor problem, it has made no contribution to either side.

Unfair.

There is a class of merchants who are greatly hindering the return of normal business conditions by lying down on their current obligations. They argue that the creditor knows money is scarce and payments slow, and therefore will be lenient when they plead the general condition. Men of this class are taking advantage of the general depression to give themselves time which in many cases they do not need, and are thus doing much to make the condition—to their own detriment—permanent.

This is not only unfair; it is suicidal. No man stands alone in the business world; we are all bricks, placed on end side by side. Knock one over and it mows the line down. That is why the man who by his own act helps to keep his creditor in a hole is sowing a harvest which he himself will have to eat of. He may only get a mouthful; but he will get something.

More, the man who takes a single day longer than he needs to take to pay his bills is doing as he would not be done by. It makes no difference whether the creditor, under stress, is willing to wait or not; the obligation to pay promptly is still present.

Only a Grocer.

Somebody sends the "Grocery World" a marked copy of the "Catholic Abstainer" for March. This is the marked paragraph:—

> It was not in the wild and woolly West, but in the Quaker City that a man, speaking of a prospectively large funeral, alluded to the deceased as the brother of John Blank, the saloon-keeper. When asked what business the dead man had pursued, the answer, rather slightingly spoken, was, "Oh, he was a grocer." Such is the social distinction in some quarters between the purveyor of food and the dispenser of drink. Starvation ought not to be unusual in such a locality.

This very probably happened. The reigning political system of the day has taught the saloonkeeper that his business is paramount and superior. And in a way it is, for no other business is so entrenched politically.

The grocer sells food to nourish the body, the saloonkeeper sells that which destroys it, at least in part. Which is the more useful member of the community?

Dr. Wiley Out-Wileyed

Most of the readers of this paper know the "Grocery World's" opinion of Dr. H. W. Wiley, the Government chemist who up to recently dominated the attitude of the Government on the Federal food law.

In a nutshell that opinion is that while he is a scientist of highest degree, a bull in a china shop is a methodical person compared to him as a settler of business problems.

The number of times his superiors have reversed him in the last year indicates that they share this opinion.

I intend to present now the most remarkable illustration of the obliquity of Dr. Wiley's judgment I have ever seen.

As counsel for a large Eastern honey importer I recently acquainted Dr. Wiley with some facts which I thought ought to be told in order to save innocent honey men trouble.

Honey when it comes to this country is not merchantable. Not because of anything except that it is so loaded with sticks and dirt that nobody would buy it, let alone eat it.

To make it merchantable it must be heated till liquid and then strained.

My client discovered accidentally that the simple application of this heat to pure honey caused a certain chemical change which under a test used by Government chemists gave all the indications of adulteration. This, mind, in honey that could not by any possibility be impure.

When I say "gave all indications of adulteration," I mean only by a chemical analysis. The appearance wasn't changed, neither was the flavor or any other practical, visible characteristic.

In order, therefore, that some honey seller should not be wrongly judged, I laid this discovery before the Federal Food and Drug Board. My reply was by Dr. Wiley, chief, and this is what he said:—

> This bureau was not ignorant of the fact that the heating of honey denatures it to a certain extent and produces therein a quantity of invert sugar which of course cannot be distinguished from invert sugar made in other ways. (Invert sugar is an adulteration.—E. J. B.) This fact does not change the status of the case, since a product made in this way cannot be regarded as honey in the ordinary sense of that term. You acknowledge this in a statement of your letter as follows: "As you may know, however, Mexican honey in its natural condition is not merchantable." When honey is changed from its natural state it can no longer be considered, legally or commercially, as honey.

If pure honey which has simply been heated is no longer honey what is it?

It can't be compound honey, for nothing has been taken from it and nothing added.

It can't be imitation honey, for it is the real thing.

It can't be blended honey, because no other substance has been blended with it.

I say again, what is it?

Dr. Wiley's contention justifies all of the following conclusions:

That a food product, pure but not clean, when heated and Royal Baking Powder Trust Gets Big Competitor.

Corn Products Refining Co. Announces Entering the Baking Powder Business. Will Make Cream of Tartar and Phosphate Powder.

From present appearances, there is a sharp baking powder war ahead. The Royal Baking Powder Trust, which sells most of the cream of tartar powder sold, is to have a rival much more formidable than itself—the Corn Products Refining Co., sometimes known as the Glucose Trust.

For several weeks there has been a rumor that the glucose people intended going into the baking powder business, but it was not confirmed until last Wednesday, when the president of the company made a statement in which he said his company intended embarking in the business quite extensively and would offer goods to the trade within a short time. The concern will make both a cream of tartar powder and a phosphate powder.

The Royal Baking Powder Trust has never had such a formidable competitor in its own field, and the chance is that some fur will fly before affairs get settled. The Royal Baking Powder Trust has always resented the entrance of anybody else into its field, and seldom stops at anything in the way of competition.

Nothing is yet known as to the Corn Products Co's plans as to prices, but it is generally expected that it will sell its powder, even if prices have to be cut.

Asparagus has not yet fairly started its season, though some little has come forward from Boston hothouses. California asparagus will be due in a very few days.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXXIII.—Work With, Not Against Your Partner.

Help him prove he is right.

A man must be built just about right if he is able to work hard for the success of a move which his best judgment tells him will not succeed, especially if he has openly declared himself to that effect. It takes a really big man to do this little thing, and nine out of every ten partners have the opportunity to show just how big they are.

Just try it for yourself, if you are a partner. The next time your partner makes a move that you consider to be wrong, instead of having a little quarrel over it and then refusing to have anything to do with the matter in the future, thus throwing the entire burden on his shoulders, as so many do, adopt this plan: Talk the matter over with him in a thorough manner, point out all your reasons for expecting failure and show up every pitfall that must be avoided. Then, after all is thoroughly understood, put your own shoulder to the wheel and try your level best to make his move a success for the firm. If you will do this you will find that you will in many instances be able to make a go out of a thing, by your united efforts, that your partner would fail on if left alone to deal with it, and then you not only have the difference in the profits to console you for proving your own previous remarks unwarranted, but the chances are that your partner will see where you were largely responsible for the final success and will not only admire you the more for your good judgment, but also for your effort to help him out. He will understand you better than you have ever been understood before, and will be the more cheerful worker on the next plan you advance. F. A. P.

Bankruptcy Law Amendment Will Help Grocers in Two Ways

So Says Secretary of the National Credit Men's Association. Will Prevent Small Debtors from Ridding Themselves of Debts for Necessaries of Life. Copy of the Amendment.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio,
March 12, 1908.

The following letter received from the National Association of Credit men should be of interest to the retailers of the United States:—

New York, Feb. 17, 1908.

John A. Green, Secretary National Association of Retail Grocers.

Dear Sir:—With reference to the particular amendment to the National Bankruptcy Act which you are interested in, I would state that Senator Nelson has introduced an amendment naming the amount which a bankrupt must owe as $500. I was in Washington recently, at which time I had an interview with the Senator and I told him that there would be no objection from our side of the house against substituting his amendment for the one contained in the Sherley bill. I sincerely trust this matter will be disposed of so that you can make a satisfactory report to the annual meeting of your association.

In my travels through the country, as well as by means of correspondence passing through my hands, I have repeatedly made inquiries as to the extent to which the interests of the retailer have been affected through the acts of bankrupts.

There are cases where bankrupts seek to be discharged from their obligations, all of which have been incurred for what are known as the necessaries of life. In a majority of these cases the pauper oath is taken. In my opinion this does not prevail generally throughout the country, but is confined, comparatively, to a few localities and to a class of people whom I believe you and I would look at twice before extending credit. There is still another element, although I am glad to say it is comparatively small, made up of the professional dead beats, the plunger, the speculator, and others who occupy a prominent position in the public eye for a few months and whose doings are heralded all over the country. The very make-up of such people should be a warning to the retailer who is invited to enter into business transactions with them, but I regret to say that Mr. Retailer very often appears to be afflicted with blindness.

Yours truly,
CHARLES E. MEEK,
Secretary-Treasurer.
National Association of Credit Men.

The following is part of Senate Bill 1570 and contains the $500 clause for the bankruptcy act. This bill, if passed, would prevent anyone from taking advantage of the act unless his debts amounted to over $500:—

A BILL.

To amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, as amended by the act of February 5, 1903.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That section four of an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, as amended by an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States,'" approved February 5, 1903, is hereby amended to read as follows:—

Section 4. Who May Become Bankrupts.—(a) Any person who owes debts exceeding five hundred dollars in the aggregate, except a corporation, shall be entitled to the benefits of this act as a voluntary bankrupt.

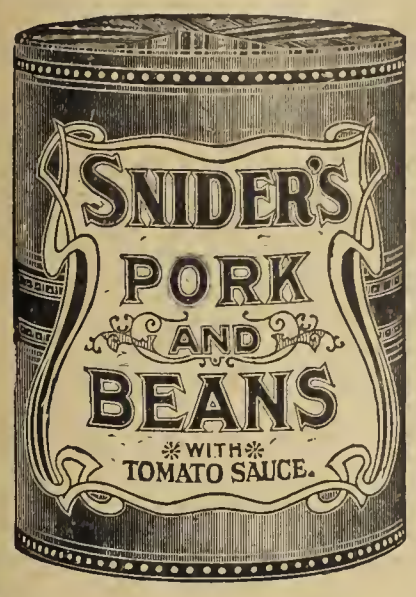
JOHN A. GREEN,
National Secretary.

ASSOCIATION NEWS.

Illinois.

At the Illinois Retail Merchants' convention in Dixon last week, Oscar M. Kling, for three years president of the Chicago Grocers' and Butchers' Association, spoke upon the oleomargarine tax from a retailer's standpoint. The address was followed by adoption of resolutions favoring reduction of the tax on colored oleo from 10 cents to 1 cent per pound, repeal of the section requiring retail dealers in colored oleo to pay a license tax of $48 per year and enforcement of such regulations as to stamping the goods sold as would prevent deception of buyers.

Little Rock, Ark.



The Little Rock (Ark.) Retail Grocers' Association has issued the following notice to its members:—

MAIL ORDER GROCERIES.

Further information from victims of the Chicago grocery house which sent drummers through here selling consumers shows that some of them were badly beaten. One party we find bought $150 worth of this stuff and on opening the peas and other canned goods found that they were absolutely worthless and not fit to use. He also found his mackerel with no brine as well as other spoiled goods. It takes such experiences to teach some people a lesson.

We notice ads in daily papers of a large foreign clothing house soliciting trade among consumers of this city. They have opened sample rooms in one of the hotels and are taking orders from people who ought to be supporting the home merchants. There ought to be some way either by city ordinance or otherwise to keep these people out.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is in very fair condition, though the demand is only very moderate. There have been no changes in price during the week and no developments of any character. Low grades are still scarce and firm, and will probably remain so during the balance of the season. High grades are also steady and firm, but medium grades, which are in the greatest abundance, will likely ease off as the season for new teas approaches.

Coffee.

The coffee market is still very stupid. There is absolutely no speculation on the exchange, one result, at least, of the Brazilian valorization scheme. As a matter of fact, fear of the immense valorization stock has almost stopped outside speculation. The assortment of Santos coffee continues to grow poorer and poorer, and Santos grades are from 1 to 1½ cents higher than the same grades of Rios. As has been explained, this comes from the fact that the syndicate very largely purchased Santos. Mild coffees are steady and unchanged. Java and Mocha are unchanged and in moderate demand. The trade all over the country is still from hand-to-mouth.

Sugar.

The sugar market is firm. Raws have sold at an advance during the week and are offered for April shipment at still another advance, instead of the usual decline as the season advances. Actual and prospective scarcity of raws is the reason. The margin between raw and refined has been made too small by these advances to suit the refiners, and an advance in refined seems almost certain. Some of it may come at any moment. The demand for refined sugar is good.

Syrup and Molasses.

Corn has advanced materially and while glucose has not yet advanced, it is almost certain to do so in the near future. With it will inevitably go up compound syrup. Sugar syrup has been heavily bought for export at higher prices, and this directly affects the domestic market. The present situation is strong. The better grades of molasses have advanced in Louisiana about 3 cents per gallon. The Northern market shows little change as yet, but naturally must follow.

Fish.

The fish market is strong. Irish and Norway mackerel are scarce and firm. Irish have advanced about $1 and are in better demand than Norways, which remain unchanged. Cod, hake and haddock are in rather better demand, but at unchanged prices. Salmon is unchanged and steady. Domestic sardines seem rather weak than otherwise and the demand is only fair. Future prices of $3.20 on ¾ mustards were made during the week, this being 30 cents above last year. Imported sardines are still firm and high by reason of great scarcity.

Canned Goods.

Future tomatoes are dull. Spot tomatoes are in very fair demand at unchanged prices. The market can scarcely be called strong, but is holding its own. Sales of future Maine corn at the prevailing price of 90 cents have been good. Other grades, both spot and future, are unchanged and in fair demand. Peas are quiet on spot, but fairly active as to futures. Peaches are dull and unchanged. Apples are unchanged and in fair demand. The Baltimore general line is unchanged. A future price of $1 on three-pound future spinach has been named, this being a fair average price. California canned goods are unchanged and dull.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are selling in a moderate way at unchanged prices. Peaches are moving fairly at the declined prices, though some holders are still refusing to sell except about on the old basis. This looks dangerous, when it is remembered that prices on the new crop will be forthcoming soon, and will surely be much below present spot prices. Currants are fairly active at unchanged prices. Raisins are very sick, but without any further decline in price. Apples are weak and quiet. Citron and figs are unchanged and quiet. Dates are fairly active at unchanged prices.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are lower, due in part to the weather. Domestic beans

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

now average $2.30 and imported can be bought as low as $2.05 The demand is only fair. Marrows are in fair demand around $2.20. California limas are a trifle lower and in light demand. Dried and split peas are unchanged in all grades and firm; demand fair.

Butter.

The market for both prints and solids has declined 2 cents per pound during the week, owing to an increase in the production and a falling off in the demand. The prospects are for an improved demand as the weather warms. If there is any change within the next few days it will probably be a slight advance. The present receipts of butter show good quality for the season.

Eggs.

The egg market has declined 2 cents per dozen during the week. The receipts of fresh eggs have increased considerably, as has the demand. There will likely be larger receipts of fresh eggs and a slight decline in price.

Cheese.

The cheese market is in a very satisfactory condition. Stocks are getting very light and the market is firmly held at an advance of ½ cent. As stocks still further decrease and the season advances there will likely be another advance before new cheese arrives.

Provisions.

There is no change to report in the price of smoked meats. The market is a little firmer throughout, but stocks are still large, and there is not likely to be any change until the demand improves, due to warmer weather. Both pure and compound lard are firm and unchanged, and if any change occurs in either it will be in the nature of a slight advance. Barrel pork, dried beef and canned meats are steady and unchanged.

Produce.

Pennsylvania potatoes, 80 to 85 cents per bushel demand dull; York State, 75 to 80 cents per bushel, demand fair; sweet potatoes primes, $2.10 to $2.25 per hamper; seconds, $1.75 per hamper, scarce and in good demand; Ohio globe onions, 80 to 85 cents per bushel; York State, 70 to 75 cents per bushel, demand fair to good; carrots, 35 cents per basket, demand fair; yellow turnips, 35 cents per basket; white, 25 to 30 cents per basket, demand poor; Danish cabbage, $7 to $8 per ton, 75 to 80 cents per barrel; savoy, 75 cents to $1 per barrel, demand fair; beets, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, 5 to 7 cents per bunch, demand fair; parsnips, $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel, demand fair; oyster plants, 3 to 4 cents per bunch, demand fair; parsley, 2 to 3 cents per bunch, demand slow; watercress, 2½ to 3 cents per bunch, demand fair; Texas onions, small, $2 per crate; large, $2.50 per crate, scarce and in good demand.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Baldwins, $2 to $3.75 per barrel; Greenings, $2 to $3.50 per barrel; Hulbersons, $3.50 to $4 per barrel; Spy, $2 to $4 per barrel; Spitz, $2 to $4 per barrel; Kings, $3.20 to $5.50 per barrel; Russets, $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel, poor demand; bananas, jumbo, $1.75 to $2.25; firsts, $1.25 to $1.75; 8-hands, $1 to $1.25; 7-hands, 75 to 90 cents; 6-hands, 50 to 65 cents, poor demand; grape-fruit, $2.50 to $5 per box, demand poor; California oranges, $2.25 to $2.75 per box, demand fair; tangerines, $6 per strap, scarce and demand fair; lemons, $2.25 to $2.75 per box, demand fair; pineapples, $3.25 to $3.75 per box, demand fair.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

More demand for spot tomatoes this week gave encouragement to the canners, especially because of the fact that the buying orders covered a wider market for that article than any time since last October. The present spell of milder weather all over the country allows the shipment of canned goods without any danger of freezing on the road, and many jobbers are taking advantage of it, as is shown by an increase also in the number as well as the quantity of the jobbing orders for less than carload shipments of assorted goods. If the weather conditions continue favorable for shipping goods during this month we may receive during March and April the orders that are usually sent to this market during April and May, say three or four weeks sooner than usual, and the improvement in the demand in the last five or six days may prove to be the forerunner of the spring trade. The transportation lines anticipate an earlier than usual opening of the lake and rail routes this spring, which always means lower freight rates to the points reached by them and helps the business very much. It certainly looks like the prices for spot tomatoes are now at the lowest for this spring, and that purchases are safe. There was some little improvement this week also in the demand for future tomatoes, but the buying of them up to this date has been extremely light as compared with any ordinary season. Activity in them may begin at any time, but the packers show no anxiety to force sales. Prices are now being made on other lines of future goods also, for instance corn, pineapples and small fruits, berries, etc., and the buying of

When we get where we're driving for, pork and tomato-sauced beans will be about the largest-selling canned specialty packed.

And VAN CAMP'S will still be what it is to-day—by far the largest-selling brand. We originated pork and beans with tomato sauce, and we have always sold more than any other packer because VAN CAMP'S has always been better than any other packer's.

If you think that's just the usual manufacturer's guff, open a can side by side with any other brand you like. Your eye and your palate will speak for us instantly.

Such extensive advertising as we're doing to your customers would sell anything. Most of all a superfine article like VAN CAMP'S PORK AND BEANS.

them has commenced in a quiet way; no rush as yet. In the general lines of fruits and vegetables the market prices are practically unchanged, and we do not look for any material change up or down. The goods most in demand recently, in addition to tomatoes, are cove oysters, sweet potatoes, spinach, kraut and beans.

No. 2.

The market closes in fairly good shape on tomatoes. Buying, of course, is only for actual wants. There is not the slightest disposition being shown by buyers to anticipate wants. As this has been the consistent line of policy pursued by buyers for the past four months, the fact that there is comparatively little pressure to sell tomatoes seems to convince many people that the market is in good shape. The fact is that stocks of tomatoes are more than usually scattered at the present time among numerous holders. Nobody has more than a small quantity. Very many of these holders are convinced that a little later on will be the proper time to sell tomatoes.

To Clean Fish by Machinery.

A machine which, it is claimed, will automatically cut and dress 250 fish per minute, or 15,000 per hour, has been placed on exhibition by its inventor, a Philadelphia man, at the Eleventh street wharf, in Washington, D. C., and is attracting a great deal of attention. It is stated the machine can do the work of a dozen men, as an expert cutter and cleaner can cut and clean only 1,000 or 1,200 fish per hour. The fish are slid into pockets in the rear of the machine, and two automatic clutches at once grip the fish back of the head and near the end of the tail. A circular knife then decapitates and strips the fish, while three knives on a revolving shaft still farther in the machine thoroughly clean it. After this operation the cleaned fish slides down a shaft into a basket, while the head and cuttings are deposited in a separate compartment. It is stated the machine can be constructed to cut from five to twenty-five fish at each stroke, and can be operated by one man and two children. It is fitted with an automatic register, which keeps an account of the fish which are cleaned.

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

SELLING BROOMS.

Broom time is coming. Some women buy a broom on your word. Some buy one on sight and some will take fifteen minutes of your time—if you let them. When you strike the pernickety one stand your broom handle end down; straighten out the other end by a few pulls. While your stroking it after the manner of a silk hat, refer to the straightness of the corn—its pliability, its newness. Show how free it is from knobs and splits. The smooth unvarnished handle, and particularly its lightness. If she's a big woman and you think she's going to swing it, show up the No. 7 at 35 cents.

COFFEE AT WHOLESALE.

A new coffee comes out Monday that is to be sold only in 5-pound lots for $1. Here's a chance to land the lunch counter man. Coffee of this character will bring him business. It is a blend of Bogota, Maracaibo and Bourbon Santos.

Big families can well afford to buy five pounds at a time, if you will present it to them in the right way. It's surely a saving of at least 25 cents on the five pounds. Make a point of saying that we do not retail at all. Do not even list it, and five pounds is the minimum quantity sold.

You're going to do wonders with this. The name is 5 X.

THE MONDAY ORDER.

We want to see more Saturday night orders taken for Monday delivery. Soap, starch, blue, washing soda, clothes pins, washing powder and such things that must be on hand for the Tuesday washing.

We often miss selling these because we miss telling about them.

That old soap sale was very satisfactory, a few more days will clean it up. But remember these things Saturday night and let us keep up this old-fashioned selling.

BROAD LINES.

This business is built on broad lines and it's for us to act broadly in our work. Don't run in a groove. Don't get into the habit of limiting yourself. That's destructive. Step into another department if they're busy. It takes only a few minutes. Get over to the fruit stand when somebody's waiting. Help the business along in every way that your good business sense suggests. For any sake avoid having to be told things that are an open duty. Feel that our success is yours. Realize the importance of earnest work—of continual effort to better things whether by action or suggestion.

AMONG THE TRADE.

A stroke of paralysis suffered on Wednesday caused the death, at his home in Ambler, of Frank S. Dengler, head of the local firm of Daniel S. Dengler, manufacturers of fireworks and confectioners' supplies in this city. Mr. Dengler was 42 years old, was widely known in business circles, and had been apparently in good health until stricken. He is survived only by his widow.

Arthur L. Metz, of 5720 Poplar street, was committed to prison during the week in default of $800 bail on the charge of embezzling $750 from the firm of Barber & Perkins, 29 North Water street, by whom he was employed as a collector. Metz is 21 years old and a former student at Girard College.

Mr. Ira S. Fallin, the merchandise broker who recently sustained a fracture of the leg, is sufficiently recovered to be back at his office.

The cannery at Mt. Holly, N. J., formerly operated by J. L. Anderson & Co., but for several weeks controlled by T. A. James, was sold last Thursday, March 12th. It has done very little for several years.

Olives have made another substantial decline during the past week. This is the second drop since January 1st.

It is rumored that Swiss milk chocolate will decline shortly. The three leading brands, it will be remembered, advanced 25 per cent. several months ago, on account of advance in cocoa, the manufacturers said.

Dear Sir:—Inclosed is a circular that was a business getter. We make a specialty of these sales about the 20th of each month on account of railroad pay day.

This circular seemed to strike the "chord" better than any other one we have put out for some time.

Let's hear your criticisms.

Yours truly,
McNeil & Smiley.

Give me credit, gentlemen, for sufficient shrewdness to avoid criticising an advertisement that has proved itself a "business getter." This circular shows that they are pretty wide-awake people out there in Oklahoma. "The C. O. D. Store" is a mighty clever name—it carries its meaning on its face, and that is more than a great many fancy firm names do. The circular in the original measured 12 x 17 inches, and is here reproduced much reduced:—

I don't see much the matter with this circular. Its typographical appearance might be improved by less heavy type. I believe a better result might have been achieved with say half this amount of boldface type. I believe in putting all of the heading and the introduction in the heading and the introduction, not in scattering it through the body of the advertisement. An advertisement ought properly to be divided into two parts—the head, which includes the introduction, and the body. If there is any mixing up the advertisement loses a part of its logical arrangement, and undergoes the same weakness which comes to a spoken argument that goes off on tangents.

The matter in this circular is good. There might be a little more of it, but so far as it goes it is crisp, snappy matter.

Mr. Callanan Scores Fake New York Grocery Advertising

Cites Several Instances of Deceptive Department Store Advertising of Groceries. The Drug Store's Coffee Scheme. Deplores that Consumers Falsely Judge Legitimate Grocery Prices by False Standards.

What is advertising? Is there any benefit to be derived from it? Is the advertiser honestly describing the goods or merchandise that he offers for sale, or is it his intention, by giving false descriptions, to lead the public into believing that he is offering bargains, although he is not doing it, and thus lure people into his store? I believe that the latter is the case.

It is considered a matter of routine business in some establishments to draw the crowds by advertising certain articles and adding "Sold elsewhere at—" quoting a higher price. The advertiser's price is put so low that it appeals at once to the minds of the readers who believe that a real bargain is to be had, or it would not be advertised by supposedly reputable business men. The readers do not know that the large advertisers employ men specially for the purpose of preparing advertisements in the most alluring manner. Never mind how much or how little truth there is in the advertisement!

One of these establishments will advertise a sale of 5,000 hams at or about cost, giving the idea that because of the large quantity to be sold the advertiser is enabled to merchandise the articles at a lower figure, while in reality there may not be more than 250 hams in the store—then only two or three to a customer.

Some time since an instance was reported to me where one of my customers, who resided on Staten Island, read an advertisement of this kind. She made up her mind that she would go for two hams, which was the limit to be sold to one customer. The price was two or three cents lower than she had been paying when she bought hams from me on her regular monthly order. She started for the advertiser's store after her husband had gone to his work. She paid carfare, 30 cents each way, on Staten Island, and 5 cents each way on the elevated train in New York, making 70 cents in all. She spent over four hours of her time and carried home two hams weighing 24 pounds. She saved either two or three cents a pound on the cost of the hams. Allowing that it was 3 cents a pound the total was 72 cents. The trip cost in carfare alone 70 cents. The real saving in money was 2 cents, and this had cost her half a day's time. She and her husband were sure that they had saved the entire difference in the prices.

When she gave her next monthly order she bragged about the supposed saving and said that she would buy no more hams from me. The clerk who took her order called my attention to it. I talked with her and her husband, and heard what she had to say. I laughed. They began to get angry. Then I explained to them how I figured out the transaction, that all they had saved was 2 cents, and to do this the wife had taken half a day away from her work at home, besides having the trouble of carrying the hams all the way. After they heard me they were both satisfied that I was right, and they traded with me until they left Staten Island.

Look at the misleading "ads." published every day.

In one "ad." published a few Sundays ago I read "Smoked Sardines 10 cents, sold elsewhere at 15 cents." They could be bought in any respectable store at 10 cents.

Another store announced "25,000 cases of Pure Canned Foods, at the lowest prices in New York." That 25,000 sounded big, but I will venture to say that there was not more than one-fifth as much in stock.

A combination sugar and coffee offer was: "Four pounds of our popular coffee blend, price 25 cents per pound. with five pounds granulated sugar for $1." The man back of this "ad." was either swindling the people by the prices

Malta-Vita Pure Food Co.,

Battle Creek, Mich,

he charged regularly, or he was lying to get people to call at his store so that he could sell them something else on which he would make an inordinate profit.

It is the same with the tea offer: "Three pounds of our special blend, always sold at 35 cents per pound, with five pounds of granulated sugar for $1." As in the case of the sugar and coffee "ad.," the advertiser was either lying in his advertisement, or he was swindling his trade when selling the goods regularly.

On a par with these instances is another of a dealer who advertised: "Fifteen fresh eggs for 25 cents," when fresh eggs were selling at 40 to 55 cents per dozen, and not enough of the eggs at 55 cents a dozen were to be had.

Another example of lying about coffee is the advertisement of a drug house selling coffee. The advertisement says that "Coffee of this grade is considered cheap at 40 cents the pound. We are selling one-pound canisters at 25 cents." I sent for a pound, and tested it very carefully more than once. I will be glad to match it at 15 cents per pound.

The drug house then says: "It is our settled policy to sell only honest goods at honest prices." I have only to say that if what they said about drugs had no more truth in it than what they say about coffee, then when people are wanting either drugs or coffee, this house would be a good one to avoid.

When it comes to advertising imported whiskies the limit is reached. We read of Scotch whisky at 70 cents a bottle, or $3.50 a gallon, yet the custom duty is $2.25 a gallon. "Irish" is advertised at 70 cents a bottle. The duty on Irish whisky, if at proof, is 45 cents a bottle. "Jamaica Rum" at 75 cents a bottle is another. The duty on that is 45 cents a bottle.

Lying all along the line, yet it seems to thrive. The dear public likes to be humbugged. Read offer of "Boneless Sardines, dozen $2.85, regular price 35 cents, large key-opening can, 25 cents." Another sardine offering: "Extra large can, sold everywhere at 23 cents, for 19 cents." Also we read: "French Peas from 12 cents up."

This "ad.," announcing sardines and French peas, reminds me of an incident which happened two or three years ago. I was standing in the front part of my store when a very good customer rushed in, with a paper in his hand, and went for me red hot. He said: "Callanan, why are you charging me 22 cents for peas, when here they are advertised at 11 cents? Sardines you are charging 25 or 28 cents for, here they are selling them at 15 cents." I laughed, took him by the shoulder and pointed to a pile of cans of sardines marked 15 cents each, or $1.75 per dozen. At the other side were peas at 11 cents a can, $1.30 per dozen. The sardines he used were French, those advertised were Portuguese. The latter are good fish, but they have not as good a flavor as the French sardines have. The peas advertised were Moyens, the largest pea canned, while what he used were the very finest peas canned. He has a fine trade and can use no other. He said no more, but rushed out of the door. Instance after instance of this kind are occurring daily. It keeps us constantly explaining the difference between the goods, but it pays to make the explanation. In most instances, if our customers leave us for a while, they come back.

If any housekeeper in New York will take the trouble to look at the prices of the best goods sold in the department stores, she will find that in any good grocery store she can duplicate the goods at less money. She will find the quality of the goods sold in the grocery store better and the service better than in the department store.

If!

Many a merchant's greatest barrier to success is the little word "if."

It's "if" this and "if" that, and meanwhile the aggressive, progressive competitor gets all the business.

Any shrewd merchant will admit that "if" our machine does all we claim for it he needs it in his store.

There is no "if" about what the machine will do.

Nearly nine thousand up-to-date merchants, after years of use of the machine, say that it has increased their sliced-meat trade from two to ten times, has increased their profit on each sale and has saved time and labor.

The evidence of this ought to interest you.

The Jewelry Scheme Again.

The itinerant jewelry scheme has broken out in Philadelphia again. Many references have been made to it. Such concerns as the Prudential Manufacturing Co., of Iowa City, Iowa, send salesmen to retail dealers in all lines and attempt to place an assortment of jewelry, to be paid for only if sold, at the end of one year. The dealer is asked to sign a series of notes which mature at the end of so many months. The real character of the notes is concealed; not one man out of a thousand has any idea he is signing promissory notes—he thinks he is signing receipts.

The jewelry concerns always play the same trick after getting the notes—it transfers them to a third party, which under a fundamental rule of law prevents the victimized dealer from using as a defense any verbal arrangement or condition which was made between himself and the jewelry company.

This is actually what has happened to a number of Philadelphia retail druggists within the last week. The third party holder of some of the Prudential concern's notes sued several druggists on them. The dealers attempted to defend on the ground that the jewelry was nearly worthless and not as represented, but the judge ruled as a matter of law, that as the suits were brought by a third party, no evidence could be given as to the original contract. He directed the jury to render a verdict against the dealer, which they did.

It is simply another illustration of the oft-preached truth that nobody should sign a paper without knowing very clearly what it is.

Question: J. E. Dilling, Martinsburg, Pa.—Can an account for clothing for a minor be collected from the parent of said minor, said minor supposed to be making his own living, but no notice ever given by parent? Account charged to parent.

Answer.—The parents of a minor are responsible for his debts for necessaries until he becomes of age. Naturally the question often arises what is and what is not necessities. Clothes may be or they may not be. If a young man in ordinary circumstances bought ten suits of clothes, for instance, an attempt to hold his parents responsible would fail, at least as to probably eight of them, because no ordinarily-situated minor can be said to need ten suits.

The fact that a minor is earning money does not absolve his parents from the duty to support him. His earnings belong to his father until his majority.

Question: * * *, Pa.—My first year's lease ends with April 1, 1908. I received notice by letter through the mail in December last to vacate property April 1, 1908. In case I cannot be suited in another place at once, how long can I remain where I am after the 1st of April?

Can the owner raise the rent on me for the time I remain in after April 1st until I can be suited elsewhere?

When moving out, can I take out everything that I put in—all the fixtures—if I can do so without damaging the property in any way?

The rent I pay monthly in advance by check. Shall I continue to send my check as usual in advance for the month of April? And in case the check is refused and returned to me, what is the proper thing then for me to do? Can I be compelled to vacate on April 1st to the detriment of my business?

REMARKS.

Since receiving my notice in December last to vacate property April 1st (this notice was sent me through the mail by the owner himself) I have had reason to believe from personal conversation that I have had with my landlord that I could stay on another year, as he made the remark to me personally that if he should rent it again for the same business that I could remain.

Now, since that time he has notified me personally that he has rented to another party for the same business. I have paid the rent promptly each month in advance during the entire year. Now, as I felt pretty sure that I could renew my lease for another year I made no effort to get another place.

Answer.—1. You have no legal right to remain on the premises one day after the lease has expired, and the owner can eject you if he wishes to do so.

2. If you remain after April 1st, and the owner permits you to, he can collect from you, in the absence of any agreement as to the amount of rent, the fair rental value of the property. The fair rental value is what it would bring in the open market. If the owner has had an offer of a higher rental from another person, that becomes the market rental value.

3. Whether you can take all fixtures with you depends on your lease. Some leases provide that all improvements made by the tenant during the life of the lease shall at the termination of the lease be the property of the landlord. If your lease contains no such provision, you are governed by the ordinary law of fixtures, which is that you can remove, during the term of your lease, any fixtures placed by you on the premises, always provided no damage is done to the property.

4. I should tender a check for a month's rent on April 1st. If accepted you are safe for another month, and cannot then be ejected without another month's notice. That is, if your check for one month's rent in advance is accepted on April 1st your rent will be paid until May 1st, and if the landlord does not give you the one month's notice on April 1st he cannot do so until May 1st, which will assure your possession until June 1st. If the check is refused, the only legal alternative is to move. It makes no difference whether your business will suffer or not; the owner has the right to retake his property after proper notice.

5. Your landlord's statement that if he rented again to the same business he would rent to you is scarcely a legal agreement upon which you could bind him. It is a simple promise and would probably be held to be voidable because of lack of consideration.

Think of it! Five thousand grocers in Pennsylvania alone are selling the Goff remedies. Every grocer in the country should be. The firm is making a proposition to those who are not handling their standard remedies that will enable them to make seventy per cent. profit. If you will write S. B. Goff & Sons Co., Camden, N. J., they will tell you how it is done.

Trust or Distrust?

————N. Y., March 6, 1908.

Dear Stroller:—Read your productions with much interest each week. Not always with full accord of opinion, but always with full belief in your own sincerity.

I have now a problem of my own in which you may be able to help if you will. I confess after much hard thinking I have been forced to give it up.

I have between fifteen and thirty employees. I do not make the number any more definite than that, and I ask you not to mention my name or address, if you publish this, because your paper is quite generally read in these parts. I have reached the point where I am frankly unable to say to my own satisfaction how I should treat my employees. I have tried putting implicit confidence in them, and have been betrayed repeatedly. I have gone to the other extreme—giving them no leeway to speak of, and they have resented it and I have lost in that way. What shall I do? Where is the happy medium with which an employer can get the best possible results out of his men? I have asked a great many other men their opinions, but no two seem to think alike. Maybe you can help. Will you have a try?

Very sincerely yours,

* * * *

Sure I'll have a try. This correspondent don't say so, but I imagine what he's thinking about is how to handle his employees on questions of money. I've known merchants who have used all sorts of ways, and I've seen all sorts of ways fall down sometimes. I've got my own conclusions about it, and here they are for what they're worth.

If I ran a business that used a lot of men I'd put every man under bond who handled money or goods, and who could in any probable way steal from me. I don't include in this the merchant who has only a clerk or two and who can have his people under his eye all the time. In cases like that you're pretty safe, because your own oversight safeguards you. At least it ought to.

I mean where a clerk has charge of money and goods in such a way that his boss can't be always looking after him.

I said I'd seen all sorts of ways tried. I know a grocer who used to talk a lot about showing clerks he thought they were honest.

"I believe in thinking every man's honest until he shows he ain't." He's said that to me a dozen times, I'll bet. And he used to follow that idea out. His clerks could handle his money in all sorts of loose ways and the only safeguard he had was their own honesty.

He used to brag that he never lost a cent that way, and that if he ran a bank with a million dollars in it he'd never put a single man under bond.

About a year ago that grocer took sick. He had the dwelling part of his store rented out and he had to go to bed in another part of the town.

His main clerk was a fellow he picked up in Harrisburg, and he depended on him to run the store while he was sick.

Every week the clerk would come to the house to make his reports. After a while he began to hand out a hard-luck story every Sunday. Business was rotten, but nevertheless he seemed to have to buy a lot of stock.

The grocer was pretty sick, and he couldn't be bothered; his wife didn't know much about business and so it went along. The time came when the grocer got well. When he went over to his store the first time he found it closed. Neighbors said it had been closed for four days. His name had been taken off the sign and the clerk's name put there instead. Instead of a thousand dollars' worth of stock there wasn't a hundred.

Nice little surprise for a man just out of a sick bed, wasn't it?

Well, he buckled down to business and after a year has the business built up again, and all his debts wiped out.

It's been such a strenuous year that his health has gone to pieces again, and now the store's for sale.

If that clerk had been put under bond the grocer wouldn't have lost his money and he wouldn't have lost his health.

The man that depends absolutely on the dead honesty of a clerk is liable to get it in the neck any minute. He thinks he won't, but he can't tell. And if he does, what's his redress?

I'd treat it as a matter of cold business. The banks all do it, and so do all the other big institutions that handle a lot of money.

Of course it's a fact that some clerks that are asked to put up a bond get real huffy and fling out talk about being mistrusted.

Somehow I never trust a fellow who does that.

The fellow who is always smelling slurs against his honesty I wouldn't trust with my last year's straw hat.

The really honest sensible clerk will always look on a thing like that as a straight matter of business. And that's all it is.

You don't show suspicion of a clerk when you make him give you a bond. You simply say to him: "If you're honest this bond will never hurt you. I don't distrust you, but I can't have my business placed at anybody's mercy."

I say again, every man I put in a place where he could steal from me I'd get a bond from. Every time! And I'd expect to give one if I was in the same place.

Of course it's a little different with me. Anybody who looks at my face can see I'm honest.

THE MODEL CASH GROCERY STORE.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your inquiry of recent date, we enclose a few sample slices of sandwich dried beef, sliced in the highest style of the art, sliced on Johnson's patented "EVERSHARP." These slices, thin as paper, smooth as glass, soft, moist and delicious, were cut the full size of a six-pound knuckle. The whole knuckle was sliced to perfection in six minutes.

I also enclose, in separate wrapper, some very small, very thin slices cut from the meat that covers the knuckle bone. Please notice that the little nub end of gristle and skin remaining unsliced weighs less than a quarter ounce, every particle of edible meat sliced up in thin, bright, salable slices. Of course we never sell any one a quarter pound of these little slices; but every half or quarter pound we weigh up gets alike its equal share of little and broad slices.

Please note the saving in time—as much work done in six minutes as the best circular-knife machines can do in twenty minutes, and then the quality of our work—slices thinner, smoother and more perfect than any other machine can possibly produce. So moist, so soft, so juicy, so broad, so transparently thin they cause enthusiastic comment wherever introduced, resulting in a large increase of very profitable trade.

We sell our machines for forty-six dollars on small monthly instalments, and every machine can be depended on to more than earn its own cost. If you prefer to pay cash we allow you a liberal discount. Hoping to receive your order.

Respectfully yours, A. W. JOHNSON.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

A Canned Fruit Window.

This is quite simple and easily made, and everybody that passes will stop and look at it, especially if you leave it lit for a couple of hours in the evening.

Take a box about six or eight inches in height and nail it to the middle of the window on the floor.

Run either crepe paper or colored cheese cloth from the sides of the window over this box.

Cover the box with a paper napkin. Tacked up against the back of the window have your sign:—

> WINDSOR—
> Lemon Cling Peaches cut in Halves and Packed in a Heavy Syrup. Try a Can. They're Delicious.
> 30c. Can.

Open a can, run the liquor off and place in a jar, with the cut part out, fill the jar with white pickling vinegar and put the top on tight.

Set the jar and the empty can on the napkin. Run colored streamers from the box under the napkin to the sign.

Reduction in Necessaries of Life

According to Bradstreet's, living is cheaper now than it has been in thirty-three months. It was just a year ago this month when the highest general level of prices for foodstuffs, textiles, coal and other commodities was reached. Since then they have dropped 12.5 per cent., the decrease being fairly evenly distributed from month to month. There have been some thirty increases, but Bradstreet's records show that sixty-three products, including provisions and textiles, cost less than last March. Of the thirty products that are higher some are sugar, tea, potatoes, apples, wheat, corn, oats and barley, soft coal and petroleum. The low price average of this month, however, is only comparative, and if the drop is limited to 1 per cent., as for the year past, more than three years must elapse before the lowest recorded price average is reached. Prices are still 40 per cent. higher than the low level recorded July 1, 1896.

Failures Show Another Increase.

Report for February Shows Many More Grocery and General Store Failures in February, 1908, than in February, 1907.

Like the January report, the official report for grocery and general store failures during the month of February shows a heavy increase over the corresponding month of 1907.

The figures are as follows:—

General Stores.—In February, 1908, 222; liabilities, $1,670,229; in February, 1907, 121; liabilities, $862,676.

Groceries.—In February, 1908, 238; liabilities, $1,038,807; in February, 1907, 192; liabilities, $732,324.

You Need These.

Now is the time to see that your stock of Shovels, Hoes, Rakes, Forks and other agricultural implements, is in shape to meet the demand.

Reaction On Against Facing Prunes

Coast Packers Now Oppose It Because It is Dishonest, Filthy and Unnecessary. Large Oregon Packer Says It is Unclean and Doesn't Help Sale.

For years it has been the custom of the California packers of prunes to face their boxes; that is, to put a beautiful layer of the best fruit on the top, and pay little attention to the balance. It is a practice very generally known, so much so, in fact, that prunes are very often sold in the wholesale trade as "nicely faced."

At the present time there seems to be a decided reaction on against the practice which some contend is dishonest and others unnecessary. In a recent issue of one of the organs of the fruit trade the following appeared:—

> The facing of boxes of prunes and other dried fruits is a filthy practice, and as ordinarily practiced is thoroughly dishonest. If fruit is to be faced, it is legitimate to select the best specimens in that particular box as "facers." We have never seen it done that way, and do not believe it ever is so done. The custom is to select from the entire available stock the best lots of fruit, to select from that the best specimens and with those face up the boxes, no matter how wretched the stuff below the facing. It is no more defensible than any other form of fraud, and if there was a healthy public sentiment anyone caught at it would go to jail.

This, it will be noted, is not a square condemnation of the practice in toto, but simply condemns getting the facing prunes from outside their own box.

Another radically different view was expressed a few days ago by George C. Flanders, of Oregon, in the course of an address delivered before the Oregon State Horticultural Society. Mr. Flanders does not discuss the ethics of the matter, but opposes it simply because it is unnecessary. Here is his argument:—

> The facing of twenty-five-pound boxes is an unnecessary expense. For two years I conducted a packing house in this city, and the expense of facing the twenty-five-pound boxes of prunes cost about 15 cents per hundred pounds. It is a fact that those that are used to exhibit in show windows make a better showing than those that are not faced, but I venture to say that there is not one box exhibited in this way out of one thousand. This shows that it is an unnecessary expense. Not only that, I consider it, in plain language, a filthy practice to face prunes. I have watched the facers, and they use methods that I would not tolerate. I would never eat a prune from a box that had been faced. I always get my prunes for my own use unfaced, and if consumers of these fancy packages knew the conditions they would come to the same conclusions.
> The direct cost of facing prunes is about $3 per ton, but the real cost to the packing house on account of this work is not less than $5 per ton. This, on account of the delay to the packing house work on account of the facers. They always retard the work. A good-sized packing house cannot put out only about a thousand twenty-five-pound boxes of prunes per day where they are faced. The same packing house could put out 2,000 boxes with less help if the boxes were not faced.
> If it was not for this facing work all of the large growers could do their own packing at a much less expense than the packing house does it. The appliances for packing prunes are very simple. A good San Jose dipper makes a first-class processor, and all the growers know how to grade prunes. In fact, it is a very simple matter to pack prunes and do a good job at it.

Rumor that Copper Coloring Will be Forbidden.

It is said to have been determined by the Board of Food and Drug Inspection to prohibit the use of sulphate of copper as a coloring medium for foods. This action will apply not only to imported foods but also to domestically produced foods, and is in line with the drift of policy in the actions already taken by the board. It is said that the decision will be announced within a few days and will become binding from the time of publication.

Ceylon Tea Gains, India Loses.

Figures for 1907 Show Large Increase in Exports of Ceylon Tea, but Decrease in Outgo of India's. Enormous Increase in Use of Ceylon Teas Abroad.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
March 12, 1908.

According to figures filed in the State Department here during the week Ceylon made a considerable spurt in its tea exports during the closing months of 1907. The total exports from the island for that year amounted to about 112,000,000 pounds, against 107,000,000 pounds in 1906, an increase of 5,000,000 pounds. This was a

Isn't It Foolish To Advertise Light?

It seems ridiculous to advertise light, so obvious is it that that which is lightest is cheerfulest and draws the most people.

Particularly a store. Every successful grocer in business uses an amount of light that you might consider extravagant; but it isn't—it is business. These grocers make their stores cheerful because they know that cheeriness brings people, and people buy.

You'll find that the most successful stores are always the ones that are the brightest at night.

ARBUCKLE BROTHERS NEW YORK

very heavy increase, yet it was not sufficient to counterbalance India's deficit, combined with increased demand.

According to a local review of the Indian and Ceylon tea markets for 1907 the prospect is most encouraging. It says that the average price of tea was the highest during the year since 1899. This statement, however, does not necessarily imply good results to all producers, because one of the chief features of the past twelve months was the high price ruling for common grades. Taking the industry as a whole, there seems every probability that the depression which has ruled for many years has at length passed away, for production has shown little increase in the year just ending, while consumption, both at home and abroad, has materially increased, and very little additional land is being placed under tea cultivation.

One of the most remarkable features of the last two years has been the great expansion in the use of Indian and Ceylon teas abroad. This rose from 129,884,250 pounds in 1905 to 162,461,824 pounds in 1906, and about 171,500,000 pounds in 1907. When it is remembered that in 1890 the total consumption of Indian and Ceylon tea abroad was only 14,001,132 pounds, the progress made is really startling. There is no doubt that the expansion in these markets has saved the industry from very serious losses, and largely contributed to the more satisfactory position at the present time.

An Error Corrected.

Allentown, Pa., March 9, 1908.

Dear Sir:—I am pleased to notice in this week's issue of your paper that you have found my window display worthy of your mention, but have also taken notice that you made an error in the address. It should be Allen-

Jobbers Holding Out for Proper Futures Contract

Tendency to Refuse to Buy Futures from Packers Who Give Only Pro Rata Contracts. New York Particularly Strong.

The agitation over the present loose method of selling future canned goods, and the refusal of many packers to give a full delivery contract, is arousing some action among the jobbers. One of the principal packers of the whole United States came to Philadelphia during the week in search of future business. His brands are high grade and very well liked, but he declined to give more than a pro rata contract, and several jobbers refused to buy. In justification of his refusal to give a 100 per cent. delivery contract, this packer advanced as a novel alternative that the jobber, instead of buying so many cases for future delivery, should buy the product of so much ground. He would then get in cans whatever his ground yielded. The idea interested everybody, but convinced no one, owing to the impracticability of keeping track of one's purchases.

The jobbers seem determined to get from the packer a delivery contract which will amount to something. There are several packers who sell on such a contract, and their business bids fair to be very large this year.

It is understood that in the New York district, where the National Wholesale Grocers' Association is particularly strong, the jobbers are absolutely refusing to buy futures from any packer who will not give a definite delivery contract.

As to Condensed Cream.

Point Pleasant, W. Va.,
March 9, 1908.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—We note in your price-list of groceries in the "Grocery World," under the head of "Hires Condensed Milk and Cream," a quotation of "Gold Cream" at $4.25 for one case of four dozen each, can containing twenty ounces.

Under the pure food act we take it that condensed milk cannot be labeled cream, and we would like to know whether "Gold Cream" is positively what it claims to be, viz., pure cream.

We do not believe that it can be cream at the price named, but would be pleased to be positively informed on the subject.

Yours truly,
THE H. G. NEASE CO.,
Per H. G. Nease.

The "Grocery World" has referred this matter to the Hires Co., who will take it up with this correspondent direct.

An Interesting Firm.

When a firm has been in business nearly a hundred years and during that time has always been under the management of the same family, it becomes of more than ordinary interest to the trade. Such a firm is Samuel Wilde's Sons Company (the pioneer coffee house of America), established nearly a century ago by Samuel Wilde; it has passed down from generation to generation and is to-day under the family control. With each succeeding generation there has been a steady and constant growth; the principles laid down by the founder are carried out to-day, and customers of to-day are sure to receive the care and attention that leads to close relationship. It is well to remember that every pound of coffee that leaves the house is guaranteed to be the same as sample shown with value that cannot be surpassed by any other firm. Their address is 11 Dutch street, New York City.

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

Unbroken Eggs Mean Unbroken Profits

We will show you how to deliver Eggs without breaking them—this will interest your customers some, and it should interest you more.

We will show you that a small portion of the money you save by not breaking Eggs will equip you with our carriers, and that the balance will represent profit.

We will show you this in figures, so there will be no more question in your minds about it than there is in ours.

Star Egg Carrier & Tray Mfg. Co., Rochester, N. Y., U. S. A.

You Can Use Kerosene Gas or Gasoline

The Acme Peanut Roaster is equipped to use either of the three and give the same results—i. e., perfectly roasted peanuts in the smallest amount of time, with the least expense and no labor.

The Acme Peanut Roaster is the cheapest and yet the most effective automatic roaster on the market. By its use you can earn at least from one to three dollars per day more than you now are making, and have an added attraction in your store. Full particulars and price on application.

ATSATT BROS.
24 Pearl St. MATTAPOISETT, MASS.

What's in a Name?

We'll tell you. We have picked out the name Apelpi for our Evaprated Apples, so that every time it is thought of particular people will think of the finest fruit of this kind ever put on the market.

We have adopted the sentence, "The bottom as good as the top," because that is unusual with evaporated apples, and we pride ourselves on the fact that it applies to ours. Put them in, and your troubles in this direction are over.

How to Make Other Cocoas as Good as Ours

Take the average cocoa on the market and carry it through another process or two, and you may have an article about as good as Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa.

The trouble is that other manufacturers will not use that "other process or two," because of its cost. They prefer to send out their product half made, as it were—containing indigestible and ill-tasting ingredients which should have been eliminated—so that they can save a little on the cost of making.

Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa has everything taken out that should be taken out, and for that reason, among others, it has the smoothest, finest flavor of any cocoa made.

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

"I Wish I Had Some Real Gelatine"

Every day some woman in your town bemoans the disappearance of old-style gelatine--the clean, delicious, melting kind, flavored with lemon, that we learned to like on our mother's table.

Old-style gelatine has not disappeared, though at times it has seemed to be snowed under by the flavorless imitations that hide their worthlessness behind bright colors.

Chalmers' Gelatine is old-fashioned gelatine—nothing in it but purest calves' stock and spring water. Your customers want it.

Four "Veribest" Products That Bring Very Best Results

The richest, tastiest Vienna Style Sausage packed.

The Government inspection mark guarantees the purity and the cleanliness. Our name backs the statement that this sausage is made only of honest and the highest grade materials.

Veribest Ham Loaf is our finest hams reduced to a convenient form.

We spice it and treat it until it is the tasty essence of tender, young ham, pure and clean and appetizing to the last degree.

Packed under Government inspection.

Veribest Corned Beef Hash is not a hodge podge of meat ends thrown together by a workman—it is a delicious dish compounded by a chef and prepared in the cleanest kitchen in the world.

No cleaner and no richer corned beef hash is made in any kitchen in this country.

Veribest Ox Tongue is packed only from clean, smooth selected tongues. There's a vast difference in ox tongue, some of it is so gnarly and grisly that it is an offence to offer it for human consumption.

We send ours under a Veribest label, with every confidence that it will protect our reputation in exactly the way we would have it.

Corn Syrup Decision

From Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin
February 15th

SYRUP LABEL DECISION.

Controversy Over Pure Food Law Question Finally Settled.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—An important question in the administration of the pure food law was settled to-day in a decision made public by Secretaries Wilson, Cortelyou and Straus. It bears upon the controversy regarding the labeling of syrup. The decision follows:

"We have each given careful consideration to the labeling under the pure food law of the thick viscous syrup obtained by the incomplete hydrolysis of the starch of corn and composed essentially of dextrose, maltose and dextrine.

"In our opinion it is lawful to label this syrup as 'corn syrup,' and if to the corn syrup there is added a small percentage of refiners' syrup, a product of the cane, the mixture, in our judgment, is not misbranded if labeled 'corn syrup with cane flavor.'"

It is understood that the decision also has the concurrence of the President and a majority of the pure food and drugs board. Dr. Wiley, chief of the chemistry bureau of the Department of Agriculture, dissented on the ground that the label should be "glucose."

It Is Spelled R=A=M=L=Y

If you want to sell a really delightful smoke, get the real Ramly, don't take something gotten up to look like the Ramly, because there the similarity ends.

No cigarette ever made has jumped into such immediate popularity. It has become famous on its quality alone.

If you put Ramly Cigarettes in stock you will be assured of the permanent patronage of every man to whom you sell a package.

Don't get confused on the name—it is spelled R–A–M–L–Y.

CLEAN, EASY AND PROFITABLE.

Handling Headlight Oil and Gasoline in the old way is hard, dirty, and because it takes so much time and trouble, not very profitable. Handled in our way is as easy as weighing coffee or tea and just as clean, almost as profitable. We will send you our Catalogue B, if you wish, which will show you how to turn this unpleasant feature of your business into a simple sanitary job, increasing your profits to such an extent that our Tanks and Pumps, which work with almost human intelligence, soon pay for themselves.

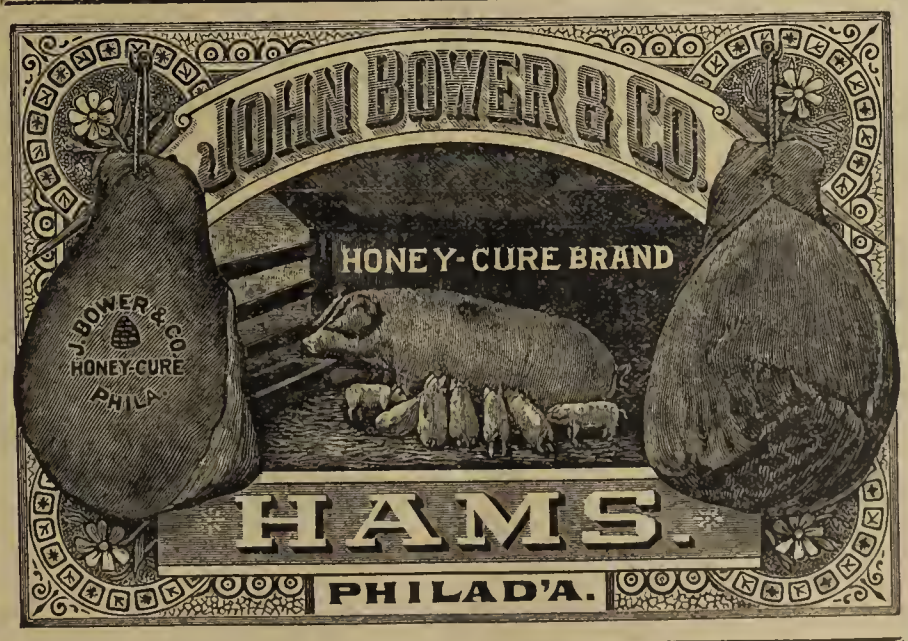
"As Good As I Bought Last Time"



You ought to sell Swift's PREMIUM Hams for your own protection. Can you satisfy your trade unless your hams are uniform? And can they be uniform unless bought from a packer who can keep his raw material uniform?

Few packers have our facilities for keeping hams up to a given standard year after year. Swift's PREMIUM Hams scarcely vary a hair's breadth from one year's end to another. That does us a whole lot of good, as it will do you.

The woman who can always depend on getting good ham—"as good as I bought last time"—is going to buy lots of ham.

They Must Keep Expert

It is a provable fact that a majority of cooking experts use Nicelle Olive Oil in all their demonstrations.

Why? Because they must use the very best oil obtainable in order to insure results. Otherwise they would soon cease to be known as experts.

Nicelle Olive Oil is bottled in France, where produced. It is the first pressing of the finest oil olive grown. You will be proud to sell it.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Walker Patent Pivoted Bin Co.

Offices and Showrooms
18 to 24 S. Seventh St
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"As Good as the 'J. M.'"

No delivery wagon built is as good as the "J. M.," though many are said to be. The makers of other wagons do the best they can, but they haven't our facilities.

The "J. M." wagon is the handsomest, longest-lived delivery wagon on the market. No other wagon manufacturer we ever knew rejected everything but second-growth hickory for wheels, as we do.

Write for our catalogue.

Easter Hams

Will be in demand in a short time

Have you placed your order for them? When you read this it will be time to seriously think of the matter. Write and ask for quotations on which are plump, have short shanks and round butts, are sweet, being sugar cured; mild, because they are not old; and of fine flavor, being smoked a nice, bright color, which is only possible by using hickory wood.

They are sold by the leading retail grocers in Philadelphia, having the most select and exacting trade.

Burk's "Butternut Bacon"

is the only substitute for Easter hams. It is selected from corn-fed hogs, specially cured with granulated sugar—mild and of exquisite flavor and taste.

It is put up in narrow strips, strung with white cord, cut absolutely square, making any waste impossible; wrapped in highly glazed and parchment paper and embellished on two sides with an attractive blue and white label. A red seal is attached to the cord, stating the specific merits of this bacon, which is also known to the trade as the "Five B" Bacon, because of its name

Burk's Butternut Boneless Breakfast Bacon

This Bacon was first introduced at the National Export Exposition, held in Philadelphia in 1899, and it is largely due to its ever-increasing popularity that

Hold It to the Light

La Toscana is an olive oil to hold to the light and marvel over. So rich, so mellow, so golden!

The finest of virgin pure Italian olive oil. Plenty of oil as pure, little or none as rich and unctuous. French and Spanish oil are good enough in their way, but there is no olive oil anywhere like the Italian.

La Toscana oil would look fine on your shelves.

A particular grocer said the other day that he'd never feel quite sure the butter he was selling was in every way all right unless he could taste every pound, butter varied so.

The raw material we use partly assures that; but not wholly, for things can happen in the making. What Forty-eight Cans of Standard 3lb. Tomatoes Weighed

Some Figures Showing the Absolute Lack of Standard or Method as to the Weights of Canned Tomatoes. Jobber Weighs 48 Cans Picked at Random from 100 Cases and Finds Some Weigh Less Than Two Pounds.

Much has been said from time to time regarding the lack of any real standard for appraising the quality of canned tomatoes. All grades are now sold as standards, even grades which could never be considered better than seconds.

Even more needs to be said about the lack of standard as to weights. Except in certain Jersey brands the term "3 pounds" is an empty name. Maryland packers sell "3-pound" tomatoes that weigh as little as one pound and a half by actual weight. Naturally this is an exceptional case. The average seldom falls below two pounds, but even a weight of two pounds for "3-pound" goods is ridiculous. The weights of Maryland goods run all the way from two pounds up to two pounds eight ounces, seldom above the latter.

The most vivid example ever seen of the great variance in the weights of canned tomatoes was brought to the "Grocery World's" notice during the week. A certain wholesale house bought about 100 cases of a certain Maryland packer's so-called standard tomatoes. When the goods were received they examined them, and discovered that no two cans seemed to weigh the same. Two cases of twenty-four cans each were drawn from the lot, and each of the forty-eight cans weighed. The result was as follows:—

No. 1—2 pounds, 5 ounces.
No. 2—2 pounds, 1 ounce.
No. 3—2 pounds, 4¾ ounces.
No. 4—2 pounds, 2¾ ounces.

Another Jewelry Scheme Story.

A Pennsylvania Grocer's Story of His Experience with Another Itinerant Scheme of Placing Jewelry in Grocery Stores on Consignment. How He Blocked the Note Transfer Game.

A well-known Pennsylvania retail grocer came to the "Grocery World" office during the week and detailed an exceedingly interesting experience with one of the Western jewelry concerns which transact the sort of business that has been repeatedly exposed in the "Grocery World."

The concern in question is the Moline Jewelry Co., of Moline, Ill. The retailer in question wishes his name withheld.

Several months ago the Moline Jewelry Co. sent a salesman to the grocer in question with the following glittering proposition: The Moline Co. was to place an assortment of jewelry in the grocer's store upon a sort of consignment plan. There was to be no money paid; every four months the salesman was to come around, see what had been sold, and give the grocer as his share, 33⅓ per cent. of the gross price.

There was even to be more. The Moline Co. was to supply a large fine show case free. In this the jewelry was to be displayed.

But even this was not all. The Moline Co. agreed to give the grocer a gold-plated watch and a number of tickets. With this material he was to work whatever premium scheme he liked.

The grocer was in a hurry, as most grocers are when they are asked to sign contracts, and he signed the long, fine-typed agreement which the agent presented. Later the concern acknowledged the contract and shipped the goods, which were duly received and displayed.

In a few weeks along came a series of promissory notes. So insistent became the Moline Co. that the grocer sign them that he finally consulted an attorney. The attorney said: "You're bound absolutely under the contract to pay for those goods—the verbal arrangement cuts no figure."

Indignantly, the grocer still refused to pay for the stuff, and one day he was visited by another agent who represented himself a member of the firm. He was deeply grieved to hear of the salesman's misrepresentations—these concerns always repudiate their salesmen—but he contended that the concern itself was not in fault and must ask for payment. There was a long wrangle and the Moline agent finally agreed to draw up a new contract, the terms of which were as follows: The grocer was to sign the notes, binding himself to pay for the goods at certain intervals if sold. The Moline Co. was to give him a bond protecting him against any attempt to collect the notes unless the goods were sold. The grocer, prompted by his attorney, was shrewd enough to put a condition naming the bond on the back of the notes, so that anybody to whom the Moline Co. might fraudulently transfer the notes would be charged with knowledge. It was lucky that he did, for that is precisely what the Moline Co. did—transfer the notes to a third party in spite of the fact that the jewelry was not sold. Usually when these jewelry concerns transfer their victims' notes there is no defense; the victim must pay. In this case, however, thanks to the grocer's shrewdness, there was a defense. The jewelry concern probably realizes this perfectly, since several months have passed and no effort has yet been made to collect the notes.

How Another Grocer Made the Cash Leap

Virginia Retailer Changed from Credit to Cash. How the Plan Was Announced. Good, Clean-cut Argument. Offers to Tell How It Worked.

I am sending the "Grocery World" a copy of a booklet which I used to announce my recent change from the credit to the cash system. The "Grocery World's" other articles on the cash business, coming as they did while I was preparing for the change, afforded me encouragement.

In sending the booklet out, I inclosed it in the following letter:—

Kincaid, Va., March 10, 1908.

Dear Sir:—My object in writing you to-day is to announce that after March 16, 1908, I will change my business from a credit to a cash system.

A copy of my little booklet, "Cash Against Credit," is herewith inclosed.

I want you to take plenty of time to read it—to study it closely and to be guided by it. This will save you future mistakes in buying.

The pay-as-you-go plan is the best for us both.

If I were not so sure of it—if I did not know how much better I can serve your interests and how much cheaper I can sell you goods, I would not make the change.

For years I have tried the credit system, and you have tried it. I have found it expensive and unsatisfactory. I believe you have found it the same.

I pledge you my word that I am going to give every one a square deal, that I am going to have one cash price to every customer, and that price the lowest in the South. In no case will I sell any article on time after March 16, 1908.

I guarantee that a trial will prove to you that the cash system is best for you. You will save many dollars each year.

As I have said in the inclosed booklet, "Cash Does More Than Credit—It does it quicker—It does it better."

It Means Much to You

FRANK M. KINCAID,

KINCAID, - - VIRGINIA.

The matter of the booklet was as follows:—

FROM CREDIT TO CASH.

After March 16, 1908, I will sell for cash and for cash only.

That date will see the last of the old costly and unsatisfactory credit system that I have conducted in the past.

Why do I change?

Because I know that it will pay us both to pay cash or the equivalent of cash.

It will enable me to offer you a fuller stock of goods from which to supply yourself and family.

I can keep newer and fresher merchandise, and I can sell you better goods at less price.

In short, if we both pay cash we both save money by it as easily and naturally as water runs down hill.

That is plain.

MONEY MEANS POWER.

There isn't a doubt in the minds of anyone as to the truth of that statement.

When I pay cash for the merchandise I buy, I have a hundred advantages that I do not have when I buy on time.

Discounts are allowed me, and I can purchase what I want at a lower price. If I pay less, then you pay less. That is natural.

Ready cash always makes it possible for me to buy the things my customers demand when they want them, and where I can do the best.

But to take advantage of the above mentioned things, I must have cash. To get the cash, I must sell for cash or for produce.

Yes, "Money is Power."

THE ROAD TO WEALTH.

Henry Clay, the great and wise statesman, said: "The habit of saving is the road to prosperity."

The greatest help to saving is to pay cash for what you need. Cash is a two-edged sword. It cuts both ways. It insures lower prices on the things you buy, and it makes you more careful about what you buy.

But you say it is hard to begin. It isn't. It may seem hard at first, maybe like the plunge into a cold stream. But after you get started, and warmed up by the exercise, you'll find paying cash mighty pleasant.

Use the money you meant to pay last month's bill with to pay cash for the things you need and pay me the old bill as you can.

I am ready to help you pay cash.

Figure it out yourself. See if it isn't reasonable that a retail merchant who has cash to buy to suit his trade and to buy all goods at rock bottom prices can sell at a lower price than the one who is handicapped by debt. Another big consideration:

You are paying up none of the bad debts made by unfortunates, or "deadbeats."

The merchant who loses his profit on one customer must make it out of another.

The cash merchant wants but one sure and small profit on each customer.

You will find all my goods marked in plain, unchangeable figures.

The lowest cash prices.

Every customer will be on the same footing. Every customer will pay the same price for any given article.

That price will be the lowest one in Virginia.

STOP THE WORRY.

Stop forever worrying over the debt that must be paid sooner or later. Stop running from one to three or even six months behind with the result that when you have "paid up" you have spent all you have.

It leaves you "hard up."

A man or woman who is free from worry and debt and who is confident of gaining something each month because they pay cash and therefore pay a less price for goods, will do more, be happier and even healthier.

Swing out on the cash plan—sell your produce for cash prices and gain the freedom from debt—the power, independence and self-respect that is rightfully yours.

YOU MUST DECIDE.

Think it over carefully, from all standpoints and decide for yourself.

On one hand you have credit with its attending evils of high prices, slavery, worry and sure day of reckoning.

On the other hand think of being able to buy the best, most stylish goods made at a one-price-to-all and that the lowest plan. Think of getting rid of debt and the worry that you cannot separate from it. Think of saving a nice sum of your hard-earned money each month for a rainy day or for better things at the present.

The pay-as-you-go-plan means prosperity. The credit system means carrying a heavy load.

Brilliant Food Show Opening Expected. Grocers Watching Bank Developments. Long Island Potato Combine. Glut of Eggs. Importers Expect Coffee Coloring Arguments to Have Weight. Sugar Trust Employee Acquitted of Attempted Bribery.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, March 20, 1908.

A brilliant opening of the Food Exposition is planned for Thursday of next week and the members of the New York Retail Grocers' Union are working hard to make this event eclipse all others of the kind. There are to be speeches, music and feasting on the first night, and it is believed that the public will be awakened to the fact that the grocers are doing something to show what pure food is.

In sending out the invitations to officers of commercial organizations, the committee in charge says:—

"It is to be hoped by the members of the union that the officers of all the commercial associations in the city will accept the invitation, thus encouraging the grocers of the city and of the country to keep up the efforts which they have been making during the last few years, the result of which is plainly shown by the appearance of their stores and their methods of doing business, encouraging them to still greater efforts to place their trade in the prominent position it should occupy."

In addition to the lists of exhibitors already given in these letters, the following have reserved space in the last week: C. J. Van Houten & Zoon, the Nugget Polish Co. and L. Freed.

Quite a number of grocers in the retail and in the wholesale trade are interested, with other classes of business men, in the bank developments of the last week or so. The Retail Confectioners' Protective Association adopted resolutions disapproving the course of Attorney-General Jackson and of the receivers appointed on his motion in the case of the Oriental Bank. The management of the bank made arrangements to pay off all depositors in full with the aid of another banking institution. Mr. Jackson checked this plan at least temporarily, keeping control in the hands of the receivers.

The depositors are indignant at the interference with the plan which promised to give them their money within a few days and charge that the expenses of receivers will eat up a large part of the assets. The confectioners, in their resolutions, indorsed a proposed law which, in cases of this kind, would enable the State Banking Department to liquidate the affairs of a State bank, as Federal examiners do in the case of national banks.

Similar objections to the expenses of receiverships are made by depositors in the case of other State banks which closed their doors during the recent panic. In the battle, incidental to which there are promises of investigations of various kinds, L. J. Callanan and other grocers are taking an active part on the depositors' side.

A potato combine is a new development. About 200 farmers of Suffolk County in Long Island on Saturday decided to form a growers' association, which is to handle the output, using methods practically the same as those of the Long Island Cauliflower Association. It is estimated that about 5,000,000 bushels of potatoes are shipped from this county each year. The farmers say that they have been at the mercy of speculators in Brooklyn and New York who have in effect fixed the prices and manipulated the market. It is expected that the new association, by having agents in various cities, will be comparatively independent of speculators and will obtain a larger market for the product, sending some of it to Western cities, and thus get better prices. The shipments are to be so controlled so as not to glut the market at any point.

Some of the wholesale dealers take another view of the matter and say that the so-called speculators, by buying the potatoes and holding them for advances, had helped the farmers to market their output. Now the association will try to do this work, and thus the farmer gets the benefit of whatever speculation there is.

Eggs have been coming in in unusually large quantities in the last week, with the result that prices have fallen, and the prediction is made that the Easter supplies will be liberal and prices will continue low. The receipts have been more than 35,000 cases for each of the last two days.

The Transportation Committee of the New York Mercantile Exchange has addressed a letter to the Local Freight Agents' Association asking that a new rule in relation to examination of the eggs on their arrival at this terminal be not put in force. The objection is that the wholesale dealers would be put to expense in having a representative present during the examination, the object of which is to discover the amount of breakage en route, and that deliveries would be delayed.

Importing grocers who went from this city to Washington last Saturday to attend the hearing on the question as to the use of sulphate of copper in canned goods express the belief that the arguments presented in their behalf will have much weight. The Secretary of Agriculture and the members of the Board of Food and Drug Inspection were among those who listened to the claims made by the attorneys for the importers, that the copper, in the minute quantities in which it is used, is harmless.

The fall in borax prices is interesting grocers. Since October the quotations have fallen from 7½ to 4½ cents per pound in bags, while in barrels the fall has been from 7¾ to 4¾ cents a pound. Estimates are made that the business has fallen off 30 per cent. The reasons commonly given are that the demand from the enameling trades has declined and the meat packers, because of the rulings of the food authorities, have ceased to use borax for preserving purposes.

It is reported that the Pacific Coast Borax Co., which has controlled most of the trade, is to meet keener competition in the near future, both from domestic and from foreign companies.

Some of the chain grocery companies are said to have a scheme for getting a little the best of the excise law. It is to take out licenses only for certain months when the demand for liquors is most lively, or at least to omit the summer months when many of the people who buy bottled liquor are away from the city. The saving is $50 on each month that the license is omitted, and in the dull months this is said to be far more than any likely profits. When a company has a large number of stores it may be that considerable money is saved by paying the license fee only for certain months and putting the liquor department out of business in the other periods.

In newspaper interviews published during the week, Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust has placed himself on record as desiring an amendment to the present State food law by which the punishment will be fine or imprisonment instead of a civil penalty. Under the Act of 1895 the penalty was fine and imprisonment. Under the Act of 1907 which supersedes the Act of 1895 there is no criminal penalty at all. The case is tried in a civil court, and the penalty is recovered as any other debt.

To Make Food Adulteration a Crime.

Commissioner Foust believes the adulteration of food should be again made a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment. There is much to be said in its favor, and something to be said against it. In its favor is the fact that the adulteration of food is essentially a misdemeanor—sometimes even a crime—and for that reason it seems logical that it should be punished as such.

The fact remains, however, that when a food law authorizes imprisonment, it opens the way for rank injustice. Nine out of ten of the merchants arrested for food law violations are morally innocent, and this is the case even under the present food law. To give a judge in an ill temper the power to send such a defendant to jail is to do a very dangerous thing.

As a matter of fact, whether the penalty is criminal or civil, the practical result will probably be the same. In all the time that the Act of 1895 was in force not a single defendant was imprisoned. All were fined, almost always in the minimum amount of $50. It is well to remember, however, that under that law every one could have been imprisoned had the court desired.

Ancient Food Adulterations.

The "Spatula," a drug trade paper, publishes an interesting little item in its last issue to show that all the adulterated food frauds are not confined to the current generation. Here it is:—

> The Greeks and Romans had their troubles no less than we of to-day. Pliny tells us that the bakers of Rome used to mix with their dough a white earth that was soft to the touch and sweet to the taste, and so made bread that had weight and good appearance, but no food value. He also speaks of wine adulteration, and says that even the rich could not be sure that their beverages were pure. The famous wines of Falerno were adulterated in the cellars, and wines from Gaul were artificially colored by aloes and other drugs. In Athens wine adulteration was so common that special inspectors were appointed to detect and stop the practice. Throughout Europe, from the eleventh century onward, food adulteration was very generally practiced by bakers, brewers, spice-mongers and vintners.

This is without doubt extremely interesting, and restores to a certain extent our self-respect. It would be even more interesting to inquire whether in those ancient days there was also not a counterpart of Dr. H. W. Wiley.

The Private Brand.

In a recent issue the "Grocery World" commented on the announced decision of a Maryland canned goods packer to pack no more goods under buyers' label. The position taken was that while the private label was a good thing for the dealer who used it, it was not a good thing for the packer, because it destroyed all individuality of brand and literally built a fence around his goods, which the private label always prevented consumers from climbing.

Apropos of this, a writer in "Mertz' Magazine," a California advertising publication, speaks as follows:—

> The writer has seen labels and cartons for nearly three hundred different grocery concerns, in the storerooms of one raisin packing house in Fresno. These various houses had placed orders for a certain quantity of seeded raisins. As required, the raisins were ordered, the packing house processed and packed them and the raisins then went out under any one of the three hundred brands—but the packing house, the concern responsible for their quality of the raisins and integrity of the package, immediately disappeared—submerged under a wave of gold and highly colored inks, with pictures of every sort of flower and uncounted other devices.

Packers are awakening to this, and very shortly will probably come the time when no considerable number of them will consent to gratuitously assign the reputation of their goods to the dealer instead of exploiting it for themselves.

Dr. Wiley Commended.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, the Government chemist, has said a sensible thing, and the "Grocery World" wishes to bestow upon him all proper credit. In an address in Washington last week before the National Mothers' Congress, he said this:—

> If every mistress of a household in this country should demand pure foods, there would be little difficulty in the courts, and manufacturers would soon cease making things which the mothers of this country would refuse to buy for use in their families.

No truer word was ever spoken. There have been manufacturers who produced adulterated food because their tendencies were naturally crooked. But by far the great majority have produced it, if they produced it at all, because of a public demand. "Cheap! cheap! give us something cheap!" the people have cried and they have gotten their wish. Most naturally the realization has not been quite the anticipation, and in this fact is wrapped the origin of food laws.

But it has been a good thing—this campaign of adulterated food. Because it has taught the public that while it can have cheap stuff if it likes, it will be cheap in quality as well as in price.

Maine Corn.

The esteemed "Oregon Tradesman" perpetrates in its last issue what to the best of the "Grocery World's" knowledge and belief is an absurdity:—

> In connection with the Mocha and Java pure food labeling problem, it is interesting to note how the Maine corn question has been settled. No more sweet corn can be packed and labeled "Maine" save that which is grown within the confines of that State.

This journal has reason to believe that every can of corn sold in this country as Maine corn is actually packed in Maine. There doubtless was a time when it was not, but that time is past.

Can Dr. Wiley Possibly be as Small as This?

If Dr. H. W. Wiley, the Government chemist, is correctly quoted in his address before the Mothers' Congress in Washington last week he is revealing himself as an extremely small and malicious man. It will be remembered that the Corn Products Refining Co., manufacturers of

This hearing is to be held in order to give all those who are interested in the manufacture, sale, and hence of the labeling of these products, an opportunity to meet with the Board and discuss the whole subject thoroughly, the Board thus obtaining their views prior to the promulgation of a decision on this subject.

H. W. WILEY,
Chairman Federal Food and Drug Board.

glucose, defeated him in the recent controversy over the naming of glucose "corn syrup." The Mothers' Congress speech occurred shortly afterward, and in the course of it Dr. Wiley is quoted as follows:—

> I have spoken of maple syrup as an important food product. Other table syrups should also be carefully scrutinized in regard to their purity. We have in this country abundant supplies of syrup-making materials to provide for all the table syrups needed. The maple grove, the sorghum field and the cane field are ready to furnish all the table syrups that we need. There is no necessity any longer, if there ever has been, of using glucose as a basis of a table syrup.
> By itself it is not palatable nor is it eaten as a syrup. When used it is very highly flavored with the lowest grade products which are entitled to the name of either syrup or molasses. For instance, the final residue of a liquid character from the sugar refinery is the most common substance used to flavor glucose when offered for consumption upon the table. Not only is it used for the flavoring, but its presence is usually designated by the statement that the syrup has a cane flavor. The table syrups of this country would be vastly improved if glucose were entirely eliminated from their composition, and if there was substituted for this mixed mass the pure products of the maple grove, the sorghum field and the cane field.

However inspired, this is a mean attack upon glucose, a product which all honest and fair scientists agree is perfectly wholesome and nutritious. Whether the inspiration for the slur lay in Dr. Wiley's defeat by the chief glucose manufacturer of the country, the "Grocery World" leaves open to conjecture.

Bankers Reduce Basis of Egg Loans.

The bankers of Pittsburg, as well as dealers in eggs, were, during the week, notified by banking interests in New York and Chicago that during the coming year not more than 10 cents a dozen would be loaned by banks on egg certificates or warrants from warehouses, and it was suggested that egg dealers in buying eggs for storage should govern themselves accordingly. A decision that no matter what false price shall be placed on eggs, not more than this low maximum of borrowing shall prevail is expected to have a great influence on the egg market of the next year, and that it will keep prices down is believed. As high as 16 cents a dozen has been secured in Pittsburg in the last year. Between April 1st and June 15th there is usually stored in the big cities about 300,000,000 dozens of eggs. This move of the banks to curtail wild buying on the part of the egg men is thought to be one of the first moves in effort to control the egg industry of the country, which is now rated at double the importance of the iron and steel industry.

Bread Must Be Sold by Weight in Alleghany, Pa.

Merchants' Protective Association Will Invoke an Old Law Which Forbids Its Sale by Loaf. Campaign Also Backed by Ordinance.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Alleghany, Pa., March 19, 1908.

The Alleghany County Merchants' Association is about to begin a campaign to compel all dealers in bread to sell it by weight, instead of by the loaf. An old law requires the selling of bread by the pound, and detectives will be at once put out through this district in order to secure evidence on which suits will be brought.

The law under which the actions will be brought reads as follows:

> All loaf bread made for sale within this Commonwealth shall be sold by the pound avoirdupois, and every baker or other person offering the same for sale, shall keep at his or her house, or at such other places at which he or she shall at any time offer or expose for sale any such bread, sufficient scales and weights, lawfully regulated for the purpose of weighing the same; and, if any baker or other person shall sell, or offer for sale, any loaf bread in any other manner, the contract respecting the same shall be void, and the person offending against this act, shall, on conviction, forfeit and pay the sum of $10 for every such offense, one-half to the use of the informer, and the other half to the use of this Commonwealth; and it shall be the special duty of the clerk of the market in any place where such officer is appointed, to discover and prosecute all persons offending against this act.

The law is supported by the following local ordinance, passed in 1870 by the city of Alleghany:—

> All loaf bread made for sale, and all loaf bread made within the limits of the City of Alleghany, shall be sold by weight, as follows, viz: Every leaf, twist or roll shall weigh one pound avoirdupois, and every baker or other person offering for sale any loaf, twist or roll bread of less weight than is prescribed by this ordinance shall forfeit and pay the sum of $5 for each and every offense, which sum shall be recovered on conviction before the mayor or any of the aldermen of said city—one-half of said fine or penalty shall be paid into city treasury and the other half to the prosecutor.

JOSEPH C. KANE,
Secretary Alleghany Merchants' Protective Association.

What Team Would Do This?

Automobiles are different from what they used to be in two respects—1. They don't break down like they used to; and 2. They have been so simplified that any average person can run them.

No man need fear an automobile will betray him into a lot of expense. The Lindsley Car will actually save him expense. As a delivery proposition it beats a team at least three times. What team will carry 1,500 pounds thirty miles at the cost of a gallon of gasoline?

The Lindsley Car will do that.

Sell That Too

You may want to sell a higher-priced coffee than Ariosa; very probably you will.

But that doesn't alter the fact that there is a large sale waiting for it among those of your customers who don't want a high-priced coffee.

When moderate-priced coffees are mentioned, the minds of nine out of ten people turn to Ariosa. It is the most widely-advertised package coffee in existence, which naturally greases the wheels to a good trade.

The profit on Ariosa is all any one could ask for on such a large selling article.

How the Oil Trust Disturbed Retail Oil Business

Extracts from the Testimony of Two Retail Oil Drivers Who Had Relations with the Standard. The Fight Among the Binghamton (N. Y.) Grocers.

The extent to which the Standard Oil Co. has been a disturber of the retail oil business is vividly shown by an extract from the testimony taken in a ease which the United States Government is now waging against the Oil Trust in Cleveland, Ohio. The basis of the charge is that the Trust's methods violate the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

During the progress of the case last week, one of the witnesses was one Chas. E. Farrell, who said he worked for the Standard Oil Co. several years up to thirteen months ago, said he was taken from his regular duties at Binghamton, N. Y., and sent to Oneonta, N. Y., to operate a tank wagon, selling to the consumers direct. There, he said, he entered into competition with the Tyonda Oil Co., an independent coneern. First, he said, he bought his oil of the Tyonda Oil Co. paying the regular wholesale price, 8 cents a gallon, and sold it to the citizens at the same rate.

The following is taken from the transcript of Mr. Farrell's evidence:

"Were there no profits for you?" asked the Government counsel.

"My wages and expenses were paid by William Mason, the Standard Oil agent at Binghamton," Mr. Farrell answered.

"What was the result?"

"The merchants began cutting prices and fighting among themselves for the trade. My wagon bore the sign of the Tyonda Company. The merchants became angry at that company for allowing me to do that and they stopped selling me oil."

"Then what did you do?"

"Mr. Mason sent me oil and I continued to sell at the same price."

"Then what?"

"The competition became so keen that some merchants gave oil away."

"Did you finally gain a trade?"

"Yes, but the wagon was stopped and I was called in to Binghamton."

Another witness who had worked in the same line was named John J. Shea. This witness had operated a wagon oil business in Syracuse, N. Y., selling consumers direct. He bought his oil from the Standard Oil Co. until he found he eould buy it cheaper from an independent company. He tells what followed:

"Then rival retail wagons appeared in Syracuse, under the name of the Home Safety Oil Company," he said.

"How long did this continue?" asked the Government counsel.

"Until a Standard Oil agent contracted to sell me oil for 3 cents under the wholesale price, providing I bought all of my oil from the Standard Oil Company. They also agreed to have the rival wagons withdrawn. I entered into the contract and the wagons left. The contract ran a year. During the year they allowed me only 2 cents under the wholesale price, and I would not enter into another contract. They said they would allow me 3 cents. I said I wanted to buy where it was the cheapest. They said they wanted the whole hog. I replied that I would fight and be content with the tail if necessary. The fight began. New rival tank wagons appeared and still are there."

In thousands of towns all over the United States this same thing has been done.

AMONG THE TRADE.

The manufacturers who constitute the principals of the members of the Philadelphia Association of Manufacturers' Representatives held a meeting at the Bourse on Wednesday last. There were about fifty present, all representing manufacturers of proprietary goods. The object of the meeting was the discussion of various trade abuses, notably the question of inducing jobbers to give proper treatment to specialty retail orders. Another subject considered was the conflict between the local jobbers and the organized retailers.

Potato Stock Less Than Last Year.

In past years the Bureau of Statistics has made no attempt to investigate the supplies of potatoes carried over the winter season. There has been some inquiry for this information, and the bureau therefore mailed, in the latter part of February, schedules of inquiry regarding stocks of potatoes on hand to about 800 eorrespondents in the principal potato growing counties in the United States. According to reports received from eorrespondents of the Bureau of Statistics during the latter part of February about 30 per cent. of last year's potato crop raised for market remained in the hands of growers. Percentages of principal States are as follows: New England States, 43; New York, 31; Pennsylvania, 28;

New Jersey, 13; Ohio, 25; Michigan, 29; Wisconsin, 31; Minnesota and Iowa, 28. The quantity of-potatoes held in growers' hands is estimated at about 15 per cent. less than a year ago. The proportion of the potato crop raised for market held by dealers at interior points is estimated at about 7 per cent. The quantity of potatoes so held was about 15 per cent. less than the quantity so held at corresponding time last year.

BUTTER AGAIN.

A new creamery tub butter comes along Monday morning that we're going to cut to 33 cents a pound. The price may suggest lower quality—don't let it. The goods you'll find right up to our standard. A fancy, rich, rosy butter, and we want every one of you to sample it just as soon as it is placed on sale. A tub will be placed on the grocery counter along with some oyster crackers, and its up to you men to make a butter record.

OUT WITH THE PEAS.

We're going to have another week's pea selling. The Minuet brand Sifted Early June Peas that have been selling at 15 cents will go on sale all week at 12 cents. We have 300 cases of this brand—far too many for this time of the year. Open a couple of cans and turn them out in a glass dish. Ask every eligible buyer to taste them. Talk about their smallness, about their sweetness. Say to your customer, "Notice the perfectly natural flavor, the uniformity of size and the beauty of color of these goods." Sell a dozen for $1.38; sell a case for $2.70. But sell them. In this way we ought to clean up fifty cases this coming week.

Y. M. C. A.

We are asked by the secretary of the Y. M. C. A. to call your attention to the Sunday afternoon meetings held in Association Hall. Unusually fine speakers are engaged for the coming five Sundays. These men, we are sure, have a message of truth to convey. Such meetings are inspiring. The writer has attended many of them and came away with higher resolves. Brighter hopes. Purer motives.

Going too far in pushing our own brands.

Not speaking a word to the one impatiently waiting to be served.

Not having prices at your tongue's end.

Being ignorant of our newspaper advertisements.

Showing the tendency of familiarity with the cashiers or girl clerks.

SELL CANNED SPINACH.

There isn't a canned vegetable back of your counter that is of a more pronounced success than the Garland brand canned spinach. The fresh article that we are selling now isn't to be compared to it. Clean, full flavor, full leaf, packed in solid No. 3 cans which is equal to almost a peck. Sell it with a full guarantee. If not better than the fresh, money back—14 cents. It's a regular spring medicine. Watch for the advertisement man's splendid talk on it this Wednesday morning.

The Difference Between Bank Notes

If some one said to you I'll give you a bank note if you will do something for me—you wouldn't be much interested, would you? It would be too indefinite.

If some one said I'll give you a hundred-dollar bank note that would be different, wouldn't it? The same difference exists if one of your customers tells her family "I am going to give you Pork and Beans for dinner"—they are not much interested; but if she says "I'm going to give you that means something. We have advertised them so widely that they have been widely used, and because they have been widely used their unusually fine quality is widely known.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is about unchanged from a week ago. The demand is fair for the season, which means moderate. There have been no changes in price. Low grades are still firm; other grades about steady. There is no indication of any immediate change in the prices of any grade.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee continues dull and listless. There is practically no speculation at all. The actual consuming trade and the roasters are buying from hand-to-mouth, recognizing the fact that only a few months will elapse before the receipts will be heavier and the new crop begins to come in. The trade are keeping closely in mind the fact that the holdings of the Brazilian syndicate are costing more every day, storage, interest, etc., for nearly two years running into money. The new attempt now pending in Brazil to organize a company to increase the consumption of coffee is not looked upon very seriously by the trade of this country. Milds are steady and unchanged. Java and Mocha are unchanged and in moderate demand.

Sugar.

Due to the high and advancing raw sugar market, refined sugar advanced 30 points during the week, all refiners concurring. Raws are very firm. There is an expected deficiency of about 33⅓ per cent. in the Cuban crop, and the total shortage in all cane sugar producing sections is expected to reach 600,000 tons. Europe is also high, and Cuban raw sugar is ruling at the highest price for years. Refined is strong at the advance and is likely to go still higher very shortly. The demand is fair.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is unchanged for the week. Compound syrup rules steady at unchanged prices; demand fair. Sugar syrup is in good demand for export, not so good for home trade. Prices are unchanged. Molasses rules steady at the advance noted last week; demand fair.

Fish.

No change in fish has occurred during the week. There is a good demand for Irish mackerel and also for Norway 2s and 3s, all of which, but particularly Irish, are scarce. Prices are firm but unchanged. Shore mackerel are about, but are not wanted to any extent. Cod, hake and haddock are quiet at unchanged prices. Salmon is dull at ruling prices. Domestic sardines show no change for the week, market rather weak. Imported sardines are wanted and rule high and firm by reason of scarcity.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are dull and unchanged in price, both spot and future. Corn is moving only in a small way, and prices show no change. Spot peas are a little easier, packers feeling inclined to move stock. Futures are still steady to firm. Peaches are unchanged and quiet. Apples show no change from the last quotation and rule fairly active. The Baltimore line of small canned goods is unchanged and quiet. California canned goods in first hands are dull; prices unchanged.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are even further demoralized. Sales have been made during the week on a 2¾-cent basis, which is equivalent to a decline of ¼ cent for the week. Some sales are even reported as low as 2½-cent basis. The demand is good. Peaches are in fair demand at unchanged prices. Apricots are scarce and cleaning up. Currants are cheaper on this side, but slightly higher abroad. Raisins are still soft and weak, but no further decline can be reported. Citron is dull and unchanged. Dates are in fair demand at ruling prices. Figs are selling well in other markets, but very little in Philadelphia.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans, both imported and domestic, are unchanged in price and in very light demand. Marrows are somewhat off, the present quotation being $2.10 to $2.15 in a large way. California limas are about 5¼ to come forward and about ⅛ more than that on spot. Dried peas, yellow and green splits, and green and Scotch are all unchanged and in fair demand.

Butter.

The butter market has remained stationary during the week. The receipts of fresh butter are about normal and are selling on arrival on the present

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

basis. The future of the market depends on the consumptive demand. The present outlook indicates that there may be no change during the coming week, and what is said here applies also to held goods and under grades.

Eggs.

The receipts of fresh eggs are very liberal, and in consequence the market has declined about 2 cents during the week. All of the present receipts are absorbed readily at full prices, and present values are about the same as a year ago. Future prices, however, are quite uncertain and depend on the speculative demand. The market seems to have about reached bottom. The quality of eggs arriving is very fancy and good enough for storage purposes.

Cheese.

The cheese market is unchanged. Considering the price there is a fair demand. Present prices are about 1 cent above a year ago, and stocks are lighter than for many years at this season. The future depends on the consumptive demand. No radical change is expected for the present.

Provisions.

The market for smoked meats is about ¼ cent above the price ruling about a week ago. There has been a reduction in the supply of hogs, and the price of hog products is about ¼ cent higher. Both pure and compound lard have also advanced ¼ cent. Barrel pork, dried beef and canned meats are in better demand at unchanged prices.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Imported Fish Products.

The herring market has shown some slight improvement as to demand, but no improvement whatsoever in regard to prices, which are as low as ever and are not likely to advance any more this season.

Irish fat herring are the only article that is really in good demand and for which good prices are being paid.

Norway herring are in good hand-to-mouth demand and prices tending in buyers' favor.

Mackerel.—There has been a very fair hand-to-mouth business. There has been little doing in Irish mackerel, but several parcels of Norway mackerel have changed hands, so that now the total stock is virtually concentrated in two or three hands. There is just one parcel in the way yet, and if this small lot of Norways is taken up by one of the three parties the market will be sure to advance quite abruptly, as there is positively not enough mackerel in the market to cover the demand. Besides, Norway 4s, for instance, are certainly very much cheaper in comparison to Irish, and they are certainly very much finer in quality.

Imported Oil Sardines.—There is absolutely no change, as no stocks can be expected until the new catch starts in again. The few cases of Portuguese sardines that are coming are taken up readily by eager buyers.

Sprats.—The fishing has been a big failure. Stocks are extremely small here and abroad, and prices are very firm and are sure to advance when the very least improvement in demand shows.

Norway smoked sardines continue in very good demand, and, thanks to the scarcity of French sardines this season, Norway smoked sardines have really taken the lead of the market.

STROHMEYER & ARPE CO.
New York, N. Y.

Spices.

The market continues active, with good spot demand. Prices we note are somewhat firmer. There is also a gradual increase in supplies.

Pepper.—Supplies of Singapore small. The price is firmer for spot goods. Other grades are all in good demand.

Cayennes are extremely scarce. Prices of Zanzibars and Mombassas are likely to go much higher.

Cloves.—The demand has been exceedingly steady. Spot stocks are rapidly disappearing. Futures from Europe and the East are much firmer, and the tendency appears upward. In fact, an advance of about 1 cent per pound has occurred during the week. It is a fact that the present crop is smaller than first reported.

Pimento (Allspice) is fairly active; prices are unchanged, which are low and safe at present.

Mace.—Good grades are scarce and high in price. Demand fair.

Nutmegs.—Demand is quite satisfactory; prices are fairly steady.

Cassias.—Demand continues exceedingly good; prices are unchanged. There is still a great scarcity of China rolls in cases.

Gingers.—Prices are firm and the demand quite satisfactory.

Seeds.—Caraway is slightly easier; poppy somewhat firmer; celery and coriander are unchanged.

Coffee.

Our last report was dated the 15th ultimo. The expected sharp falling off in the receipts at Brazilian shipping ports has not materialized as yet; nevertheless, we believe that the total receipts at Rio and Santos during the current crop year will not exceed 10,500,000 bags, a figure which we maintained without wavering since September 14th.

The receipts are in line with those of the crop years 1904-5 and 1905-6, when the total amounted to 10,000,000 and 10,250,000 bags respectively.

The figures indicate that the consumption of Brazil coffees keeps up to the high level reached last year. With speculation practically eliminated, it is reasonable to expect that the law of supply and demand will have its influence on values more especially from now on, since we are entering a period of small receipts at Rio and Santos. With average receipts running in the neighborhood of 15,000 bags a day at both ports, and a consumption going on of 35,000 bags a day, the deficiency of the supply is bound to make an impression on existing stocks, and therefore affect prices.

The consumption of mild coffees has not fluctuated much during the last four years, in fact it shows a tendency to decrease. The production likewise has not varied much in recent years. This year there will, however, be a shortage of about 600,000 bags in mild coffee crops, which shortage will be felt in the receipts from now on, but will be more severely reflected in the receipts during the six months immediately following the close of the fiscal year.

The receipts of mild coffees in consuming markets during the months of March to June, inclusive, amounted to in 1905, 1,900,000 bags; 1906, 2,650,000 bags; 1907, 2,200,000 bags; whilst this year we do not believe that more than 1,600,000 bags will come forward of these coffees during that period.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

Continued favorable weather for shipping canned goods without any danger of freezing on the road has brought to this market many orders for small lots of assorted goods which probably would not have been purchased before April under ordinary conditions, and they further emphasize the fact that a majority perhaps of the jobbers are not carrying their usual stock of canned goods, having added very little, if any, to their stock since October last. The aggregate of those orders makes a respectable total, and barring unfavorable weather later on the usual spring demand may be looked for with confidence. The transportation lines are anticipating an earlier than usual opening of the lake and rail routes with their lower freights which always helps the canned goods business very materially in the markets reached by those lines in the West, Northwest and Southwest.

Orders for tomatoes for prompt shipment were more numerous during this week and some of them were for good-sized lots. No one expects any boom in them, but there are good reasons to believe that the demand during April, May and June will be of a very satisfactory character. The buying orders recently have covered almost every State in the country, which recalls the remarkable activity in that article almost up to the most serious days of the panic in October. It looks like the present prices may prove to be the lowest of the year. The jobbers are beginning to show more interest in future tomatoes, and the developments during the week rather favor the idea that the buying of them has not quite gone out of fashion. From now on the activity in that line may be expected to show improvement each week.

Next to tomatoes the largest demand was for cove oysters, which yielded a little bit in prices unexpectedly because of the unusually warm spell of weather here. In the general lines of fruits and vegetables no one article seemed to be the leader, the demand covering about equal quantities of nearly all of the staple articles as well as some of those articles which have not been at all active since last fall. Those small jobbing orders frequently repeated aggregate a goodly quantity when counted up at the end of the month.

Is This a Miracle?

Southern Concern Claims to Have a Machine, Price $2.00, Which Will Make a Pound of Butter from a Pint of Milk.

A concern calling itself the Star Manufacturing Co., of Covington, Ky., seems to have performed a miracle. In a recent issue of the Philadelphia Sunday papers it inserted the following advertisement:—

> BUTTER THREE CENTS A pound; one pint of milk makes one pound of butter; new discovery; machine sold on payments $1 a month; every family will buy one; thousands of dollars to agents. Write for circulars, Star Manufacturing Company, Covington, Ky.

A "Grocery World" representative sent on for details of the plan and received some persuasive literature which contends that the firm have a machine which will change a pint of milk into a full pound of good butter. Naturally none of the machines used by the creamery industry can produce any such results, and if this machine honestly produces them, the industry is revolutionized. The price to agents is only $2, which is cheap for a miracle-worker.

The following is the Star Manufacturing Co's own explanation of its machine:—

A FORTUNE OFFERED THE INVENTOR

Before this Company was organized to manufacture this machine, the inventor was offered $100,000.00 for all his American and Foreign rights by one of the largest Trust Companies in the United States, but he preferrd to associate himself with good old Kentucky people, whom he has known all his life. In this way he could control this grand invention, and give to every family, either rich or poor, an equal opportunity to have one at a reasonable price.

GREASE IS UNHEALTHY.

Butter as you buy it from the store to-day, is nothing more or less than salted grease. Nearly everyone eats too much fat or grease. Grease cannot be digested by the stomach, so it is forced into the intestines, where it is taken up by the blood and formed into fatty tissues of the body. When too much fat is eaten, the blood becomes impure or poisoned. Nature throws it off—through the pores of the skin—causing skin diseases and a bad complexion.

GOOD BREAD AND BUTTER

Are healthy when too much butter is not used. In order to please the taste, nearly every one spreads too much butter on their bread, which interferes with the digestion. Now, these are true facts. Our machine makes you a butter, having all the delicious flavor and taste of the best creamery production, and still it contains only one-half of the injurious butter fat.

ANY MAN, WOMAN OR CHILD

Can operate the machine. Simply turn the crank two minutes' time, and the machine will make you the sweetest, purest butter you have ever tasted, out of one pint of milk or cream.

THE RESULT OF APPLIED SCIENCE.

Our Electrical Butter Maker is not the result of a dream or any other foolishness. On the other hand, it is the production of years of hard study and chemical research. Only a few years ago electricity was hardly known as a useful element in applied science. Now the scientific world uses it as the basis of all experiments. The butter we make and the results obtained with our machine is produced entirely by static electricity. Pages could be written on this scientific devlopment, but we will be as brief as possible.

HOW THE BUTTER IS MADE.

First, static electricity is derived from the air we breathe, and its greatest affinity is hydrogen, which composes two parts of any moisture. Our machine is so constructed that when it is in motion it carries a certain amount of air down a central tube and into the vacuum caused by the speed of the centrifical mixers. This air carries with it static electricity. That mixes with the hydrogen in the butter and milk, causing the globules to separate and unite with each other, thus forming together as one unit, the milk and butter, the result of which is butter in its purest state.

SAVES $26.00 A YEAR.

The average family uses three pounds of butter a week, which costs $50.00—on an average—for the year. Our machine saves one-half of this expense, or, in other words, it saves 50 cents each week, which amounts to $26.00 each year. Just think of this great saving.

MONEY TO AGENTS.

Anyone can sell this machine. You can sell one to every family. Don't say you don't know about it, for we know you can just take our machine and let anyone try it, and as soon as they see what it will do, your sale is made. If they cannot spare all the money, you can sell it to them on payments; $2.00 down, and $1.00 each week, for three weeks, or $4.00 cash.

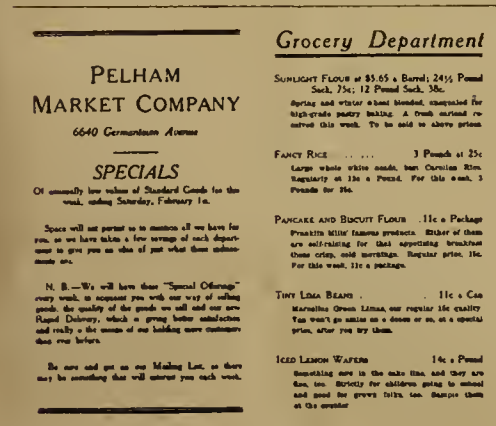
THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.



One of the neatest little grocery advertising folders which has come to this department for a long time was issued by the Pelham Market Co., 6640 Germantown avenue. It is printed in the four fold style, and is here reproduced in reduced form.

This is very well prepared and very well printed. It will attract attention, and the attention it attracts will almost surely be favorable. The only criticism I would make of it is that being printed only on one side it is a little unwieldy in form. I believe in making a piece of advertising as easy to read as it is possible to do so. Making it easy to read means printing it on convenient-sized paper as well as using proper type. This folder would have probably been just as effective printed on both sides, and it would have been a good deal more compact and incidentally would have cost a little less.

* * *

If grocers who are a little careless about their printed matter, and who leave the whole thing to the printer because "he knows better," could realize the impression of high gradeness which is created by a piece of printing like this, they would turn over a new leaf. You think the average consumer doesn't understand; I admit that he doesn't. Nevertheless he is impressed even without understanding. There is something about a piece of good, tasty printing that impresses, exactly like a suit of good clothes. By the same token there is something about ordinary printing which creates an impression also, but it is of another sort. Any man who has studied advertising will tell you instantly that the form of an advertisement—the external features; paper and type and arrangement—are even more important than the matter of it.

Cost of Necessaries Lowest in Thirty-three Months.

Bradstreet's Shows that Fluctuation in Most Foods and Other Necessities Has Been Downward. Total Decline Twelve and One-half Per Cent.

Speaking further of the cost of living, the reduction in which was briefly referred to last week, the expenses of the necessaries of life are lower now than they have been in thirty-three months, according to Bradstreet.

It was in March, 1907, that the highest general level of prices for foodstuffs, textiles, coal and other commodities was reached. Since then they have dropped 12.5 per cent., the decrease being fairly evenly distributed from month to month.

There have been some thirty increases in price during the year, but Bradstreet's records show that sixty-three products, including provisions and textiles, cost less than last March. Of the thirty products that are higher, some are sugar, tea, potatoes, apples, wheat, corn, oats, barley, soft coal and petroleum.

Prices are still 40 per cent. higher than the low level recorded on July 1, 1896.

In averaging fluctuations of prices, Bradstreet's uses an index figure, representing a compilation of costs of more than 100 commodities. The record goes back sixteen years.

Index numbers for thirteen staples, estimated on totals of prices per pound, show that the price of ten out of the group decreased during February. One remained unchanged and two went higher.

The following table illustrates the movement in prices of these thirteen staples in the last twelve years:—

Santa Monica, Cal.

Grocers and dealers in fresh meats at Santa Monica, Cal., have united in demanding prompt settlement of all accounts. Every grocer in the city has signed an agreement absolutely limiting the credit given to their trade. There is no deviation from the set rule and the new plan is working admirably. An advertisement bearing the signature of every grocer is appearing in the daily papers outlining the plan. Here is the advertisement:—

To Whom it May Concern:—

Owing to the present financial condition, and realizing that business conditions have changed, whereby we are selling on closer margins than ever before, and to enable us to even sell on still closer margins, we are compelled to adjust our business on as near a cash basis as possible, safeguarding our own welfare as well as reducing the living expenses of our customers.

We have mutually agreed to adopt the following rules:—

All weekly bills to be paid each Monday morning.

All monthly bills to be paid on or before the 10th of each month, cash to accompany orders after that date until bill is paid.

In no case is credit to be extended longer than thirty days. All accounts to be paid in full, and no balances to be carried over to following month.

We believe this is only fair, for we are now compelled to pay for our goods on the same terms, and unless we can enforce these rules our business life is threatened.

We believe this will work a hardship on no one, but will benefit merchant and customer alike. We promise to supply you with meat and groceries as cheap as spot cash will buy them.

We ask your co-operation.

Indianapolis, Ind.

At the last meeting of the Board of Directors of the Indianapolis (Ind.) Retail Grocers' Association it was decided to renew the efforts made two years ago to stop the retailing of coal oil and gasoline at wholesale prices by the oil companies. There are now four wholesale oil companies operating in Indianapolis. Of these there is but one which sells at retail—the Standard Oil Co.

At the meeting the Committee on Wholesalers and Manufacturers was instructed to formulate a protest against the practice of wholesalers entering into competition with the retailer and to forward the protest to all the oil companies doing business in the city. This committee drew up a protest, instructing the secretary to mail a copy to each of the four oil companies. The protest is as follows:—

Gentlemen:—Whereas, it has been known for some time by the Retail Grocers' Association of Indianapolis, that certain oil companies operating in this city have been selling coal oil and gasoline to consumers by a house-to-house delivery and in many cases at practically the same prices as that charged to the dealer, now, therefore, we, the Retail Grocers' Association of Indianapolis, protest against such practices, believing that it is not just and equitable for a wholesale concern to enter into competition with the retail dealer.

We further desire to state that it is the unanimous decision of our Association to bestow our patronage upon such concerns as do not indulge in such practices as above described.

This action was taken by the Board of Directors of the Retail Grocers' Association of Indianapolis, at a meeting held February 25, 1908, and the Committee on Wholesalers and Manufacturers was instructed to formulate a protest against such practices and forward same to the several oil companies operating in Indianapolis.

A reply to this communication is respectfully requested.

Respectfully,

The St. Louis Retail Grocers' Association has put itself on record as being in favor of the principle of fixed retail prices through the passage of a resolution asking certain manufacturers to make a minimum selling price on the staple goods they put out. The resolution reads as follows:—

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. Breckenridge.

Port Wine.

It takes its name from Oporto, in Portugal, the chief port from which this wine is shipped. It is the fine dark red or purplish wine of the Upper and Lower Douro, near Lisbon.

When new and genuine—which is rare—it is rough, strong and rather sweet to the taste; but with age, in bottle, it becomes tawny, losing its astringency and becoming a rich and strength-giving stimulant.

It usually contains about 25 per cent. of proof spirit, and its effect is rather stupefying than exhilarating.

Port should never be very sweet. A dry wine is full in flavor, but not abounding in sweetness, while a full-bodied wine is generally newly made.

The sediment usually seen in old bottles of port consists of bitartrate of potash (cream of tartar), which being slightly soluble in wine, gradually settles and forms what is known as "crust." This crust must not, on any account be allowed to pass into the decanter. It is also desirable for the decanter to be quite as warm as the wine that enters it.

The finest white ports are Lacryma Christi, Dedo de Dama, Muscatel de Jesus, Ferral Branco, Malvazi (or Malmsey), Abelhal, Agudeho, Alvaraca, Donzellin Folgozao, Gonveio, White Mourisca, Rabo da Ovelho and Promissao.

The best black port is Touriga, and the sweetest Bastardo. Other dark kinds are Souzao, Aragonez, Pegua, etc.

Preserved Ginger.

Preserved ginger, both Chinese and that from the West Indies, are supposed to be prepared from the same kind of plant, Zingiber officinale, but Chinese is much more tender and succulent than the West Indian product—so much so that it is impossible to dry the rhizomes sufficiently to render them fit for export in the usual commercial form; if it had, dried ginger would have been exported from China long ago.

In China the young green tubers, or roots of the plant, are first scalded, then washed in cold water and peeled. They are next covered with a weak

Isn't It Foolish To Advertise Light?

It seems ridiculous to advertise light, so obvious is it that that which is lightest is cheerfulest and draws the most people.

Particularly a store. Every successful grocer in business uses an amount of light that you might consider extravagant; but it isn't—it is business. These grocers make their stores cheerful because they know that cheeriness brings people, and people buy.

You'll find that the most successful stores are always the ones that are the brightest at night.

syrup (say, one pound lump sugar in six pints of water for twelve pounds of ginger), and left for two days. The syrup is then poured off and replaced by stronger syrup, and this is repeated two or three times until the syrup is made very thick (say, twelve pounds of sugar in twelve pints water, boiled and stirred till of the consistency of virgin honey), and the ginger swollen, bright and nearly transparent. The pieces of ginger thus charged with syrup are then packed in jars or glass bottles as close as possible, and these are next filled up to the very top with more thick syrup, so as to leave no room for air. The bottles are finally corked and the jars are made airtight by pasting lids and parchment over them. The Chinese preserved ginger is nearly all prepared at Canton and Hong Kong.

A kind known as Ng Mai Keuing is preserved in Swatow, from an Alpine plant (Alpina galanga), but it is not like the Canton and Hong Kong ginger, and is only made up for native consumption, to be used medicinally or for cooking. Some of it goes to the Straits Settlements, but none to Hong Kong.

That preserved in Jamaica is mostly put up in glass bottles, but the prices are usually exorbitant.

Fighting Hard for Color in French Canned Goods.

Rumors of a Forthcoming Decision Against It Drives Importers to Washington. Hearing Before Federal Food Authorities on Question of Harmfulness.

The leading importers of French canned vegetables, notably peas, Brussels sprouts, string beans and Flageolet (lima beans), are bringing great pressure to bear upon the Department of Agriculture to induce a favorable decision upon the proposition to definitely legalize the use of sulphate of copper as a coloring agent. No official decision has yet been made barring French goods containing color, but it was announced recently that such a decision might be expected at any time.

As soon as this rumor began to circulate, the importers made an appointment with the Department of Agriculture and have had a hearing before the Federal food authorities during the past week. The arguments hinged on the one question of the harmfulness of the color, and the importers all contended that there was no case on record where any one had been harmed. Dr. Wiley answered this by the statement that English investigators had found the copper unwholesome and prosecutions were now pending in that country against concerns who used it. No decision was made.

The elimination of sulphate of copper as an artificial color is another of Dr. Wiley's pet ideas. Importers of French vegetables say that a ruling against it would almost completely end all American business in the products named. The French process of packing destroys much more of the natural color than the American process, and the goods would come here colored about like straw. They are chiefly used for garnishing anyway, and the lack of color would destroy all usefulness in that direction.

Oleo Output Increases.

The output of oleomargarine for the country at large for the month of November, 1907, was 455,711 pounds colored and 5,906,784 pounds uncolored, or a total of 6,362,495 pounds, against 418,558 pounds colored and 5,691,116 pounds uncolored, or a total of 6,115,674 pounds for the same month a year ago, and 572,612 pounds colored and 9,013,048 pounds uncolored, or a total of 9,585,664 pounds for the preceding month of October. The output for the month of December was 434,489 pounds of colored and 6,687,124 pounds of uncolored, or a total of 7,121,613 pounds, against 457,859 pounds of colored and 7,115,428 pounds of uncolored, or a total of 7,573,278 pounds for the same month a year ago. The output for the month of January was 464,433 pounds of colored and 6,937,000 pounds of uncolored, or a total of 7,401,493 pounds, against 571,795 pounds colored and 6,519,656 pounds uncolored, or a total of 7,091,451 pounds for the corresponding month a year ago.

With bookkeeping almost eliminated; annoying customers easily handled; no disputing accounts; accounts in the safe in case of fire are some of the reasons why Forbes Indexed Coupon books are popular.

And our case is your case, for you can get these sales. More, we've seen to it that you can get them at a profit which averages as well as the profit you make on everything.

The finest baked beans and the finest baked bean proposition.

"GET SOME"

How Easy to Sell are the Things that are Different

Every Experienced Grocer knows how much easier to sell are things that are different from the common run.

What can you say of a brand of pickles cured and packed in the same old way?

Hoffman House Little Pickles are cured differently from all others, and packed differently from all others. This is a talking point of great value, good enough to have window displays and demonstrations on.

This Local Option Business.

This local option business interests me a lot.

It ought to interest you fellows, too. Because people are looking at it now as a business proposition. It's really always been that, but we didn't realize it.

Any business proposition affects the retail grocer.

I believe the liquor business is down on the list for settlement one way or the other pretty darned soon. I saw something the other day that showed how much it's come to be recognized as a business proposition.

I was in a store in Baltimore. A small neighborhood store on the outskirts. A fellow who looked like a workman came in. The grocer seemed to know him and they chinned together for a while.

Finally the workman pulled a paper out of his pocket and showed it to the grocer with a laugh.

The grocer read it and handed it back.

"That's what they're doing, is it?" he said in surprise.

"That's what," said the workman, "it means cuttin' it out for me all right."

"Well, it never did you any good," said the grocer.

"Sure it didn't," said the workman, and then he went out.

"That fellow works for the B. & O. Railroad Co.," said the grocer to me afterward, "and they've sent notices to all their men that no man who drank liquor could hold his job with 'em."

I was surprised. I had no idea the thing had gone that far.

"What effect will that have?" I asked.

"It'll be the greatest thing that ever happened to me," he said. "I sell a lot of goods to B. & O. men, and I have to carry a lot of 'em all the time. They're good fellows, but they spend a lot for rum, and the more they spend the less they have to buy groceries with. Yes, that'll do me a whole lot of good."

You see how close the connection is? You take a man who drinks hard—food is always the last thing he thinks of. Rum takes the place of it, or he thinks it does. He don't eat as much, and if he could he wouldn't be able to buy it.

I was talking the other day with a man who thought local option was the worst thing he ever heard of. "An outrage!" and all that sort of thing.

One thing he said was that a prohibition town was always a dull town. "Killed business."

I'll be darned if I can see how. Ain't it clear that the less money that goes for rum the more'll go for decent things or be saved for a rainy day? Which is it that makes towns prosperous—money spent for rum or money spent for groceries and dry goods? The argument don't seem sound.

I've never been a water-tight Puritan on this drink business. I've always hit one when I wanted it. To be sure I never wanted it very often.

I do think, though, that we'd all be better off without it. I can't see how it really helps anybody except the saloonkeeper. And it hurts an awful lot of people. By George, if I could tell you some of the things I've seen.

The other day my wife asked me if I wouldn't go down to a Magistrate's office and look after a matter. She used to have a washerwoman—a decent honest soul—who married a driver for a wholesale grocery house. The poor woman had just been to the house with a tale of woe that her husband had been arrested for something, and would I go down and see if I could do anything.

Well, I went down. The poor devil was there—it seemed he had taken out a drayload of stuff to deliver and had gotten a thirst on he couldn't resist. He sold a lot of the goods and drank up the money and then left the team in the lurch somewhere and lit out. They got him afterwards though.

There was nothing to do. He admitted doing it, and blubbered about his wife and child—too late.

His wife said to me as we came out, after seeing the poor thief sent to jail for not getting bail:—

"Jim didn't mean to do that. He can't let rum alone. He tries all the time something fierce! How can any man let it alone when they let 'em sell it on every corner!"

There are men who can't let it alone, you know. I've seen 'em try and I tell you I'd rather have cancer than the thirst-disease!

It's a crime to give saloons the chance to stick drink under the nose of such a man as that! It's a worse crime, after he's been knocked out by the temptation that the law puts on every corner, to soak him for what he does when he's yielded to it!

It's such a rotten mean thing to do—tempt a man to drink who can't help but do it, and then come down on him like a ton of bricks for doing it!

During the week that ended on Saturday, two weeks ago, I called on fifty-two retail grocers. Every one of 'em I asked this question:

"Would knocking out the saloons here be a good or a bad thing for you?"

Forty-one said "good" right away. Two thought it would be a bad thing, because the saloons brought people in from the country on Saturday nights and they bought a lot of stuff.

Nine didn't think it made any difference, and I guess they were right. They all sold a class of trade that the saloon didn't affect much, and they all watched their credits close.

Forty-one out of fifty-two seems like a pretty good majority, don't it?

THE STROLLER.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., February 29, 1908.

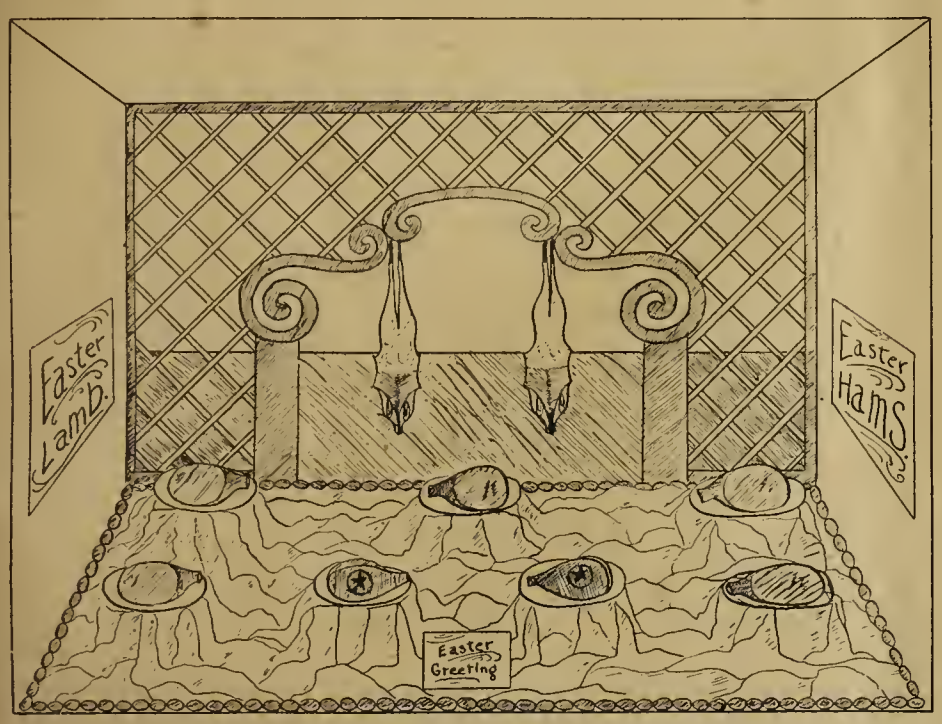
THE MODEL CASH GROCERY STORE.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your inquiry of recent date, we enclose a few sample slices of sandwich dried beef, sliced in the highest style of the art, sliced on Johnson's patented "EVERSHARP." These slices, thin as paper, smooth as glass, soft, moist and delicious, were cut the full size of a six-pound knuckle. The whole knuckle was sliced to perfection in six minutes.

I also enclose, in separate wrapper, some very small, very thin slices cut from the meat that covers the knuckle bone. Please notice that the little nub end of gristle and skin remaining unsliced weighs less than a quarter ounce, every particle of edible meat sliced up in thin, bright, salable slices. Of course we never sell any one a quarter pound of these little slices; but every half or quarter pound we weigh up gets alike its equal share of little and broad slices.

Please note the saving in time—as much work done in six minutes as the best circular-knife machines can do in twenty minutes, and then the quality of our work—slices thinner, smoother and more perfect than any other machine can possibly produce. So moist, so soft, so juicy, so broad, so transparently thin they cause enthusiastic comment wherever introduced, resulting in a large increase of very profitable trade.

We sell our machines for forty-six dollars on small monthly instalments, and every machine can be depended on to more than earn its own cost. If you prefer to pay cash we allow you a liberal discount. Hoping to receive your order.



Respectfully yours, A. W. JOHNSON.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

An Easter Meat Window.

The background for this window is made of white and purple crepe tissue paper. The scrolls are sawed out of box lids, are about 2½ inches wide and have pieces nailed on the back, where the wood is cross-grained or pieced, to hold them together. The part representing a column is a board about 6 inches wide.

Strips of wood are nailed across the ceiling, down the sides and across the floor to the columns. These are to nail the strips of paper to that form the lattice work. Next make your lattice work. This is made of strips of white crepe paper about 1½ inches wide, and are tacked on the outside of the strips of wood and the scroll work. After making your lattice, cover your scrolls with purple paper about 3 inches wide. This is tacked or glued on. The columns are covered with purple about 7 inches wide. There is also a 3-inch strip of purple all around the edge of the lattice.

On the floor of the window place a number of small boxes. Over these is loosely puffed white cheesecloth, or better still, a soft linen table cover. On top of these boxes place your hams on plates.

All around the edge of the floor is a row of eggs. If these eggs are colored it will look better, but of course will be more expensive.

On either side wall is a sign, "Easter Hams" and "Easter Lamb." Two lambs are hung by ropes from the ceiling so as to give the appearance of hanging from the scroll. Back of all this is a strip of paper tacked across the window. This can be either white or purple.

A couple of Easter lilies will add to the looks of this window.

This background and floor arrangement can be used as well for groceries and a great many other lines of goods.

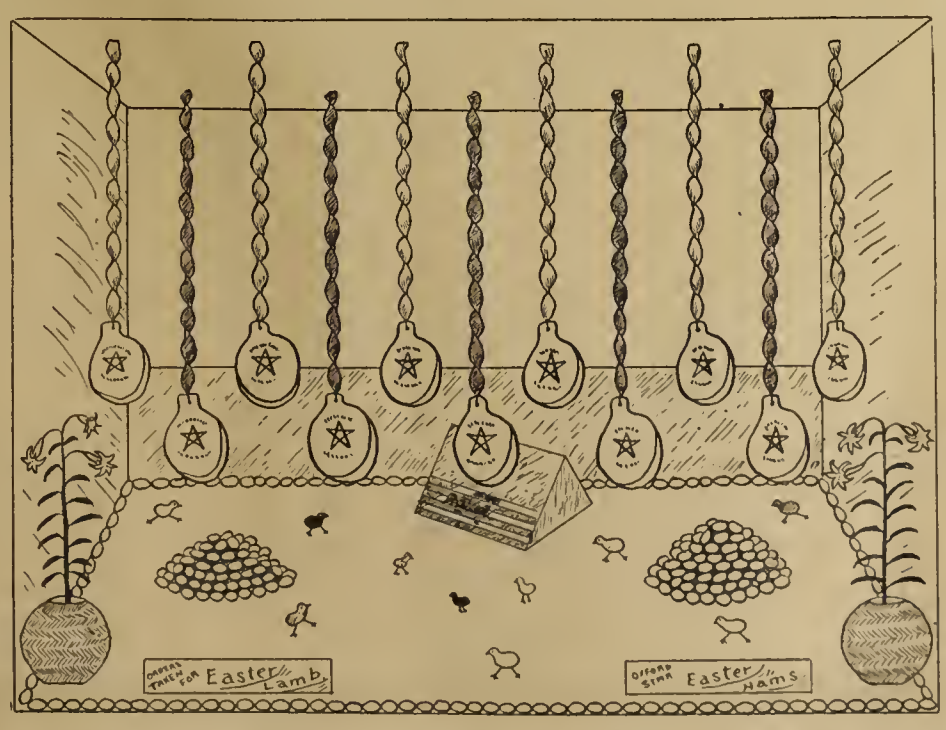
Easter Hams and Eggs Window.



This is a display of Easter hams and eggs. The hams are hung from the ceiling by wire (stove-pipe wire). They are arranged in two rows, the back row hang about 12 or 15 inches lower than the front row. Strips of white crepe tissue paper are twisted about the front row of wires and purple paper about the rear rows. These strips are 1½ inches wide.

The floor is covered with sawdust. All around the edge is a row of eggs. There is a pile of eggs in each end of the window. These are piled inside of a narrow barrel hoop, the sawdust covering the hoop. Color a few eggs and scatter them over top of these piles.

In either end of the window is an Easter lily. In the back is a chicken coop with an artificial hen inside. Scattered all about the floor are little artificial chickens. The background is a strip of white paper, 20 inches or more wide.

Why Ceylon Tea is Popular.

This journal recently called attention to the amazing progress made by Ceylon tea, entirely on its merits, in North America.

To the island's volcanic origin is due its independence of artificial soil fertilization, and to it also are ascribed certain agreeable and beneficent peculiarities of the tea, notably its lemony flavor, which other countries have long, and utterly in vain, attempted to produce.

Ceylon is a British possession and has the advantage of European scientific cultivation, and the use of machine processes, all of which tend not only for sanitation and economy, but also for uniformity of grade, etc., while other tea-growing countries, China for example, still uses the primitive method of curing and preparing the tea by hand.

Ceylon tea does not make as heavy a body as India and is greatly used in England to tone down the astringency and headiness of India's product. Possibly because Ceylon tea seems to be a happy blending of the delicacy and fragrance of the China tea, with more or less of the full body and stimulating power of the Indian product that makes it so popular with tea drinkers of this country.

She Always Went Back

"I occasionally try some of these much-advertised soaps," said a lady to one of our customers the other day, "but I always came back to Babbitt's Best. In many years I've never found anything that suited me so well."

Think of the grocer who filled all that lady's orders for Babbitt's Best. No talk—no persuasion—no explaining—no work. Simply filling orders that the soap itself gets.

And at a profit, too—don't forget that.

Warning Against Vinegar Frauds

Anonymous Correspondent Writes Dairy and Food Department that Much Bad Vinegar is About. General Soft Drink Frauds Revealed by Chemists' Examinations. Summary and Analysis.

The latest number of the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Bulletin, reporting the work of the department up to February 15th, contains a copy of an interesting letter sent the department anonymously, evidently by a vinegar manufacturer. The letter contains considerable information of value to the trade, and is here reproduced:—

Dear Sir:—In the spirit of fairness to manufacturer, jobber and retailer we believe that your attention should be called to the unfair methods of certain firms * * * engaged in the manufacturer of vinegar * * * * * Firms are doing a very large vinegar business and at prices much below what legitimate vinegar can be manufactured for. It is a question for your chemists to decide whether this vinegar is in compliance with the laws, or not.

We desire to especially call your attention to their scheme of overgauging each barrel from 2 to 5 gallons, and we venture to say that no car load shipment made by them is not over-gauged less than 300 gallons or more, which at the prevailing market prices would realize them not less than $35.00 to $45.00 to each 100 barrels.

This we consider an injustice to competitive manufacturers who are gauging correctly, and we believe that this matter should have your attention, also be called to the attention of the buyers.

A considerable portion of this vinegar is sold under buyer's name, and delivered to many jobbers in Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania.

There may be other manufacturers who are doing this and should be called to account for what we believe to be an unfair deal, a scheme for robbing, you might call it, and having in view a spirit of fairness to all we trust that you will give this illegitimate practice proper attention.

Respectfully,
A COMPETITOR.

The bulletin also contains a full report by H. C. Stiefel, Ph.D, of a number of analyses which he made of soft drinks now on sale in Pennsylvania. The report says: "The analyses reveal a deplorable state of affairs, so far as these syrups are concerned." From the report the "Grocery World" makes the following extracts:—

Some of the syrups contain appreciable quantities of fruit juice, a larger number contain just enough fruit juice to entitle them to the name "fruit syrup." The greater number, however, contain no fruit at all, the odor of the designated fruit being imparted to the syrup by an artificial ether.

In a very few samples the color is that imparted by a boiled fruit juice; in a larger number of samples the color is brightened up a little with an aniline dye; in the most of the samples, however, a brilliant, attractive color is produced by the liberal use of aniline dyes, or the syrup is converted into a veritable "bug juice" by the lavish use of cochineal.

The brilliant coloring and the strong, almost rank, odors would not deceive an adult, but, unfortunately, these beverages are consumed principally by children, to whose eyes and palate these pronounced colors and odors are certain proof of great strength in the designated fruit.

But we find a third deception, a hidden one, one not perceptible to eye or palate, hence of greater danger, and that is the use of preservatives.

Some of the samples tested contained no preservatives whatever, a few contained slight quantities of benzoate of soda, while others are liberally fortified against fermentation—and also against digestion—by the use of large quantities of benzoate of soda and salicylic acid.

The chocolate and sarsaparilla syrups tested were all pure, the sarcastic observer would say that this is so simply because no cheap substitute has been found, as yet, for cocoa or sarsaparilla.

Of the four "Pop" samples tested three were found to consist of carbonated water, sweetened with saccharine and colored a pleasing pink or red with an aniline dye.

The summary of the month's work is as follows:—

This Bill Would Kill Special Rebate Schemes

New York Congressman Introduces Measure Which Would Penalize Plans to Grant Extra Rebate to Concerns Who Buy No Independent Goods.

The "Grocery World" has obtained a copy of a bill which Representative Stanley, of New York State, has just introduced in Congress. It seems to be plain that if it becomes a law it will, if constitutional, make illegal all such schemes as that by which various manufacturing concerns seek to monopolize trade through giving an extra rebate to concerns that purchase no outside goods.

The text of the bill is as follows:

That no person, firm or corporation, or associations of individuals or associations of corporations, engaged in interstate commercial transactions shall either make it a condition of the sale of goods, wares and merchandise that the purchaser shall not sell or deliver any goods, wares or merchandise of any other person, firm or corporation, or association of natural or artificial persons, or shall give any rebate, bonus, or other thing of value upon such condition.

Sec. 2. That no such person, firm, or corporation, or association of individuals or corporations, engaged in interstate commerce shall pay to any commission merchant, broker, or other person or persons, or to any corporation or corporations acting as commission merchants, brokers, jobbers, or retailers, a greater commission or an additional reward, or give anything of value, upon condition that such purchaser, broker, or agent shall sell or handle only the goods, wares and merchandise of the said person or persons, corporation, or corporations producing or manufacturing the same. Nor shall such person, or firm, or corporation, or association of corporations reduce or curtail or pay a less commission or other award to or discriminate in any way against any commission merchant, broker, or other person or persons or any corporation or corporations, acting as such commission merchants, brokers, jobbers, or retailers, on account of their handling, selling, or offering for sale the goods, wares, or merchandise of any other person, firm or corporation, or association of natural or artificial persons;

Provided, that this act shall not be construed to prohibit the appointing of agents or sole agents for the sale of goods, wares or merchandise. Any violation of the provisions of this act shall be held to be a contract in restraint of trade among the several States, under the provisions of Section 1 of the act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890; and every person who shall be a party to said contract in violation of this act shall on conviction thereof be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court, and shall be subject to such other penalties, forfeitures, and suits in equity and actions at law as are prescribed in Sections 4, 5, 6 and 7 of an act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890.

The special rebate scheme comes under the second section. The methods used are generally familiar to the trade. Several manufacturing concerns pursue the principle of granting an extra rebate to firms who will buy no other goods but theirs. In most States there is nothing in existent laws to make the plan illegal, but if the above bill becomes a law such plans cannot be legally used by any concern engaged in interstate commerce. Very likely the firms who have found the plan profitable would defend on the ground that the law was unconstitutional.

When in the Market

For COFFEE either call on us or have one of our representatives call on you as we can make your money go farther than any one else can.

The house of "Wilde" has been in business nearly a hundred years, and still stands in the foreground of Coffee firms.

Our long experience has taught us which Coffee is best suited to different localities, and this knowledge is worth many dollars to you in making your selections. You get exactly what you buy, not only once, but all the time, and the values given are better than you can obtain elsewhere.

Let us prove our statements

SAMUEL WILDE'S SONS CO.

11 DUTCH STREET, NEW YORK

Please Your Trade and You Hold It

Every customer you have knows that to a very great extent the success she has with her laundry is dependent on the starch she uses. If you want to please her tell her to use Celluloid Starch, for it is the only starch made which she doesn't have to cook, and no starch on the market will enable her to turn out such perfect laundry work. We are making it worth your while to do a little talking for Celluloid Starch by spending a good part of our advertising appropriation for Universal Coupons. You can buy anything you want with them.

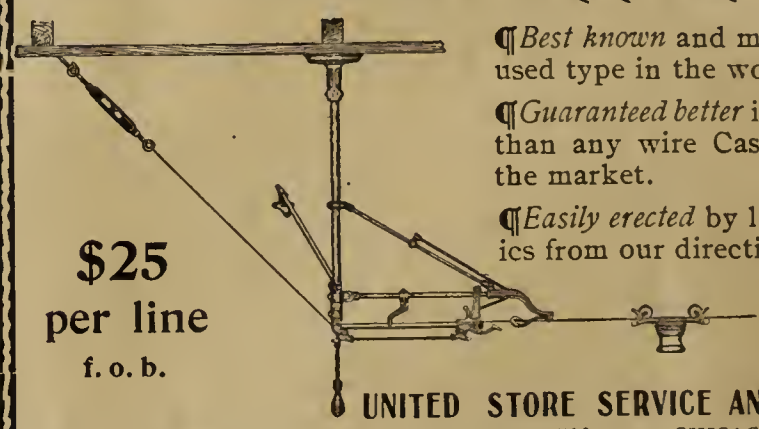
Bought Simply. Because She Liked the Glass Package

It's odd what little things make sales sometimes. A grocer told us the other day that the day before a woman had bought a jar of Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa simply because she liked the novelty of the glass package. She didn't ask any questions about the peculiar characteristics of the cocoa; she liked the glass jar and bought.

There is a point in that for grocers who study the public—the useful novelty is usually the seller.

Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa, the only cocoa packed in glass, has a smoother flavor than any other cocoa made. That is because our exclusive process of making takes out certain substances that other manufacturers leave in.



Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

Only One In Fifteen's A "Star"

By no means are all the hams we produce good enough to be branded Star.

We turn out 40,000 hams a day. There isn't a bad ham in the lot—rigid selection of hogs assures that; but only one out of about fifteen is fine and tender enough to bear the Star brand. The rest are good hams; but they are not Star hams.

The Star ham is from a young, but mature, corn-fed hog—not too fat. The meat is solid, sweet, tender and juicy—the ham to burn into the memory the name of the grocer who sold it.

WHY AND BECAUSE

Why has the Exton Cracker kept growing in popularity from 1847 to 1908? Because you can induce people to buy some other oyster cracker only once, and because you can induce them to stop using the Exton only once. Why does the Exton cracker lead and the others follow? Because there is no other oyster cracker for the Exton to follow, so it must lead.

They Wouldn't Imitate It If It Wasn't So Good

The Ramly Cigarette is the finest 10c. Turkish cigarette ever made. It is so good other manufacturers try to make their goods look like the Ramly, but there the similarity ends.

If you want to get a run on cigarettes, get people to go out of their way to come to to you, put in the Ramly. Remember how it is spelled—R–A–M–L–Y.

The STEEL FRUIT JAR CAP from the Chemist's Viewpoint

Prof. Chas. T. P. Fennel, the famous Cincinnati chemist, says that a steel fruit jar cap submitted to the influence of organic acids, such as are contained in fruits, do not corrode as much as zinc caps. He further says that resulting salts from this corrosion in the case of the steel cap are absolutely harmless, and that those from the zinc caps are poisonous to the human system.

If you tell this to your customers you can sell a lot of our steel caps.

THE WM. GLENNY GLASS CO., Cincinnati, Ohio

When the Jobber's Salesman Comes

When your jobber's salesman comes to you with future canned goods for 1908, ask him, in your own protection, if he will guarantee you 100 per cent. delivery. If he won't, then order Blue Bell or Clover Farm canned goods, for you can get 100 per cent. delivery on those.

No finer goods packed in all Maryland. Splendid quality, and a business-like contract giving you not what the packer wants to give you, but all you bought.

Ham Confidence

There is a vast difference between merely "ham" and Swift's PREMIUM Ham.

The grocer who just keeps "ham," who buys no special brand, and buys from no particular packer, is just as certain to have a small and irregular ham trade as night is certain to follow day.

But the grocer who sells only Swift's PREMIUM ham, which is always the same and always fine, will have a ham trade that amounts to something. His trade won't care to experiment with other grocers; they're getting what they want and they're getting it all the time.

PREMIUM Hams are tender, delicious and—this is important—well advertised.

Be Proud of Your Olive Oil

You may remember the recent tests which the United States Government made into all brands of imported olive oil.

Those tests (Government Bulletin 77, page 55) proved Nicelle Olive Oil to be superior to all the other brands tested. Nicelle Oil is made and bottled in Nice, France. It is the highest type of pure olive oil producible.

Sell olive oil you can be proud of. There are so many brands you can't.

Why We Do It

You've noticed that in nearly all our advertising to grocers we reproduce one of the advertisements we use to consumers.

We can't let you forget that we are working night and day to get you orders for Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour.

These foods are unexcelled and cannot possibly be excelled, either for their purity and nutritive value or as cold-blooded business propositions for you. Both brands sell easier and oftener and pay better than any other cereal brands we know of.

Read the Point In Large Type

Here's the proposition of James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet in a nutshell:—

1. It is the cleanest rennet made.
2. It coagulates milk in 2 to 5 minutes.
3. It will not spoil.
4. Every bottle is guaranteed.
5. Jobbers everywhere indorse it.

And last, but not least—this is in large type because it's a large point—it pays 100 per cent. profit. Costs $1.50, sells for $3.00.

Old Fashioned Gelatine

The cleanest gelatine in the world now comes to you, Mr. Grocer, packed with Universal Coupons.

For purity of stock and scrupulous cleanliness of manipulation Chalmers' Gelatine has no equal anywhere.

Nothing but the finest calves' stock and the clearest spring water. The result is real rich old-fashioned gelatine, as far removed from the nauseous imitations of it as wheat is removed from chaff.

The average consumer has been fed on imitation gelatine so long that he will turn with immense relief to Chalmers'—if you'll let him.

Two styles—granulated and shredded.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Don't Buy a Cheap Wagon

If you do, you'll remember this advice. A cheap wagon looks nearly as well in the factory as our "J. M.," but oh, what a difference in six months!

The "J. M." wagon is the best delivery wagon made. Only the finest materials go into it, and they're put together right, too.

If we haven't what you want, though we probably have, we'll build it for you.

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It costs you nothing to find out what our plan is—can you afford not to?

DAYTON MONEYWEIGHT SCALES

The subject of "Saving Profits" comes closer to the heart and pocketbook of the retail merchant when trade is dull, than when prosperity is at its highest. Merchandise is sold at a good margin and in smaller quantities, but the average of loss in the use of old style scales does not decrease in proportion. Merchants are studying this subject as they never did before and this accounts for the fact that January, 1908, shows over January, 1907. Merchants are not buying our scales for fun; they are installing them to save money. A MONEYWEIGHT SCALE is a guarantee of protection to both merchant and customer. No other scale has reached the high degree of accuracy and sensitiveness.

40 PER CENT. GAIN

Don't overlook the fact that we have an attractive exchange proposition whereby a user of a computing scale of any make can bring his equipment up-to-date.

It's a Hard Job, but We've Done It

You know how hard it is to please all your customers with coffee. It is natural for you to find it harder than we do, because you have a lot of things to do and we do nothing else. Private Estate Coffee is the result of many years' experimenting to please the popular taste, and it does it so well that we don't know of a grocer who has induced a customer to try it who isn't still using it. This is one important reason for your making a leader of it, and another is that we share our profits with you by giving you Universal Coupons with every case.

Could You Make a Living Then?

Suppose you sold nothing but bulk sugar, could you make a living?

No, you couldn't; and the chance is the more you sold, the further away from a living you'd be.

Procter & Gamble Co.'s Unjust and Illogical Blow at Organized Retailers

Serves Notice on Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association that No Matter How Much Soap They Buy, They Will Get No Better Price than the 25-Box Price. Chain Stores Still to Get Regular Quantity Price. Move Inspired by Local Jobbers Who Simply Mulct Retailers and Gain Nothing. Considered Blow at Organized Retailers.

Inspired by local jobbers, the Procter & Gamble Co., soap manufacturers, have, during the past week, delivered a blow at the organized and unorganized retail grocers of this section which is probably unprecedented in the history of the trade. Under circumstances wholly without precedent, the soap company has served notice upon the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association that no matter what its future purchases of soaps may be, the best price given will be the regular figure named on 25-box lots. In other words, even if the association buys a thousand boxes, as it frequently does, it can no longer get the 1,000-box price, but will be forced to pay the 25-box price, which is 30 cents higher.

The astounding feature of the announcement was that none of the chain stores are disturbed, but will still be given the price which properly belongs with their purchases. This price is usually $6.50, less 2 per cent. for cash.

The Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association has not been cut off by the Procter & Gamble people, only because it has never been technically on the direct buying list. Both the association and the chain stores have always bought at regular jobbing prices, but the Procter & Gamble Co. has billed the goods through jobbers, thus maintaining the fiction that they did not sell retailers. This arrangement will still be continued as to the chain stores, but is withdrawn as to the Retail Grocers' Association.

In this development of the local conflict the jobbers are without their usual selfish reason of wishing to increase their own business. In inducing the Natural Food Co. and the Toasted Corn Flakes Co. to refuse direct orders from retail organizations the jobbers thought that the business, some of it at least, would go to them. This was a selfish reason, but it was a reason.

In inducing the Procter & Gamble Co. to deal this blow to the Retail Grocers' Association the jobbers have gained not the slightest chance to benefit themselves. The jobber pays $6.50 for Ivory soap, less 2 per cent. for cash, and with additional discounts of 5 to 7½ cents per box in large lots. Under a limited price contract he is compelled to sell the soap to the retailer at $7.

Under the new arrangement the price to the Retail Grocers' Association will be $6.80—30 cents more than it was before. They are under no contract to sell at any special price, and they can therefore resell to their members at $6.80, reserving for expense account the 2 per cent. cash discount. The association will therefore still be able to undersell the jobber 20 cents per box, which will inevitably keep any of the association trade from going to the jobber. The situation of the association members is simply a little less advantageous than it was before—it is still far better than any deal through the jobber.

So that the members of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware have simply succeeded in compelling 700 Philadelphia retail grocers to pay 30 cents per box more for Ivory soap than they paid before, without even the justification of benefiting themselves!

The fact that the chain stores will still be able to get the quantity price denied to the association will mean that James Bell, for instance, who conducts forty or forty-five stores and may buy 100 boxes of soap at a time, will buy at $6.50, while the members of the Retail Grocers' Association, who buy for 700 stores will not be able to do better than $6.80, no matter what they buy. As a matter of fact, the association will probably buy ten times as much soap at a time as Mr. Bell. Since there is no contract binding the retailer to sell at any special price, the Proctor & Gamble people are, therefore, furnishing the chain stores ammunition with which to shoot to death every single-store retailer's soap business.

Perhaps this is scarcely to be wondered at from a concern that has always shown gross partiality to the wholesale grocer as against the retailer. It will be noted from the above that the Procter & Gamble Company takes mighty good care that the jobber is assured an extremely fat profit—50 to 57½ cents a box, while the retailer's profit can go hang. As a matter of fact, the move just made not only makes a deep cut in the soap profits of every member of the Retail Grocers' Association, but it gives to his competitor, the chain store, who, be it remembered, is a smaller buyer, the power to destroy his profit absolutely!

Scarcely anything could make it plainer that the Procter & Gamble Company prefers the jobber and the chain store to the regular retailer, organized and unorganized.

Warm Fight Between Jelly Manufacturers and Corn Products Company.

Latter Concern Begins to Make Pail Jellies and Stirs Up Regular Manufacturers. Heavily Undersells the Market. Philadelphia Concerns Take Up Matter with Jelly Manufacturers of Country.

There is a sharp controversy on between the Corn Products Refining Co., manufacturers of glucose, and the manufacturers of low-grade pail jellies, notably the American Preserve Co., of Philadelphia, which seems in this section to be the glucose concern's chief antagonist.

The controversy comes from the fact that the Corn Products Co. has gone into the business of making compound jellies and is selling them at prices below those of the regular manufacturers. In Philadelphia, for example, the American Preserve Co. has been getting $1.15 per pail for its compound jellies, while the Corn Products Co. is selling at 90 cents. In other sections of the country the glucose concern is said to have sold as low as 82½ cents.

The American Preserve Co. deeply resents what it contends is an encroachment upon its business, and has notified all the jelly manufacturers of the country of the Corn Product Co's action making the charge that the concern's only reason for entering the jelly business is to compel regular jelly manufacturers to buy their glucose from it. The Corn Products Co. asserts that it has the right to go into any business that it likes.

Sugar Situation Critical.

Refiners Push Prices Up Another 10 Points, Making Advance of 60 Points from Lowest Point. Scarce Raws the Cause.

The sugar situation is assuming rather a critical phase. All refiners have advanced another 10 points during the past week in addition to the 30 points during the week before and 20 points a short time before that. The past week's advance makes an advance from the lowest point of 60 points and within the last two weeks of 40 points.

The cause of the latest advance is the same which is responsible for all of the others—actual scarcity of raws. The Cuban supply of raws, on which refiners are now depending, is seriously short, as compared with last year. All other sugar producing countries are short also, and refiners are being badly skimped for the time being.

Under the circumstances, further advances in refined seem likely, particularly as the market is just now entering the period of largest consumption. Refined sugar is selling at wholesale at all sorts of prices. On to-day's market retailers should pay around 5.4 cents for granulated, but jobbers who bought ahead are selling in some cases as low as 5 cents.

As to the "Grocery World's" Prices-Current

Discussion with Well-known New York Jobbing House Over Propriety of "Grocery World's" Methods of Quoting Prices. As to How Far this Journal's Consideration of Limited Prices Should Go.

For some time the "Grocery World" has been in correspondence with the New York wholesale grocery house of Francis H. Leggett & Co. over the propriety of certain prices which appeared in the "Grocery World's" price-list.

Leggett & Co. have taken the position that various of the "Grocery World's" prices were below the regular market and represented values at which the average jobber could not sell, and at which in some cases he had pledged himself not to sell.

One of the prices on which the discussion has hinged is the "Grocery World's" former price on a well-known cereal, which has been quoted at $3.70. The regular price is $4.05, and it is unquestionable that all but one or two jobbers sell at $4.05. The fact remained, however, that two Philadelphia jobbers freely and publicly offered the cereal named at $3.70, and since both were reputable, the "Grocery World" had no alternative but to quote that price. For the aim of the "Grocery World's" price-list, let it be said, is to quote the only price that means anything to the retailer—the lowest price at which given goods can be bought in the open market of a reputable jobbing house.

Messrs. Leggett & Co. now send to the "Grocery World" a copy of a letter received by them from the manufacturers of the cereal in question. The salient parts are as follows:—

Buffalo, N. Y., March 18, 1908.
F. H. Leggett & Co.,
New York City.

Gentlemen:—We acknowledge receipt of yours of March 11th re quotations on ——— ——— in the "Grocery World."

We might just as well be frank about this matter; therefore, we beg leave to advise that Messrs. ——— and ——— of Philadelphia, as well as one or two other price-cutting houses, have been on the suspended list of the Hygienic Food Co. for over two years. Both of these two prominent houses in Philadelphia are able to secure all the stock they require during the dull season, from sources which we cannot discover, but during the active season for the sale of cereals we know they cannot obtain stock in sufficient quantity to make us much trouble, or what is worse, make the general wholesale grocery trade, trouble.

In the meantime, the "Grocery World" has been quoting ——— ——— at $3.70, and we have always supposed that ——— were responsible for this quotation.

We do not desire to have any misunderstanding regarding this matter, with any wholesale grocery firm, but the fact remains that the policy of the Hygienic Food Co. on this question is fixed, and orders from jobbers who supply suspended firms or indulge in price-cutting to the disadvantage of the jobbing trade, are certain to be declined by us.

We hope that you will agree with us that this is the correct position for the manufacturer to take, and we urge that you will use your kind offices to induce the "Grocery World" publication (which we are informed to-day is an independent incorporated organization, that is entirely independent of any grocery concern), to change their quotations on ——— ——— to $4.05 per case for single case lots, and stop at that.

If you will favor us in this particular we will greatly appreciate your kindness. Trusting you will give prompt reply to this matter, we remain,

Yours truly,
(Signed) PIXLEY & LONG.

The question seems to resolve itself into this: Has the "Grocery World" the right to quote a price below the regular market, a price below the limited price which the manufacturer has set, and which could not be made did some jobber not break his agreement? Is it the "Grocery World's" business to analyze the prices it puts in its price-list, and if they have obviously come about by the violation of a limited price, to reject them, in spite of the fact that the goods can be bought at the cut price in the open market and of reputable houses?

The "Grocery World" feels that the proper answer to the first question is yes and to the second question no. There was a time when the "Grocery World" published in its price-list only what could be called average jobbing prices. If half the jobbers quoted

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich, U. S. A.

$2.10 on a given article and the other half $2.05, the "Grocery World" quoted $2.07½. This, the journal subsequently learned to its cost, meant nothing to the retailer, though it did, in a way, give a fair idea of average market conditions.

When the "Grocery World" says it learned this to its cost, it means this: The prices it quoted in all fairness were ridiculed and used for an ulterior purpose by hundreds of jobbers' salesmen. These salesmen, by cutting below the "Grocery World's" prices, showed at once how enterprising they were and how unreliable was the "Grocery World" as a price-current. As soon as the "Grocery World" found that its price-list was a byword and a joke, it decided to change its plan. The price-list editor was then instructed to quote the lowest price at which the goods named could be obtained in the open market from reputable houses. No secret price is quoted, only when a reputable jobber was willing to quote a price openly and publicly would the "Grocery World" reproduce it in its own price-list.

So much in answer to the first question.

As to the second, it would admittedly be ethical for the "Grocery World" to refuse to quote a price which could only be made possible by violating some limited price contract. But the "Grocery World" cannot permit ethics to choke it to death. Particularly when the wholesale grocers, who would be the chief gainers from such a course, haven't sufficient ethics of their own to avoid using this journal's course to their own good and to the "Grocery World's" harm.

Illegal Oleo Dealers' Licenses Will be Revoked.

Upon Legal Advice the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Commissioner Will Deprive Offenders Against the Oleo Laws of the License to Make Future Sales.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, of Pennsylvania, announced during the week that he proposed to revoke the oleo license of every person convicted of selling oleo illegally. He does this upon the authority of the Attorney-General's department, which has advised him that he has that legal right.

The opinion rendered on the subject by Deputy Attorney-General Fleitz is interesting. In part it is as follows:—

> I have before me your letter of recent date, in which you ask to be advised as to your power and authority to revoke a license granted under the provisions of the Act of May 29, 1901 (P. L. 327).
> Accompanying your letter is a communication from Joseph A. McCurdy, together with the testimony taken in the case of Commonwealth vs. Thomas Mulholland before J. F. Beatty, Justice of the Peace, at Greensburg. It appears from this testimony, and the information contained in your letter and that of Mr. McCurdy, that one Thomas Mulholland, proprietor of the Jeannette Tea and Coffee Company, at Jeannette, Pa., has been prosecuted by your Department for violating the provisions of the Oleomargarine law, and that, during the past year, he pleaded guilty to a second offense, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $500 and costs.
> In December last you issued a license for the sale of oleomargarine to one Henry H. Hopper, proprietor of the Jeannette Tea and Coffee Company, No. 624 Clay ave., Jeannette, Pa., for the year 1908, said license being certificate 3,300, upon representations that Hopper was a resident of this State and the proprietor of the business. The evidence in the case before Squire Beatty establishes the following facts:—
> That Henry H. Hopper is not a resident of the State of Pennsylvania, but resides at Cleveland, Ohio; and that he is the brother-in-law of Thomas Mulholland, who formerly had a license for this same establishment at the same place, and because of his convictions could not receive a license to carry on the business any longer. While the license is in the name of Hopper, and there is an attempt made to show that the business is now being conducted by Hopper, yet the facts seem to be fairly proven that Mulholland is in control and management of the business, and is recognized by the employes as the owner in authority.
> It further appears that the Oleomargarine law has been violated by the manager of the establishment, acting under the license to Hopper; and even if it could be proved that Hopper is the responsible party, it is impossible to punish him for any violation of the law, for the reason that he is not a resident of this State.
> You desire to know whether or not, under this state of affairs, there is warrant of law for you to revoke this license.
> It is apparent that the procuring of the license is but one of the restrictions which this act imposes on persons desiring to manufacture or sell oleomargarine in Pennsylvania. The license is granted by the State upon the express condition that the licensee shall comply with the requirements of the law, and a failure to do so is a breach of contract and works forfeiture of the license. By the fair weight of the evidence in the case before me it is clear that the license was obtained by fraud, as there is no authority by which a license can be issued to a non-resident of the State, and we are justified in reaching the conclusion that this license was obtained for the purpose of permitting Mulholland, an old offender, to continue an illegal business and has been used by him as a cloak for that purpose. It is your duty to carry out the terms and provisions of this law, and its spirit, if not its exact letter, contemplates the revocation of a license if its terms are violated.

I am, therefore, of opinion, and advise you that, for the reasons above stated, it is your duty to revoke this license and that you have authority under the law to do so.

Heretofore an oleo dealer's violation of the law has not interfered with his license, and the revoking of the license will unquestionably aid the campaign against the violation of the act.

Swiss Milk Chocolate Men Take Water.

Recent Twenty-five Per Cent. Advance in Price Curtailed Their Business so Much that One Concern has Gone Back to Former Prices During the Week. Others Must Follow.

Several months ago the three Swiss milk chocolate concerns selling the most goods in this country—Cailler's, Peters & Co., and Suchard—advanced prices under a working agreement of 25 per cent., all grades being affected. Swiss milk chocolate was high before, and the advance made it almost prohibitive to a great many people. The "Grocery World" prophesied at the time that there would be a tremendous decrease in the trade, and this prophecy has been confirmed. One of the three concerns named —Cailler's—went back to its old price on Monday last, and the other two must surely follow if they want to do any business.

The difference between the old and new prices is shown by quotations on the three best-selling sizes, both former and reduced prices being given: 30-cent cake, was $3.60 per dozen, now $2.90; 15-cent cake, was $1.80 per dozen, now $1.45; 10-cent cake, was 90 cents, now 80 cents. In every case the reduced prices are exactly those which prevailed before the 25 per cent. advance.

As a result of the extremely high prices, the business of all three of the concerns named fell off very materially.

Glucose Concern Not Afraid of Baking Powder Competition.

At the annual meeting of the Corn Products Refining Co., held in Jersey City on Tuesday last, F. H. Hall, who acted as chairman, in speaking of possible competition with the Royal Baking Powder Co., said: "The company does not fear competition with the Royal Baking Powder and it is prepared to meet this competition. We are satisfied that the company can manufacture starch for baking powder at a better price than the Royal Baking Powder Co." He pointed out that the company at the present time controls about 50 per cent. of the starch output in the country.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXXIV.—Who Do You Buy For?

Buy for your customers, not for yourself.

Too many buyers are to-day buying the quality of goods they like best, regardless of the likes of their customers. It is admitted that any retailer can get more pleasure out of selling the goods that he likes best and that the retailer can largely cultivate the tastes of his customers, at the same time many customers have ideas of their own, and when this is the case it is always policy to let them have their own way.

From past experience as a buyer, it is safe to advise any buyer to be very careful in ordering the particular things which he likes best, for in about nine times out of ten he will unconsciously over-stock his store on that class of goods. It is hard to keep from it. Buyers naturally feel that all their customers who have good taste will like the kind of goods they like, and the real experience does not always bear out this idea.

A good rule is to always buy sparingly of the class of goods he likes best, for even what seem to be spare purchases at the time often turn out to be large enough to keep the sales force busy for a good while to prevent their becoming stickers, and possibly requiring a cut price to finish them out.

Storage vs. Fresh Eggs.

The report appearing elsewhere in this issue of the campaign of the Secretary of Agriculture to prevent the sale of storage eggs as fresh will interest every retail grocer, for it is through the retail grocer that this fraud is consummated upon the public.

Up to this time storage eggs have been freely sold as fresh in certain seasons without the slightest attempt to prevent it. All sorts of stores do it. In Philadelphia, for example, a particularly notorious holier-than-thou store has this winter retailed "strictly fresh" eggs at a price several cents below the wholesale fresh egg price.

Storage eggs are perfectly good; as a matter of fact they are as wholesome and nutritious as fresh eggs, yet they are not fresh eggs and it goes without saying that they should not be sold as such. The fact that the consumer would, if he knew, have a prejudice against them, and that that prejudice would be unfounded, is not the point. Prejudiced or unprejudiced, the consumer has the right to know what he is buying.

The Secretary of Agriculture, while all honest tradesmen are with him, will probably find that he has engaged in the toughest campaign of his life. Sometimes it is possible to tell a storage egg from a fresh one, but not always. Eliminate the price, which is usually the criterion, and you haven't much left to go on.

The Weight on the Package.

The campaign to print the net weight of package goods on the label is growing. As previously reported, the Massachusetts Legislature is now considering a bill to bring that about, and a similar measure has been introduced in the Legislature of New York.

From experience in Massachusetts it seems evident that manufacturers generally are not in sympathy with this movement. The reasons they advance for their opposition are not conclusive; practically they all simmer down to the trouble of making the change. What particular trouble is there in printing an extra line upon a label?

It seems to the "Grocery World" that there is only one valid reason for objecting to a labeled net weight, and even that can be overcome. That reason is the possibility that the goods may lose weight, which might inadvertently make the printed weight false after the goods had been packed a while. This is easily overcome by a label stating that the contents, when packed, weighed so much.

There is no answer to the proposition that the consumer is entitled to know as near as he can be told how much he is getting for his money.

Women as Grocery Clerks.

Mr. Godfrey Wolf, vice-president of the St. Louis (Mo.) Retail Grocers' Association, says something about women grocery clerks which the "Grocery World" can scarcely understand. Here is the substance of it:—

> I am surprised that more grocers do not employ young women in their stores. I have tried it with excellent result. I find that a girl clerk can handle the cash and look after the books better than a man will and she is also extremely useful in waiting on trade, if she is interested in the business.
> When waiting on trade a woman clerk is at her best. She is invariably polite and attentive, and I find that women customers like to have a woman wait on them. The woman clerk naturally has a knowledge of cooking and she talks over ways of cooking foods in such a manner as to interest the customer and in that way she frequently makes sales that a man clerk would miss.
> A woman about a grocery store raises the tone. She prevents by her presence roughness, ill manners and dirt. The average woman has a horror of dirty floors or counters or scales or bins, and her complaint about such things will lead to their being cleaned. A woman about a store is in fact a bit of sunshine that brightens up the whole place. And she gets as good a knowledge of qualities, of the goods, of prices and of selling as any man can, for she is more apt to want to hold her place than a man clerk.

It would seem as if women would in the abstract make better clerks than men, and yet in the department stores observation seems to prove otherwise. Practically all the flippancy, the indifference, and the impertinence behind department store counters emanates from women clerks. The average man clerk is more polite, more attentive—infinitely more desirable in every way.

Is there anything in the grocery business to change the nature of women employees in this respect?

A Fallacious Argument.

Apropos of some matter which the Philadelphia "Public Ledger" has recently printed regarding the controversy between local jobbers and retailers, Mr. A. H. Hendrie, a well-known Philadelphia retail grocer, contributes the following letter to the paper named:—

> To the Editor of "Public Ledger":—
> Every independent retail grocer who is against the jobbers in their attitude toward the manufacturers is putting a nail in his own coffin. The jobber stands as a protector to the retailer, as few retailers are able to buy direct from manufacturers. If the jobbers were gone, where could the retailers get the goods? Practically the only retailers left who could buy goods fram the manufacturers would be those who own the chain stores. Why should retailers play into the hands of those who own chain stores? Monopoly would then be supreme. If the grocery trade were thus monopolized where would the benefit to the public come in? The whole question is one of handling the goods. Granted that the owners of chain stores buy most of their goods direct, it must not be forgotten that they, too, must maintain a wholesale department. Does it not cost as much, in proportion to the volume of business transacted, to run that department for the chain stores as it does to run the jobbers for the regular retailers? Does any sane man suppose that a structure eight stories high and covering almost a square of ground can be built, fitted up and run without a vast amount of expense which necessarily adds to the price of the goods bought from the manufacturers?
> The Retail Grocers' Association stands in a similar position. It cannot sell the goods to the retailer at the same price as it paid for them. So the middleman exists in both cases where he was supposed to be dead. The Retail Grocers' Association is nothing more or less than a wholesale grocery, though dressed in a different garb and wearing a different aspect. Were the jobber eliminated from his position, as a bulwark to the retailer against the greed and rapacity of those who own chain stores would the public at large be the gainer? Is there anything in the history of this or any other country to show that where monopoly has had full sway the public ever reaped an advantage?
> March is said to come in like a lion and go out like a lamb, but monopolies of all kinds come in like a lamb and stay in like a lion, devouring every lamb that crosses its path. The retailer who stands by the jobber is standing for himself. Free and legitimate opposition without monopoly, will best safeguard the interests of the public at large.
> A. H. HENDRIE.

Before saying just a word or two regarding the above, let the "Grocery World" state emphatically that it has never believed in the elimination of the wholesale grocer. Under present conditions at least, the jobber has a legitimate place and his elimination would be a great misfortune. Let him be decently fair—that is all the "Grocery World" asks.

It seems to this journal that Mr. Hendrie's excellently expressed argument leads to a reductio ad absurdum. For instance, he says, "if the jobbers were gone, where could the retailers get the goods?" The inference is that they couldn't get them anywhere, which is absurd. The jobbers' retirement, unfortunate though it would admittedly be, would scarcely lessen the manufacturer's eagerness to do business and he would unquestionably sell the retailer direct. That would be the only thing he could do.

For the same reason falls to pieces the balance of the argument—that with the jobbers gone the only people left who could buy direct would be chain stores, who would thus have a monopoly which would choke the small retailer to death.

With the jobbers gone the manufacturer would have to sell the retailers, small and large together, which would exactly continue present conditions, except that the seller would be the manufacturer instead of the jobber.

Mr. Hendrie thinks the jobber is "a bulwark to the retailer against the greed and rapacity of those who own chain stores." This is an amazing statement from a retailer who lives in Philadelphia, if he has been awake for the last three months! If there has ever been a grosser exhibition of greed and rapacity than that revealed in the attack of the local jobbers upon the rights of organized retailers, the "Grocery World" has never seen it and cannot conceive what it could be!

The Grocers' Bankruptcy Law Amendment.

Some mention has been made in these columns of a proposed amendment to the National Bankruptcy Act, barring all persons from taking advantage of its provisions unless their debts exceed $500. The amendment is expected to keep a great horde of small beats from going into bankruptcy, and thus defrauding the grocer, to whom such people almost invariably owe money when they fail.

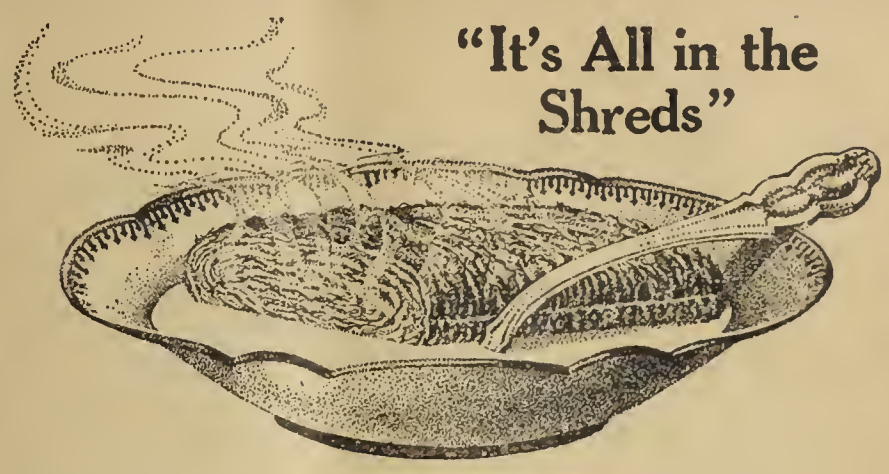
This is a good amendment, and it may do some good. It seems to the "Grocery World," however, to be a two-edged sword. Under its provisions a man may not obtain the protection of bankruptcy if he owes $300 or $400, or $450, but he can if he owes $501. How easy, therefore, to incur more indebtedness. In other words, does it not necessarily follow that the higher the bankruptcy law places the minimum the more industriously dead beats will work to get within it, and the greater will be the creditors' loss when the loss comes?

The New York Letter

Retailers' Food Show in Full Blast. Most Attractive Exposition Up to Date Opens Under Favorable Auspices. Alleged Maine Corn Frauds. Falling Off in Fine Japan Tea Business. Small News of the New York Trade.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, March 27, 1908.



The Pure Food Exposition was opened last (Thursday) night in the Lenox Lyceum by the New York Retail Grocers' Union. When your correspondent visited the hall he found it resplendent with gaily decorated booths and myriads of lights. The crowd comfortably filled the hall and that was considered a good showing for the first night, since many people think that shows of this kind are more complete after the first night or two.

It was the opinion of the members of the union and of others who had seen prior food shows that this is the most attractive of any that has yet been seen in this city. Everybody is pleased with the result of the new plan according to which the management built and equipped all the booths and supplied the illuminative effects. Every booth is handsome. At former shows one booth might be of a most elegant character while the next one seemed cheap. No such incongruity is to be seen at this exposition.

It was noticeable that the officers of the union, its committees and its membership generally were present at the opening, and all were busy in one way or another contributing to the success of the event. The opening speech was made by the manager of the exposition, L. J. Callanan, who emphasized that the affair was conducted by the grocers themselves for the benefit of their union and for the education of the public on food subjects. No outsiders or promoters have anything to do with the management, he said, and the grocers themselves deserve the credit and take the responsibility. He spoke of the work of the organization in improving the standard of the business in various ways and said that the success of the exposition, made certain by the splendid opening, was a reflection of the increased esteem in which the public holds the retail distributers of food products.

President Fred. H. Otten followed with brief remarks. Then a number of officers of various commercial organizations were escorted by Mr. Callanan and members of the committee about the hall until all the booths were visited. Later the guests from other organizations were entertained at lunch.

The list of exhibitors has been given in these letters. Walter Baker obtained the choice position of the big stage at one end of the hall, while B. T. Babbitt has

It is said that in some retail grocery stores there have been placed in the last week signs offering Maine corn for 7 cents a can, and that the corn actually sold at that low price is from Pennsylvania. A broker who sells Maine corn says that the matter will be called to the attention of the Federal food authorities as a violation of the food law involving a fraud on the consumer and also tending to injure the reputation of the product sold by the packers in Maine.

One of the grocery jobbers said to-day that the wholesale houses in this city will generally reduce their orders for high-grade Japan teas of this year's crop, in comparison with the orders of recent years. He said that the salesmen who are now returning from their Western trips during which they have canvassed the requirements of the retailers are turning in reports uniformly showing less demand for the higher grades than there was a year ago, and that the demand seems to be turning to the cheaper grades. It is also said that some of the jobbing houses have on hand somewhat larger quantities of the higher grades of teas than is usual at this season.

About $500,000 was expended by the Corn Products Refining Co. in improving its processes of manufacture in order to comply with the new food law. So said the president, E. T. Belford, in a statement made at the annual meeting of the stockholders held Monday. The cost of making starch is lower than for several years, he said. The gross earnings for eleven months were greater than for the entire preceding year, but because of the increased extra expenses in meeting the food law requirements the net earnings were slightly reduced. The extra expenses were regarded as in the nature of construction work, giving a permanent improvement to the company's plant.

Uriah H. Dudley, who had often been called the Nestor of the wholesale grocery and dried fruit trades in this city, died Friday of last week. Funeral services, held Sunday at his late home in Brooklyn, were attended by representatives of all the large houses in the wholesale provision district. The burial was in Mystic, Conn.

A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed Tuesday against John Rudd, a retail grocer, with stores at 2815 Eighth avenue and 1768 Amsterdam avenue. The petitioning creditors are William O. Saxton & Co., who have a claim for $679. The petitioners allege that the defendant made preferential payments and has allowed suits to be begun against him. He has been in the retail business for twenty-five years.

Creditors filed a petition in bankruptcy Tuesday against Alexander Bros., wholesale tobacco dealers at 212 Pearl street. The members of the firm, each more than seventy years of age, have been in business at the same location for forty-nine years. It is said that their liabilities are $30,000, owed to eleven creditors.

Sardine Combine's Work in Two Years.

Price on Oils Advance from $1.90 in 1906 to $3.10 in 1908. Concern's Iron-clad Methods of Confining Packers.

A vivid idea of the workings of the concern which absolutely controls the Maine sardine industry can be obtained by comparing the price just made for future delivery with the future prices named in 1907 and 1906.

Some packers have named a price on quarter oils of $3.10 f. o. b. Eastport. In 1907 the opening price was $2.40 and in 1906, $1.90. The last quoted price was made before the trust was organized, but it followed a short time after that and has since been in control. Whether such an advance has been warranted by actual conditions may be seen from the fact that private brands of domestic oil sardines, not controlled by the Trust, have not advanced a penny in the last two years.

The concern which holds the sardine business in the hollow of its hand is the Maine Mercantile Co., which has tied up every packer who could consent to join it, so tight that he hardly knows what his name was. One of the most drastic provisions of the arrangement is that each packer must get his tins through the Mercantile Co., and he is allotted a certain number, which cannot be increased. He agrees to pack only what he is permitted to, and while he can get cans from independent can makers, he forfeits his connection with the Maine Mercantile Co. if he does so.

There seems scarcely any doubt that the sardine combine is in direct violation of law.

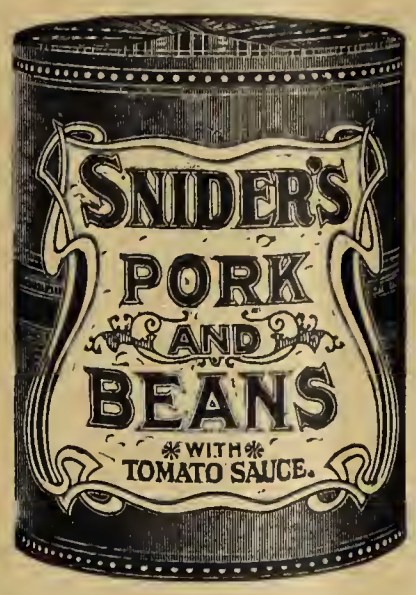
New York Bill to Put Net Weight on Packages.

A bill introduced in the New York State Legislature by Assemblyman Filley, last January, has suddenly loomed up as a matter of grave consequence in many lines of commerce. The official title of the act is "An act to amend the domestic commerce law in relation to standards of weights and measures, duties of State superintendents and assistants, boards of supervisors and other boards and bodies, and local sealers; fixing compensation, weighing and measuring certain commodities and providing penalties." But in the latter end of the body of the act is the following amendment:

> Commodities in Containers.—Any commodity whatsoever except stationery not sold by weight or measure put up or sold or intended to be sold with a container, shall have the net quantity of the commodity so contained plainly marked, branded or otherwise affixed on the outside of the container in terms of weights or measures.

Will Stop Selling of Storage Eggs as Fresh.

Secretary of Agriculture Begins Campaign by Test Case in Washington, D. C. Dealers Not Agreed as to Wisdom of Move.



The wholesale butter and egg trade are considerably exercised over a dispatch from Washington, D. C., during the week that the Secretary of Agriculture was about to start a campaign against the frequent fraud of selling storage eggs as fresh.

It seems that a test case was made in Washington, where a pure food inspector seized eggs from a small dealer and announced his intention of prosecuting him under the pure food law for selling storage eggs as strictly fresh. The marketman contended he was not at fault, as he had bought them from a dealer with a "strictly fresh" label on them. The inspector then went to the dealer and seized several cases. The dealer found that he was liable to a fine of $500 and six months in prison, or both, under the law for selling storage eggs as strictly fresh.

The trade seem to be divided as to the legitimacy of the practice complained of. Some dealers say it is pure fraud, but others contend that it is not only legitimate, but necessary in order to keep the fresh-laid egg market from getting beyond all bounds. A sample opinion of the latter class was as follows:—

> If this rule is enforced the price of eggs during the Winter will be prohibitive to all but millionaires. When a strictly fresh egg is put into cold storage it stays that way for a considerable length of time with but little deterioration, and when released from storage in Winter is far ahead of the general run of strictly fresh eggs on the market then. Everybody knows that it is the habit of farmers to put up eggs in lime, and that these eggs do not keep nearly as well as those in cold storage. However, they take these eggs out and place them on the market as strictly fresh, while the much better cold storage eggs must be labeled as such and sold at a lower price. I think Secretary Wilson is making a mistake.

Words AND Their Meaning

Pork and Beans are simply words, they don't mean anything in particular—except a variety of goods packed under this title of an equal variety of quality and character.

Snider's Pork and Beans mean much—this name on a can means that your trade will keep coming to you for more. They are put up with one idea—to be so unusually good that nothing else will take their place. This is the reason that grocers everywhere are not asked for Pork and Beans any more, but Snider's Pork and Beans. You will get a good understanding of the reason if you will serve a can on your own table.

Hams That Always Sell

There is another sort of ham much less preferred to the absolutely unidentified and unbranded ham, and that is the ham of the packer who gets good raw material to-day and poor to-morrow.

Both of these kill the grocers' trade, because they are so irregular. They please his customers to-day and provoke them to-morrow. No trade can last long under hot and cold applications.

Swift's PREMIUM Hams are always regular. We have the pick of the hogs of the whole country and hence we can keep the quality even the whole year through. Swift's PREMIUM Hams hold and increase trade.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market shows no change for the week. The demand is still for actual wants, and prices throughout are unchanged. Low grades are firmly held, and the high ruling prices are curtailing the demand to some extent. Other grades are not so firm, but all are steady.

Coffee.

No important change has occurred in the Brazil coffee market during the week. Both Rio and Santos are unchanged, both spot and option, except that in certain low grades there has been a slight decline. Owing to scarcity of old crops, however, these grades still show a heavy premium. The speculative coffee situation is practically still a deadlock between the syndicate and the speculative public. Mild coffees are steady and moderately active. Java and Mocha steady and in fair demand. The consumptive demand for coffee is good.

Sugar.

As reported more in detail elsewhere, the sugar situation is exceedingly firm. Refined advanced another 10 points during the week, and may advance still further almost any time. The firmness is entirely due to scarcity of raws. There are shortages in nearly all sugar-producing countries, and the outlook is strong. No special advance in raws has occurred during the week, however. The demand for sugar is fair and will increase from now on. As far as can be learned, prospects point to a heavy fruit crop, which inevitably means a large summer sugar business.

Syrup and Molasses.

In spite of the fact that corn has sharply advanced, there is no change in glucose. It seems to be the present policy of the glucose people to hold the price down somewhat. Compound syrup is unchanged and quiet. Sugar syrup is in excellent demand for export and fair demand for home trade. Prices are unchanged. Molasses has been advanced 2 cents per gallon more in New Orleans, but this does not mean an advance in the North, especially at once.

Fish.

The fish market is unchanged for the week. There is an active demand for Irish mackerel, but the supply is so small that the trade are forced to piece out with medium size Norways. Prices throughout the mackerel list are unchanged for the week. Cod, hake and haddock are unchanged and dull. Domestic sardines are unchanged in price and quiet. Some packers are reported to have named a price of $3.10 f. o. b. Eastport for future oils. Salmon is unchanged and quiet, no future price having been made as yet.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes remain unchanged in price for the week, both spot and future, the demand at both ends being light. Corn is dull and rules at unchanged prices. Peas on spot are very dull and comparatively weak. Futures are still selling to some extent. Peaches are unchanged and still dull. Prospects point to a good peach crop and a probable return to reasonable prices. Apples are weak. Nominally New York State gallons rule at $2.50. but there is some reason to believe that much lower prices could be obtained. Baltimore small canned goods are unchanged, except for string beans, which are now down to 62½ cents, against 75 cents not so long ago. The price proved too high for the trade to stand. California canned goods are unchanged and in first hands quiet.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are easy, and the market is decidedly in buyers' favor. There has been no sharp decline during the week, but holders seem quite willing to make concessions. The demand is fair. Peaches are on the down grade, and present prices are many cents below what they were a short time ago. The demand is not large, however. Apricots are unchanged and dull. Currants are moderately active and slightly lower in this country than abroad. Raisins are very weak and sick, with a light demand. Apples are weak and in light demand. Citron, dates and figs are all quiet and unchanged.

Beans and Peas.

There is still a wide difference between the price of domestic pea beans and the foreign. The latter are offered around $2.05 and the former around $2.40. The demand is light. Marrows are weaker and sales have been made as low as $2. The demand is poor. California limas now rule at 5¼ cents, both spot and to

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

come forward; demand moderate. Dried peas are unchanged and in fair demand. Some imported green peas are being brought in, ruling around $2.30, which is almost the price of the domestic. Other grades of dried and split peas are unchanged and quiet.

Butter.

The butter market is unchanged. The supply of fresh stock is normal for the season, and the quality is running very good. Held goods are gradually decreasing and the market is healthy on the present basis. No radical change is looked for during the next few days, either in prints or tubs.

Eggs.

The egg market is unchanged. The receipts are very liberal and the consumptive demand very good. There will naturally be a further increase in the receipts, but without material decline in prices, as the speculative demand for storage increases as fast as the supply. For this reason there will probably be no material change during the coming week.

Cheese.

The cheese market is unchanged. The consumptive demand is fair considering the price. Stocks of storage cheese are small and show a gradual decrease. The week has brought no change in the price of any grade, and probably will not during the coming week.

Provisions.

Everything in the provision line is firmer. All lines of smoked meats are ¼ cent higher than a week ago. Pure and compound lard are firm at last week's advance, and if there is any further change it will probably be upward. Barrel pork, canned meats and dried beef are unchanged.

Produce.

Pennsylvania potatoes, 80 to 83 cents per bushel; York State, 73 to 80 cents per bushel, demand fair to good; sweet potatoes, primes, $1 to $1.20 per basket, $2 to $2.25 per hamper; seconds, 75 to 80 cents per basket, demand good; Ohio globe onions, 65 to 80 cents per bushel; York State, 65 to 75 cents per bushel; white onions, $1 per crate; Bermudas, $2 per bushel crate; Spanish, small crates, $1 to $1.25; large crates, $1.50, demand fair; carrots, 35 to 40 cents per basket, demand poor; yellow turnips, 35 to 40 cents per basket; white, 20 to 25 cents per basket, demand fair; Danish cabbage, $11 to $12 per ton, demand good; beets, 40 cents per basket, fair to good demand; parsnips, $1 per barrel, 25 cents per basket, demand fair; oyster plants, 3 to 5 cents per bunch, demand fair; watercress, $2 to $2.50 per 100, demand good.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Baldwins, $1.75 to $3.50 per barrel; Greenings, $2 to $3.50 per barrel; Hulbersons, $3.50 to $4 per barrel; Spy, $2.50 to $3.50 per barrel; Spitz, $3 to $4 per barrel; Kings, $3 to $4 per barrel; Russets, $2 to $3.50 per barrel, demand fair; bananas, firsts, $1.50 to $2 per bunch; 8-hands, $1.10 to $1.40 per bunch; 7-hands, 85 cents to $1 per bunch; 6-hands, 60 to 75 cents per bunch, demand fair; lemons, $2 to $3 per box, demand slow; California oranges, $2.75 to $3.25 per box, demand fair; tangerines, $5.50 to $6 per box, demand fair; pineapples, $3.75 to $4.50 per box, demand fair.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Cocoa and Chocolate.

The chocolate situation is not straightened out by long odds. The facts are, that starting say in 1906, raw material that was worth from 9 to 12 cents advanced by leaps and bounds so that in October, 1907, the same goods were worth from 24 to 26 cents. Owing almost entirely to conditions of general business caused by the money panic, these same numbers declined, so that at the close of February, 1908, the quotations were 13½ to 16 cents. In the last three weeks there has been a reaction, and figures today would be from 16 to 19 cents. Whether the last advance this month is speculative and temporary, or is permanent and caused by legitimate reasons, no one knows. You can get good information on both sides of the fence. Now, in spite of these high prices compared with figures ruling early in 1906, prices for finished goods are very little above those ruling when raw material was down so low. For instance, manufactured cocoa of 1906 was about 31 cents, and is 34 cents today, an advance in finished goods of 3 cents per pound, and in raw material of, say, 5 cents.

Sugar.

We've had a remarkable week in the sugar business. Raws have made substantial advances and refined is 30 points higher. Sales reported were 6,000 bags spot and afloat Porto Ricos at 4 1-16 cents, 10,000 last half April shipment Cubas at 4.24 cents, 2,000 San Domingos and Porto Ricos, in port, at 4⅛ cents, 5,000 April Cubas at 4.30 cents, and 220,000 March-April at 4.36 cents.

Europe has led in the progress made. Cabled quotations show higher prices reigning at the close each day, and the New York parity of the London market is now 4.39 cents. The world's sugar situation is reflected in the operations conducted on the Continental exchanges and crop developments at sugar raising centres have been of a nature to place the demand and supply upon an entirely different basis, making necessary an advanced scale of values to measure the changed conditions that have come to exist. Speculation has been aroused and the movement is assuming the characteristics of the memorable boom of 1905, when Europe advanced to 16⅓ to ¾ cents for beets, and our market to 5.31 cents raws, and 6.15 cents refined. A loss of 1,000,000 tons in the European beet crops was the basis for the prices that ruled in that year. We are now confronted with a decreased outturn of the cane crops, the production having suffered to a material extent in Cuba, Porto Rico, Trinidad, St. Kitts, Antigua, Demerara and all the West Indies. Java and Mauritius, on the other side of the globe, also send in estimates much lower than those previously put forward. The world is to have less sugar than it expected. We will need foreign beets. Canada also will have to buy in the European markets. It has been pointed out that an element of stability is lent to this movement through the fact of its start having the season of biggest business directly ahead of it, and the summer's demand, with big meltings, is counted upon to sustain the values that have been raised. New supplies cannot be brought forward until the next crops mature. It is not probable that this campaign will show such prices as those that ruled in 1903. The loss in sugar will not this year be as great, and there is a likelihood that the acreage to be sown for the November beet crop will keep quotations from going ahead too rapidly; but prices as far as they have gone are all right and there is still room for further improvement.

Cables from Cuba advise that twenty-seven factories have discontinued, the number now grinding being 141. One-hundred and sixty-eight was the top point. Receipts are decreasing.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

A dull week characterized the canned goods market here to the disappointment, if not surprise, of the packers, for the reason that the trading in the previous two weeks foreshadowed the advent of the usual spring demand, which is expected to be large enough to satisfy the canners after the enforced dullness following the monetary troubles last fall. The tomato market holds its own, however, and if half of the inquiries for them result in actual buying orders the spring demand will not be disappointing. The recent buying of them came from nearly all sections except the middle West, and from that section there are encouraging reports. When spot tomatoes, or any other line of canned goods, reach the point where the price, after a continuous decline for five months, is lower than they can be bought at for future delivery it is almost a sure thing that they are at the lowest price for the remainder of the season, and that there is a reasonable probability of a reaction to at least the same level with futures. The packers show no disposition to force the sales of future tomatoes, and in many years' experience we have never known the sales of them to be so light as they have been up to this date. The outcome is problematical but the packers seem content to await developments. In all other lines of goods for future delivery the trading continues very light.

In the general lines of fruits and vegetables the buying is of the same kind as has prevailed all during the winter, namely, in small lots of assorted goods, repeating the order when the goods are required. Those sales make a respectable showing in the aggregate. The exceptions were, in addition to tomatoes, the large demand for sweet potatoes in January and February, which ran the price up from $1 to $1.25 per dozen, and the activity in cove oysters, which was greater than for many seasons in this market on account of lower prices than at most other points of production.

No. 2.

There is considerable inquiry for tomatoes and quite a few orders for straight cars are coming in. The situation is in peculiar shape. There are a few sellers in the market all the time, but we find that the actual quantity on the market offered at 77½ cents per dozen for good stock at any one time is limited. During the past few months of course there have always been some sellers coming into the market from time to time, but the majority of holders seem to be just as firm in their ideas at 80 cents per dozen as they have been at any time for several months.

It is useless to make any predictions about tomatoes, but it looks pretty safe to say that the demand for tomatoes will now be fairly good, and is liable to increase as we get into the spring and early summer trade. At present prices it would appear as though you are reasonably safe in buying not only for requirements for a short time, but for some little time ahead. There is no special change in the market on future tomatoes.

Spices.

The market is very active with good steady demand. Supplies are small in many grades. General conditions in the spice trade are improving.

Pepper.—All grades of black peppers are unchanged. White peppers are firmer and spot stocks are small. It is reported that there is very little on the water at this time.

Cloves are scarce and evidently are quickly taken up. The market is very firm and the tendency appears upward.

Pimento (Allspice) rather quiet at steady prices.

Mace firm, but practically unchanged.

Nutmegs.—There has been a good steady demand without any change in market values during the week.

Cassias firm at steady and unchanged prices. There is still a great scarcity of China roll cassia.

Gingers steady but firm. Demand only fair. Prime bold Jamaica root is still held at high prices.

Cayennes.—There is a great scarcity of all grades. Stocks in London are much higher. We look for a slowly rising market here.

Seeds.—Celery, caraway, poppy as well as mustard, are all steady but practically unchanged during the week. Celery, mustard and coriander, which are all used for pickling purposes, will be in better demand during the next 60 to 90 days.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

Mr. J. M. Thomas, grocer of Batavia, N. J., sends in a copy of his home paper containing his weekly advertisement. In some ways it is unusual advertising, and it is certainly placed in an unusual position in the paper, for it appears at the top of the first column on the first page. Very few papers will consent to give over their very first column to advertising; it is usually devoted to the most important news item of the week. This, of course, makes the position practically the most valuable in the paper.

Over half the advertisement is set in regular reading matter type. Here is a photographic reproduction.

I think I would have been plainer than Mr. Thomas has been. I can understand that he did not wish to announce in his advertisement what his new plan was, but it doesn't seem to me that he got at it quite hard enough. Naturally he understands the people he is dealing with better than I do, and for that reason I may be wrong. I think, however, that his argument could be made stronger. I should have told just how I had been conducting business, what trouble that had led to, and hint at what I proposed to do as a remedy. Mr. Thomas gets at it rather vaguely, in my judgment. He hints that his methods have been unsafe, but he doesn't say what has led him to believe so, nor give any idea at all what change he proposes to make.

* * *

The price-list part is all right. It brings the reductions out strongly and ought, in my judgment, to bring results.

To My Customers:

And I think I have as good customers as any grocer could have.

But while money is so tight we find it hard to meet our bills and still accommodate our people from week to week and month to month. For 15 years we have done so, but we feel it our duty now—duty to myself and family, as well as to those whom I owe—to do a safer business.

If we go to the bank for money to use in our business we must give good security. And what would our banks be good for if they loaned out money as we loan out the equivalent of money? You would not care to place your savings in such a bank.

And we feel it our duty to no longer continue a credit business along the old lines. We hope our good friends, whom we have tried to accommodate and please, will appreciate our position and continue to give us their patronage if possible. And in return we shall ever try to give you GOOD GOODS, AT THE LOWEST CASH PRICE, coupled with as good prompt and courteous service as is within our power to give.

We have taken inventory and find we have too much of some sorts of goods and these will be sold very low—some things regardless of cost.

We have repainted and brightened our store and we would be pleased to see everybody and anybody whenever in need of anything in our line. If you ever should get anything which you did not consider just as it should be, please tell us and give us an opportunity to make it right.

Beginning March 3d, we shall make a very different arrangement with each and every customer, which we believe will be as beneficial to you as to us.

Thanking you most heartily for all past favors and hoping we will be able to merit a continuance of the same, I remain, yours for better business. J. M. THOMAS.

It Pays to be Square.

Five or six years ago the writer was in the vicinity of Sixteenth and Catharine streets, this city, when he saw a sign upon the door of a little converted private dwelling which read, "Miller & England, Grocers' and Drug Fixtures." Never having heard of such a concern, he went in to look around. He found two young men, Messrs. Miller and England, which constituted the firm, with overalls on covered with wooddust, working as hard as their little staff of men. To-day these two young men have a large factory at Seventieth and Woodland avenue, and they are called upon by the biggest and most particular concerns in the city when they want fine woodwork and artistic fixtures. Their success has been due primarily to two things; one, a thorough working knowledge of their business and their square dealings with their customers.

Any grocer, in fact anybody, who wants artistic fixtures or woodwork of any character done right, at a reasonable price, is absolutely certain to be pleased with an association with this firm.

On the Streets at Night

You occasionally get on the street at night, and every now and again you stop before the brilliant windows of the department stores.

What makes them brilliant? The goods displayed? It is the abundant light, under which almost any goods would make a brilliant window. You wouldn't be half so well interested in the window if it wasn't so bright with light.

Apply this logic to your own store. Is it so bright with light that it interests people in the streets at night?

If it isn't we can make it so, very inexpensively.

Who Knows Anything of "Associated Grocers"?

New New York Co-operative Buying Concern Gunning for Members. Many Requests for Information Unsatisfied for Want of Information.

Inquiry is beginning to come into the "Grocery World" office for information as to a concern calling itself the "Associated Grocers," of 203 Broadway, New York. The address given is an office building.

It seems that the "Associated Grocers" is sending printed matter through the country endeavoring to secure members to join in what appears to be a form of co-operative buying. One of its letters has come to the "Grocery World" and is here reproduced:—

New York, March 19, 1908.

Dear Sir:—We are increasing the membership of the Associated Grocers, to take effect June 1, 1908, and as you are one of the leading dealers in the grocery line we are desirous of having you associated with us. I am stating to you herewith some of the advantages of a membership in this company. One of the most successful retail grocers who operates a chain of 25 to 30 stores, stated to me the other day, "I always try to make an average discount of 2 per cent. on cost of goods sold, pay the rent of each store." I asked him how much he could save by buying for 25 stores, over the grocer who only operates one store, and he replied from 8 to 10 per cent. During the past few years the retailers of a great many cities have combined together and formed Buying Associations, these Associations being a combination of from 25 to 300 grocers who keep a certain amount of money on deposit with the Association. James Butler, with his 175 retail stores in Greater New York, has a greater purchasing power than any wholesale grocer. The success of the many chains of tea and coffee stores and of the Woolworth 5 and 10-cent stores is due entirely to their great purchasing power.

The Associated Grocers are a combination of retail grocers who by co-operating together buy the quantity of all staple articles, thereby receiving the lowest possible price. As an illustration, we will say you are a member of the Associated Grocers, and you have just received a notice from the Secretary of the company notifying you that they were taking orders for Babbitt's Soap. If your stock was low on this brand, you would send your order for 5, 10, 25 or 100 boxes, whatever number you desired, and your order with all the other orders received from other members would be placed together and forwarded to the manufacturer and your order would be shipped to you direct. If the total order amounted to 1,000 boxes and your order was for but five boxes, you would be getting your five boxes for the same price as you would if you bought 1,000 boxes. If, on the other hand, you had a stock of Babbitt's Soap on hand, you would simply wait until the next time.

The entire object of the Associated Grocers is to be continually looking up and obtaining opportune deals for its members, the Secretary notifying each member by card of all deals made, and seeing that all orders are shipped promptly. The annual membership fee is $10, payable in advance. You can readily see the the great benefits to be derived from a membership in this company and that it is for your interest to send in your application at once.

Yours very truly,
ASSOCIATED GROCERS,
Per W. E. Hicks.

The "Grocery World" has been compelled to inform all correspondents that it has no knowledge whatever of the concern or its plans. If any subscriber knows anything of it, will he furnish it for publication, for the general information?

Warning Against Swindler.

National Secretary Green Warns Trade Against Bogus Check Casher. Call for National Retailers' Convention. Jobbers Joining in Movement to Amend National Bankruptcy Law.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio,
March 26, 1908.

I have received the following warning:—

Philadelphia, Pa., March 7, 1908.
John A Green, Secretary.

Dear Sir:—One of the members of our association desires me to call attention to the fact that a man, apparently about 35 years of age, swarthy complexion, weighing about 155 pounds, is endeavoring to have checks cashed, alleged to be drawn by the Indiana Supply Co., of Indianapolis, Ind.

This gentleman has been working in Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Michigan, Georgia and North Carolina, and recently he has been heard from in Delaware.

While this is not a part of the work of this association, it may be helpful to some to have the information given them.

Yours truly,
T. JAMES FERNLEY,
Secretary-Treasurer Affiliated Presidents and Secretaries of Commercial and Trade Organizations.

The eleventh annual convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States, will be held at Boston, Mass., May 11 to 14, 1908. The convention will convene at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Monday for its first business session at Faneuil Hall at intersection of North and South Market streets and will be called to order by President A. L. Stark, of the Boston Retail Grocers' Association. The annual report of the executive officers will be submitted and will follow the plans provided for by the constitution and by-laws of the national association.

It is very gratifying to note that we are being assisted in our efforts to obtain an amendment to the National Bankruptcy Law by the wholesale grocers of the United States. With the influence at work it should not be a difficult proposition to bring about the desired amendment, but it will need effort on the part of every retailer to bring to the mind of his Congressman the fact that such an amendment is anticipated and is an absolute necessity.

A letter is being sent out to the wholesale grocers of all the Southern States asking the co-operation of the jobbers in securing this amendment and calling their attention to the Parcels Post Bill, which is as follows:—

To the Southern Wholesale Grocers.

Gentlemen:—In view of the importance of the interests involved, I beg to call your attention to legislation now pending in Washington, in which you and the retail grocers are vitally interested.

First. I suggest that each of you immediately communicate with your respective Congressmen and Senators, asking their approval of Senate Bill 1,570, which contains the $500 amendment clause for the Bankruptcy Act. This bill, if passed, would prevent anyone from taking advantage of the act, unless his debts amounted to over $500. The Bankruptcy Act has accomplished much good, but should now be either entirely repealed, or amended, as indicated in the Senate bill above mentioned.

Second. That you also communicate with your Congressmen and Senators in reference to the rural parcels post legislation. This legislation claims to be in the interest of the country retail dealers. The curious anomaly, however, is presented in that these country retail dealers do not appear to have asked for, nor wish such legislation. On the contrary, view it with suspicion if not with actual alarm, as the entering wedge of a system and of legislation which will, when ultimately carried out, practically wipe them out of business.

If the Government wishes to experiment with post legislation, by all means ask your Congressmen to secure the adoption of a one-cent rate by the Government, on first-class mail matter. This would be a vastly more beneficial experiment by the Government than any hybrid kind of parcels post legislation as now seems to have been patched up and suggested for enactment.

Third. House Bill 13,477, relating to post-offices and post-roads, seems to contain a very large colored gentleman in a very small woodpile. The object of this bill is to obtain a directory of the farming community of the country through the medium of the United States Post-offices. As there does not seem to have been any demand or need on the part of the Government or of its officials for such a list, it seems strongly surmised that the aforesaid colored gentleman was placed inside the woodpile, by a large catalogue houses of the country, who have never heretofore been able to obtain a list of the recipients of mails by rural routes, and by this method hope to get it.

The American Grocer—

Is He a Crook?

This advertisement published and sent broadcast to the customers of retail grocers through the country implies that the American grocers have tried to sell this girl some other breakfast food than the "Original Boasted" Corn Flakes, and that she is indignant over it and that she is leaving his store.

In Volume 25 of the Encyclopedia of Law and Procedure, page 337, is found this language: "Every wilful and unauthorized imputation spoken, written or printed, which imputes to a merchant, manufacturer or other business man, conduct which is injurious to his character and standing as a merchant, manufacturer or business man, is libelous or slanderous as the case may be."

This recent advertisement in retail grocers' trade journals of the United States seems to tell the American retail grocers right to their faces that they are substituters.

Here is the advertisement

You, Mr. Retail Grocer, may have missed it. How do you like it?

A recent letter addressed to the trade has this remarkable sentence: "But any concern which puts out an imitation toasted corn flake is just as much a counterfeiter as a man who makes a counterfeit dollar—and should be shunned by honest men." Of course, this only means the manufacturers, but how about the adv.?

Will the retail grocers of the United States endorse such methods of merchandizing?

Would it not seem queer if a manufacturer could find nothing else to recommend his food than the CLAIM "original"?

What would you, Mr. Grocer, think of an advertisement to sell food which might read like this? "I am the original—the rest are imitators. Don't let your grocer fool you. Don't let him sell you imitations. The grocer who sells you anything but 'original' and only 'Boasted Corn Flakes' deserves to lose his trade." Would it send customers to your store?

What would you think of a manufacturer who would brand all other manufacturers of similar products as counterfeiters, imitators, etc., and would make the statement that such manufacturers were unfit to do business with you and should be shunned by you and all other honest men?

Would your past experience of long years of satisfactory business relations with these manufacturers bear out this statement?

Have these manufacturers ever been anything but fair with you? Haven't they always conceded to you your right as an American business man to sell to your customers goods that you knew were right and were willing to recommend?

Has it ever been your experienee that these manufacturers have ever tried to coerce you into selling their goods by questionable advertising to your retail customers, in magazines and other mediums?

Toasted corn flakes were made and sold quite extensively in the United States before the "Original Boasted Corn Flakes" were ever heard of, but were so crude that they could not withstand competition.

What Egg-O-See Cereal Company Believes

We have been selling the American Grocer breakfast foods for years, and we have found him to be a hard-working, careful, conscientious, law-abiding citizen. We have sold him foods long before "Original Boasted" Corn Flakes were ever heard of, and we have found this same American Grocer a clean, square, honorable man to do business with.

We believe the American Grocer will sell his customer the best the market affords, as he always has, and we do not believe he deserves to be held up to public view in flaming advertisements as an undesirable citizen.

We Are Not Afraid of Substitution

We have dealt with the American Grocers for many years, and have never had reason to complain of their substituting other goods when their customers called for ours, and we don't believe any other manufacturer, making honest goods of quality, has had any different experience.

We believe the way to help the American Grocer to sell our goods is to send people to him—not drive them away—and we have spent millions of dollars doing this in past years.

We do not believe it is fair to the grocer to try to move goods by making people believe that there is a collusion between the American Grocer and other breakfast-food manufacturers.

"Claims" vs. "Truth"

"Boasted Corn Flakes" claims to be the "ORIGINAL."

"E=C" is the IMPROVED.

"E=C" spent thousands upon thousands of dollars in making the IMPROVED "E=C CORN flaked and toasted" the most delicious, most wholesome food in the world, and is spending thousands of dollars to SEND the people to the American Grocers to buy them.

"Boasted Corn Flakes" is spending thousands of dollars on an advertisement published and sent broadcast to the customers of retail grocers throughout the country which implies that the American grocers have tried to sell a girl some other breakfast food than the "Original Boasted" Corn Flakes, and that she is indignant over it, and that she is leaving his store.

"E=C" has never had any trouble in this line. "E=C" has found the American Grocer always ready and willing to sell the best. We have no reason to complain of his treatment of us. "E=C" believes the American Grocer can run his own business without our interference, and we are going to help him as we have in the past, because he helps us as long as we continue to give him the right food at the right price.

"E=C" works with the grocer to make him a good profit on their food.

We believe the American Grocer will continue to do business with the American people, and, as they have in the past, sell more Egg-O-See Company's food products than of all others.

The Extra Profit On Mother's Oats

Here's another reason why Mother's Oats have topnotched the sale of all rolled oats brands sold in the United States.

Above the very good profit which the grocer makes on the straight sale, come the Coupon Profits: we pay the grocer one cent each in cash for all Mother's coupons he redeems from his trade. He redeems them at only three-fourths of a cent in merchandise, or one-half a cent in cash. Thus he makes a tidy little profit on the Coupons themselves. Naturally the more he sells the more he'll make.

No other rolled oats proposition compares with it.

You Are the One That Gets Hurt

When you sell your customers a low-priced coffee. You are taking chances unless it's ARIOSA, because it is very difficult to get a good quality of coffee at a low price and yet have the flavor always the same.

You can't afford to take chances. We buy in larger quantities than any five concerns in the country, and we can afford to give quality and make a price that nobody can duplicate.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

PRUNES.

We bought a little lot of Santa Clara 60-70s prunes the other day that you may sell in 25-pound boxes at 7 cents a pound. It's the fanciest fruit we have seen this year. There isn't much in them at this figure, but the price will be appreciated, and the quality will surely create a later demand.

FRESH SHAD.

Unless all signs fail we're going to have a banner season on shad. The coming week we're going to start in buying big. We'll have a shad window Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. A shad ad. Wednesday and Thursday, and everybody must get into the spirit of selling. You don't have to touch them. The fish men will take care of the stock. You write the orders. Don't let the ad. man and the buyer assume all the enthusiasm. This shad and the prices we'll name will bring business. They'll be beauties. Hand in a report of the number you sell daily. Prices Monday afternoon.

SALE OF PILLSBURY FLOUR.

We'll open a car of Pillsbury flour Monday morning and sell it up until Thursday evening at the following prices: 1-16, 40 cents; ⅛, 80 cents; ¼, $1.60; ½-barrel sack, $3.18; barrel, $6.35.

The ad. will appear in Sunday's "Union." These prices are out of all proportion to the market. No telephone orders accepted. None sold knowingly to dealers, and the 1-16 and ⅛ limited to three sacks to a customer. Regular price for the ⅛ at other stores is 95 cents. Here's a chance to swell your sales these few days.

JEALOUSY.

The habit of cultivating a jealous spirit will dwarf your ambition and deaden your activity. If the other fellow gets ahead of you on sales he's a better salesman than you. There's no other explanation to it. Instead of being jealous and laying back get after him. Watch his methods. Listen to his arguments. Fill up with his energy. Admire him as a winner, then go to work and fight him with his own weapons. That's the way to kill this old spirit-damping bugbear called jealousy. Start in Monday morning.

COMMISSION FOR THE WEEK.

Two cents a pound on 37-cent tea.

Five cents a pound on 50-cent tea and upwards.

One cent on all coffees from 25 cents a pound up.

One cent on each six cakes O-O soap, 25 cents.

Half cent on ½-pound tin O-O baking powder.

One cent on 1-pound tin of O-O baking powder.

One cent on each 3-pound package of O-O buckwheat.

One cent on each 3-pound box of O-O starch.

SELLING RICE.

Show up a sample of that best rice on blue paper. Refer to the size of the head. Turn it over with your hand as though you were handling something precious. There's a whole lot in the precision in which some things are handled. We referred to this in the case of stroking a broom the other week. Tell about this rice being a soft cooker, and about its freeness from dirt, and also about its being raised in South Carolina. Any school boy can say, "Here's a fine rice, ma'am." Qualify things. Talk selling talk.

Grocers that Covet Saloons.

A remark made to me by a grocer over in New Jersey during the week works me up to say just a word more about this liquor business and the bearing it has on the grocery business.

This grocer was kicking like a mule about how hard he had to work for the little money he made.

"It's a case of working like a nigger all day and sometimes half the night!" he said, "and what do you make? Half a cent on this and a quarter of a cent on that. I tell you if I had a chance I'd get out of it to-morrow!"

"What business is any better?" I asked him.

"The business that's making more money in this town than any other," he said, "is the saloon business. There are three of 'em and they're just makin' it hand over fist. I wish I could get in it. If I thought I could get it I'd apply for a license to-morrow!"

If I had a dollar for every time this remark has been made to me by a grocer you wouldn't see your uncle work another tap.

It's a funny thing, why such a lot of grocers seem to hanker after the saloon business. You don't find that feeling in any other line. I've been amongst 'em—you don't hear a dry goods man or a jeweler, or a clothing man say he'd like to open a saloon. These others may kick about their business and want to get out, but I've never heard one of 'em say he'd like to get into the saloon business.

The grocery business is to sell food and the saloon business is to sell drink. Maybe the grocer feels the way he does because food and drink go together.

A lot of grocers I know actually have sold their stores and gotten a license. Some of 'em liked it when they got in—at least I suppose they did, for they're in it yet.

But a lot of others got sick as dogs before they'd been in a month. I remember one man—by gad, but he was sore at himself! I think I told you something about him once.

I don't know whether he got back in the grocery business or not. He intended to all right the last time I saw him. I haven't seen him for over a year.

What he didn't like was the class of people he had to mix with.

"Filthy bums!" he said to me. "You can't turn 'em down if you expect to do business. They come in here and hang around and call me Bill—if I had any idea it would be like this you couldn't have paid me to take the license!"

Another thing he used to rave over was having to cough up every time the politicians needed money. They work all the saloonkeepers to beat the band.

"What do you stand it for?" I asked him.

"Stand it! I've got to stand it!" he said. "If I don't they'll put up some game on me and I won't get the license again!"

I don't think I could stand that a little bit.

A couple of friends of mine—grocers—got badly soaked through their license aspirations. One of 'em used to do $500 a week—had a crack-a-jack business. He was an awful fool to get tired of it, but he did. So he applied for a license. He couldn't keep it secret, and the people of his neighborhood got on. They didn't want a saloon where a grocery store had been, and maybe they didn't soak him! What he ought to have done was to lay down and not apply for it, after he found what his people thought, but he went right ahead, and didn't get the license after all.

Then he thought he'd go back to groceries again, but not on your life! His business dropped off to $225 a week and to save his soul he couldn't get it above $250! He sold out last week—business $250 a week.

The other fellow was a German. He had a business uptown in Philadelphia that kept six members of his family busy all the time.

He didn't want a license, but he had a good corner and twice in succession he took a couple of hundred dollars to let somebody else apply for a license there. He said that if they got the license he could move to another place in the neighborhood and the $200 would have paid him.

Both times the applicant was turned down. Of course it got out, and the people, who didn't want a saloon there, got sore. When he sold out, as he finally had to do, he was keeping only two people busy in the store—the rest of the business had gone.

So that the moral, dearly beloved brethren, is this:—

If you simply must sell a good grocery business to open a saloon, don't let your people know it unless you get the license.

But—

Before you decide to do it at all put this in your pipe and smoke it—that no saloonkeeper is sure of his business for more than a year, for the license runs only one year, while a good grocery business is yours forever and your son's after you.

And it's a pretty rotten business while it lasts!

THE STROLLER.

Says It Prevents Potatoes from Rotting.

A retail grocer who has tried the experiment claims that it is very easy to prevent potatoes from rotting by placing in different parts of the cellar in which they are kept a box containing a quantity of lump slack lime. He states that this lime absorbs the moisture which has such a detrimental effect upon potatoes, and in his case has resulted in keeping his stock in this commodity always in good condition.

THE MODEL CASH GROCERY STORE.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your inquiry of recent date, we enclose a few sample slices of sandwich dried beef, sliced in the highest style of the art, sliced on Johnson's patented "EVERSHARP." These slices, thin as paper, smooth as glass, soft, moist and delicious, were cut the full size of a six-pound knuckle. The whole knuckle was sliced to perfection in six minutes.

I also enclose, in separate wrapper, some very small, very thin slices cut from the meat that covers the knuckle bone. Please notice that the little nub end of gristle and skin remaining unsliced weighs less than a quarter ounce, every particle of edible meat sliced up in thin, bright, salable slices. Of course we never sell any one a quarter pound of these little slices; but every half or quarter pound we weigh up gets alike its equal share of little and broad slices.

Please note the saving in time—as much work done in six minutes as the best circular-knife machines can do in twenty minutes, and then the quality of our work—slices thinner, smoother and more perfect than any other machine can possibly produce. So moist, so soft, so juicy, so broad, so transparently thin they cause enthusiastic comment wherever introduced, resulting in a large increase of very profitable trade.

We sell our machines for forty-six dollars on small monthly instalments, and every machine can be depended on to more than earn its own cost. If you prefer to pay cash we allow you a liberal discount. Hoping to receive your order.

Respectfully yours,

A. W. JOHNSON.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Rennet.

A preparation from the stomach or maw of calves, pigs, lambs and other such animals.

It is obtained by macerating and cleansing in water a piece of the fourth or last digesting stomach of the animal. This is then freed from the outer skin, fat and useless membranes. It is next washed and preserved in either brine or dry salt, and finally dried till it somewhat resembles parchment in appearance.

This substance has long been used in various forms in the manufacture of cheese, where its gastric juice serves to curdle the milk—that is, separates the curd or caseine of milk from the whey or serum.

That made from the calf stomach is preferred and the most used. Next to this is rennet from the stomach of pigs (which is also used in making pepsin). It is said to be stronger than calf's rennet. That of the lamb is the weakest and is seldom used. But in buying the foreign rennet veils we know very little of what has been used, and they are often a mixture of calves' and pigs' stomachs, blown up and dried.

Rock Salt.

Found in fossil beds, and in large masses, more or less connected with brine springs. Rock salt is evidently a true sedimentary rock, owing its origin to the slow evaporation, in the course of enormous lapses of time, of salt lakes or inland seas once fed from the waters of the ocean.

Rock salt beds occur in various parts of England, Spain, France, Italy and Poland and most countries of the world, but it is remarkable that none have yet been discovered in America.

Roquefort Cheese.

This celebrated cheese is considered one of the richest and best kinds produced in France. It is made in the Commune of Roquefort, a mountain slope in Aveyron, arrondissement of St. Affrique, in the South of France, from the milk of ewes of the Larzac breed, generally about 250,000 in number, their food consisting mostly of herbs found in the stony pasturage, occupying some sixty square leagues on the rugged mountains of that district. The cheese somewhat resembles "Stilton," but is scarcely so rich and possesses a peculiar pungency of flavor. Ordinary size, 8 inches high by 4 inches in diameter, and weighing about 6 pounds each.

Average composition (fresh): Water, 11.84; caseine and albumen 85.43; fat, 1.8; lactic acid, 0.88; ash, 11.84.

Thus Roquefort contains less fat and much more caseine than English, or Neufchatel cheese. The blue marbling of the interior veins are produced by dusting between layers of the curd a small quantity of bluish-green powder, made of mouldy rye-and-wheat bread. This powder acts as a ferment, and thus hastens the production of these marks—so stringently exacted by connoisseurs. When sufficiently dried and compacted, the cheeses are stored in an immense cave—a perfect cheese citadel—in the limestone rock at Roquefort, to be cured, and to acquire a fine flavor.

The temperature of these honey-combed caves, some of them five stories high, averages 30 to 40 degrees Fahr., and in these cold caverns employment is found for 300 or 400 women in salting, scraping and turning these celebrated cheeses. About

TALK AND TRUTH

When a man instals an American Slicing Machine, it is practically always after he has investigated it thoroughly.

Our announcements in the various trade papers seldom do more than interest him sufficiently to start him investigating, unless he has seen the machine at work. That's about all they're meant to do.

That means, though, that we must weigh very carefully every statement we make in our advertising. If we made any claim for the machine that the closest investigation would not justify, our prospective customer would not instal the machine—and he'd be right.

Therefore, when we tell you that the AMERICAN SLICING MACHINE will bring you many new customers on sliced meats, will increase your profit on each sale, and will save you time and labor, we are reciting actual facts.

These statements are not merely advertising talk, but are backed by real, money-in-the-cash-drawer evidence from thousands of merchants who have used the machine for years.

That evidence ought to interest you.

It's free for the asking.

6 pounds of salt is used for fifty cheeses, and it is applied by sprinkling a handful of salt on the top and bottom of each.

The moulds which form on the cheese are scraped off from time to time, passing successively in color, in the course of about forty days, from white, through blue, to a reddish tint, when the cheese is considered mature and ready for use.

In August and September new Roquefort cheese is to be found in restaurants, but it is not in its highest perfection till November.

MAGAZINE NOTES.

Of the many notable features in the April magazines, none is likely to excite keener interest or do more genuine good than the article entitled "The Worrier" in "Lippincott's." This is a paper supplemental to a series of five by the same author, George Lincoln Walton, a famous neurologist. Dr. Walton divides his theme into three parts—"At Home," "At the Table," and "On His Travels," and many there are who will be surprised to find that their own peculiarities and idiosyncrasies are similar to those of the chronic worrier, who makes life a burden to himself and others. The worrying habit is such an easy one to acquire and so hard to get rid of that it is well to avoid getting started in that direction. If you have started, however, Dr. Walton's article will surely help you to get rid of this unpleasant, unhealthy, and unnecessary habit.

This Suit Will Test Exclusive Agency Contracts

Wilmington, N. C., Jobber Accused of Refusing to Accept Ordered Goods Because of a Tardily Remembered Exclusive Rebate Contract, is Sued by the Seller. Legality of Rebate Arrangement at Issue.

A lawsuit of great interest to the grocery trade everywhere, especially to the wholesale end of it, has just been begun in Wilmington, N. C. The plaintiff is Fred. Fear & Co., manufacturers' agents of New York City, and the defendants are J. C. Stevenson Co., of Wilmington. The sum the plaintiff seeks to recover is $307.25.

The case is interesting and important because it is destined to test the validity of the exclusive agency contracts which several manufacturers allied with the grocery business are now using. These contracts have been discussed in the "Grocery World" before—they all comprehend the granting of an extra rebate to the buyer who buys goods of no other company.

The plaintiff in the above action says the above amount is due on an invoice of goods shipped from New York to Wilmington. The defendants, though they had ordered them, refused to accept them when they arrived. The plaintiff says the reason why they were refused was that the defendants remembered they had a contract with another manufacturer which bound them, on pain of losing a rebate, to buy no outside goods. This, the plaintiff alleges, is in violation of a North Carolina law, and therefore does not constitute a good excuse for turning the goods down.

The case will therefore decide first whether the Stevenson concern had an exclusive agency contract with another manufacturer, and if so, whether it constituted a valid reason for violating another contract.

Sugar Trust Makes Public Statement.

The American Sugar Refining Co., through its secretary, C. R. Heike, gave out during the week the first annual report ever issued by the corporation. It shows net earnings of $8,749,291 and a surplus after dividends of $2,449,361. The total surplus as a contingent reserve for business is placed at $25,576,936. The showing for the twelve months is regarded as favorable, especially in view of the business depression that marked the closing months of the year. The balance sheet shows these items under the head assets: Cash, $5,016,986; loans, $17,666,550; accounts and bills receivable, $5,934,481; bonds and stocks held for use as reserve, $6,933,869; raw sugar, including sugar to arrive, refined sugar and syrup and stock in process of manufacture, $17,532,225, and investments in beet sugar and other corporations at cost in cash or less, $22,907,051. On the other hand, these items figure under the head of liabilities: Accounts and bills payable, Benzoate All Right for a Year at Least.

Secretary of Agriculture Tells Secretary of Food Manufacturers' Association that Board of Experts Cannot Reach Benzoate Decision for Indefinite Time. Says Go Ahead and Use It.

Correspondence which has transpired between E. C. Johnson, secretary of the National Food Manufacturers' Association, and Secretary of Agriculture Wilson during the week seems to fix still more securely the legal position of benzoate of soda as a food preservative.

The correspondence is as follows:—

March 18, 1908.

Hon. James Wilson, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:—As you probably will remember, the members of our association are vitally interested in the use of benzoate of soda and they would greatly appreciate a statement from you of the same nature as the one recently quoted regarding the use of sulphur. We know about the decision allowing benzoate until the newly appointed Referee Board shall render a final verdict of its harmlessness or harmfulness, but a great many of the members feel that this leaves the matter in an indefinite position as far as this year's business is concerned. The catsup manufacturers, for example, must place their contracts for acreage on tomatoes at once. As things now stand, they hesitate about going ahead for fear they may be interrupted in the middle of the season. A West Virginia firm writes me: "Taking it all in all, we think the present situation about the worst that has been met with in all this benzoate of soda matter. The decision, which leaves the matter entirely open so far as the season of 1908 is concerned, simply reads that pending the decision of the special board, benzoate will be allowed, the intent being to protect us from day to day only, and as we take it, should the board render an adverse decision at any time through the summer or fall months, the matter would then be open for the Secretary to immediately stop the use of benzoate; therefore, we do not see that there would be any protection for goods containing benzoate that had been disposed of by the manufacturer in the meantime, but which remained on the retailers' shelves, where they might be picked up by the inspector. We can see no valid reason why the Department should not issue a similar ruling to that of last year, allowing us to use benzoate of soda up to January 1, 1909, for as it is, we must simply conjecture to probable time the special commission will use in reaching their decision. Unless you have something more definite than anything we have been able to get hold of, we will be compelled to proceed on a very indefinite basis."

This is a sample of several letters I have recently received, asking for a statement from you allowing benzoate of soda definitely for the season of 1908. If you can see your way clear to issue such a statement, will you kindly advise me?

When do you think the Referee Board will commence to hold hearings on the benzoate matter?

Very truly yours,
E. C. JOHNSON, Secretary.

The Secretary's answer was as follows:—

March 21, 1908.

Mr. E. C. Johnson, Secretary Food Manufacturers' Association, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:—I have read with care your letter of March 18, in reference to benzoate of soda. Your points are well taken.

I beg to advise you that, in my opinion, it will be impossible for the Referee Board of consulting scientific experts to arrive at a determination of the question of the wholesomeness or unwholesomeness of benzoate of soda in foods for a number of months, and perhaps for a longer time than that. In any event you may rest assured that no decision adverse to the use of benzoate of soda will be promulgated so as to affect this year's business.

The business for the season of 1908 should be done under the terms of Food Inspection Decision 89, and if the terms of that decision are complied with, there will be no Governmental interference with the business of 1908. Very truly yours,
JAMES WILSON, Secretary.

Sunday Selling Illegal in Ohio.

The sale of groceries on Sunday is illegal in Ohio. Judge W. A. Babcock, in the Cuyahoga County Court of Common Pleas, so decided last week. The decision was rendered in a case which was bitterly contested from start to finish. Esau Holmes, proprietor of a grocery store on Bridge avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, was arrested early in the year and tried before Police Justice William Brown, of East Cleveland township, on a charge of keeping open a place for the sale of goods upon Sunday. Several technical objections were raised by the attorney for the defense in the course of the trial, but the main contention of the defense was that the sale of groceries upon Sunday is a work of necessity and therefore within the exceptions of the statute which provides that works of charity and necessity are not forbidden. Justice Brown found the defendant guilty and imposed upon him a fine of $25 and costs of prosecution. Exceptions were taken by the defense and the entire proceeding was taken into the Court of Common Pleas upon error. After several weeks' delay to enable the court to examine the authorities submitted the higher court upheld the conviction.

Window Dressing for Grocers

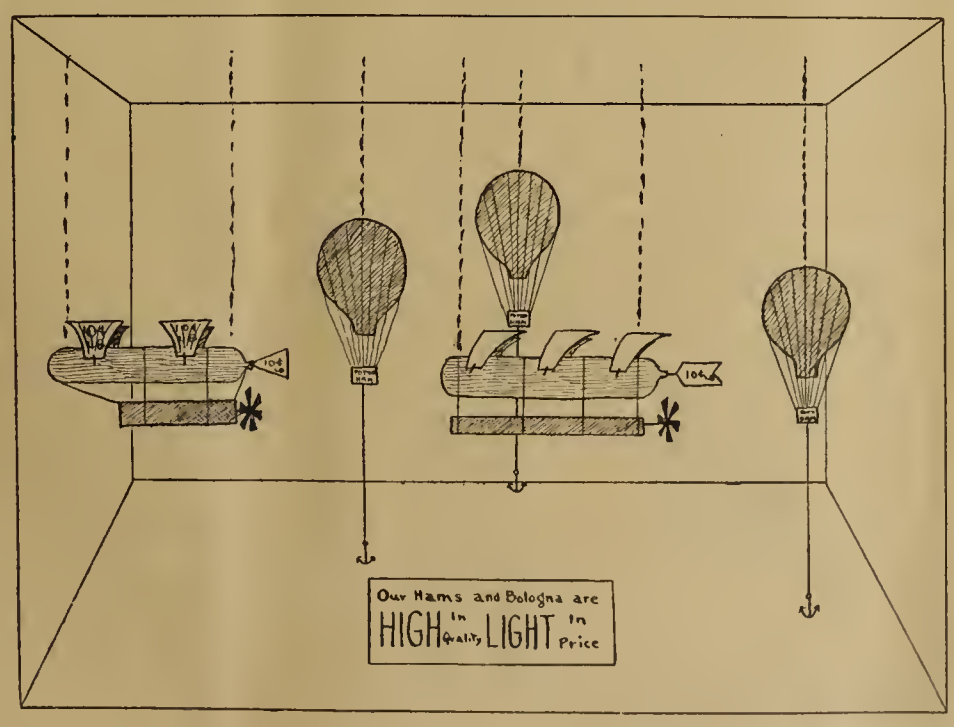
In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

Display of "Handy Things."

The sign in this window reads, 'Handy things to have on your pantry shelves when unexpected callers drop in at meal time."

Display foods that are ready to eat, such as lunch tongue, potted chicken, potted ham, dried beef, roast beef, soups, oysters, sardines, salmon, shrimp, olives, pickles, peanut butter, cocoa paste, condensed milk, crackers, shredded wheat, canned fruits, etc.

It is not necessary to use new lumber for shelves. Box lumber will do, then cover the back part with wrapping paper and cover the shelves with crepe tissue paper.



If you have a good floor leave it bare, if not, cover with oilcloth.

Balloons and Air-Ships.

This is a display of hams and bologna. You will need several feet of stovepipe wire to suspend the hams which form the balloons and bologna which forms the gas bag of the air ships. This is a fine black wire and is hardly noticeable from the street.

The bologna is suspended by two wires, one at either end. The wings, rudder and propeller are cut out of cardboard. To fasten them split one end of a skewer, insert the card, and stick the string and insert a piece of wire wrap around ham tightly and twist at the large end; you can now hang it up by the large end.

The cars are small cans of potted ham. These can be opened, contents removed and holes made around top edge for strings, or, if you do not care to open them, you can wrap twine around the cans several times and tie. The strings can then be run over the balloon and the ends tied under the string around the can. All strips going over the balloon cross at the center of the top and can be given a twist about the wire to hold them in place.

Place a sign in the window reading: "Our Hams and Bologna are High in Quality, Light in price."

You can greatly elaborate on this window by covering the floor with green paper and scattering about a few tiny houses made of cardboard. Roads can be marked out with sand and so on. This is not necessary, but of course adds to the appearance.

Colored Oleo Legal in New York State.

The Justices of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York State, in an opinion just handed down in the case of the State of New York vs. Archibald McAuley, declare that it is perfectly legal to sell uncolored oleomargarine in New York State, despite the provisions of the laws on which the defendant was arrested and the claim of certain officials that as oleo is in itself an imitation of butter it cannot be sold in New York. The court, in substance, says that if the law was designed to prevent the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine on its own merits and not in imitation of butter, it is unconstitutional. The opinion was written by Judge Ingraham and the entire bench of Justices concur in it.

New York Merchants' Association Says Burnham Parcels Post Bill Will Help Country Merchants

Supports Pending Measure Because It Will Give Low Mail Rates Only to Local Merchants While Compelling Outside Mail Order Houses to Pay Higher Rate. Text of Statement Sent "Grocery World."

The Merchants' Association of New York, which usually takes a forward stand in matters affecting the mercantile world, has sent the "Grocery World" a statement advocating support of the parcels post bill recommended by Postmaster-General Meyer and now pending in Congress. The statement follows:—

To Merchants Throughout the United States:—

The Merchants' Association of New York, which has hitherto been, and is now, opposed to a general parcels post in the belief that it would be very injurious to the country merchant, harmful in its effect upon the development of towns, and therefore against the interests of the whole people, now recommends to the support of the merchants of the country the local parcels post measure endorsed by Postmaster-General Meyer, called the Burnham Senate Bill 5,122 "To provide a rural delivery parcels post for merchandise and other articles mailed on rural delivery routes, and for other purposes."

This Bill provides:—

1. For the establishment of a special parcels post system on rural delivery routes for packages originating on a rural route or at the distributing post-office for delivery by rural carriers to patrons thereof.

2. For a charge of 5 cents for the first pound, and 2 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof, up to 11 pounds; for 2 ounces or less, 1 cent; over 2 ounces and up to 4 ounces, 2 cents; over 4 ounces and up to 8 ounces, 3 cents; over 8 ounces and up to 12 ounces, 4 cents; over 12 ounces and up to 1 pound, 5 cents.

Under this system a local mail parcels service would be carried on over each rural delivery route between all points thereon and the local post-office serving such route. This service would be strictly local and the rates would apply only to parcels originating within the local rural delivery district and to their transmission therein. Parcels originating at other points would not be entitled to the benefit of the local rates, but pay the present higher merchandise rate. A local package weighing 11 pounds would therefore be delivered along the local rural delivery route for 25 cents, while packages coming from a distance would be restricted to 4 pounds weight and subject to a charge of 1 cent an ounce.

There are now 38,266 rural delivery routes in the United States. Over each of these a mail wagon daily passes. The carriers are prohibited by law from carrying anything but mail matter of the various classes prescribed by law. The weight of packages is limited to 4 pounds, upon which the rate is 1 cent an ounce, equal to 64 cents for a 4-pound package. The low limit of weight and the heavy charge imposed in large measure prevent the mailing of local packages; and as the carriers cannot lawfully deliver anything but mail matter, the people along the 38,266 rural delivery routes are prevented from having the benefits of a local package delivery which they might readily enjoy, by means of the mail wagons which daily pass their doors with only a very small part of their capacity utilized. It is reported to us, however, that residents along such routes are now frequently served by the carriers in violation of law, but only to a limited degree, and at a much higher charge than this Bill provides.

In the opinion of The Merchants' Association of New York, the provisions of this Bill will promote the trade of country merchants, by enabling them to make daily deliveries to their local customers at small cost, and will also prove a great convenience to farmers and others living in the country by making it unnecessary for them to travel to adjacent towns to obtain small supplies and deliver small parcels.

All merchants are therefore respectfully requested to write to their Senators and Congressmen and ask them to support the Burnham Senate Bill 5,122 for a rural delivery parcels post for merchandise, etc. mailed on rural delivery routes.

The Plan to Increase Use of Rio and Santos Coffee.

Claim that Santos Coffee is Sold as Other Grades and Thus Robbed of Its Credit. Will Try and Educate Consumers into Buying Brazilian Coffee for Itself Alone.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
March 26, 1908.

Much interest is being expressed in Government circles over the plan of one of the Brazilian States to increase the consumption of Rio and Santos coffee in America and other countries. It seems that the President of the State of Sao Paulo has actually signed the decree, which will go into effect at once.

The provisions of the decree are as follows:—

The board created by the act is attached to the Department of Agriculture, Commerce and Public Works, and consists of four members, who are to be appointed by the President of the State. One of the members shall be chosen as President, and another as Secretary of the board, these two officers having their seat permanently at the State capital, while the two remaining members are to have charge of the propaganda abroad. The duty of the board shall be to study the conditions of consuming markets, to propose plans for the stimulation of consumption, and to direct and superintend such operations as may be undertaken for the extension of the coffee trade abroad.

The board is expected to conduct an educational campaign, pointing out to consumers the reasons why substitutes and imitations should be avoided, and organizing traveling exhibitions which shall visit the principal markets, for the purpose of familiarizing the public with Brazilian products and particularly with her agricultural conditions.

Grants will be made to companies and to individuals, who shall contract to undertake to extend the use of coffee by advertising, exhibitions, and conferences under the direction of the board. They shall promote the installation of model roasting establishments in various large cities of the world, to be chosen in conjunction with the board. Only coffee of Sao Paulo origin shall be used in the propaganda.

The Government of Sao Paulo claims that a large quantity of fine Santos coffee is sold as Mocha and other high grade brands, which prevents the Brazilian coffee from getting the credit due it.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Upon the withdrawal of Seattle from the race to secure the National Retail Grocers' Convention for 1909, Portland, Ore., jumped into the fight. That city and the State of Oregon will bend every effort to land the convention for the Rose City next year.

We believe that the merchants of the East want to visit the thriving Northwest, the section of country that has shown greater development during the past ten years than any part of the world.

We believe that we have more natural attractions in the vicinity of Portland than almost any large city on the continent. In 1909 the Alaska Yukon Exposition will be in full force, and extremely low rates will obtain from Eastern points.

Seattle is but a few hours' ride from Portland, and tickets purchased for this city will read through Seattle, either coming or going, and also through California on either trip, at the same price.

While we are late in getting started, on account of having been pledged to Seattle, we believe that we can offer more inducements to the delegates than any of our competitors. We understand that Denver is making a strong campaign, urging the natural beauty of that city as one of the arguments. We can offer more, because we will offer you an opportunity to come through Denver, as well as to come to Portland.

We sincerely trust that the Pennsylvania delegates will decide to come to Portland.

Yours truly,
CHAS. B. MERRICK,
Secretary Oregon Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association.

Sell Your Team and Get a Lindsley

Some of these days horses for delivery are going to be obsolete. They can't stand up for a minute with the right kind of a delivery automobile.

Take the Lindsley Car as an illustration. Costs less than a good team of horses, costs probably not over half as much to keep and will do several times as much hard work for the same money.

The Lindsley Car will carry 1500 pounds thirty miles on one gallon of gasoline!

Why, it would pay you big to sell your team and get a Lindsley. It's a pleasure car, too, if you want it to be.

It Doesn't Pay to Wait

You have a lot of customers who will buy Clicquot Club Ginger Ale now. All you need do is make a pyramid of a case in your store and it will go quickly, for almost everybody knows what it is. You can't display anything which will dress up your store better. Clicquot Club is the ginger ale that has hurt the sale of the imported article so badly—there is only one reason—it is better.

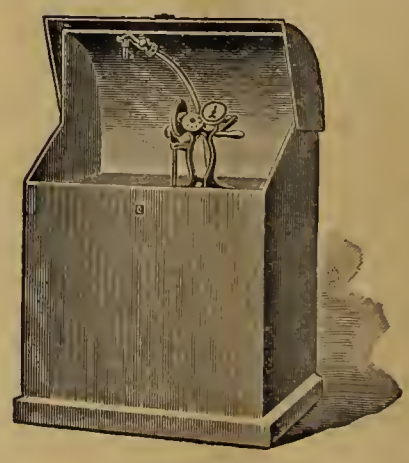
HALF Your Work is Talking

If half a grocer's work is talking up the things he sells can't you see the tremendous advantage of handling things that need no talking?

For instance, Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour. It is literally probable that not five of your customers but have heard of both brands and have seen our advertisements of them a dozen times.



Even if these two brands, though well advertised, were of indifferent quality, you could easily sell them under these conditions. But you could only sell them once, while Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour you can sell forever.

It Doesn't Have to Be a Dirty Job

You can sell headlight, lubricating oil, or gasoline, without inconvenience, dirt, or odor, by using our tanks. They have been so constructed that they overcome every objectionable feature of handling these goods.

Tell us which of these products you want to sell with no more trouble than you have with coffee, where you want to keep it, and we will show you the tank we have devised to fit your case and tell you what it will cost. We will send you our Catalogue B, if you are interested, which will tell you all about this subject.

WHERE the GLASS JAR COMES IN

The glass jar in which Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa—and that only—is packed offers the entering wedge to a sale, because it is unusual.

No woman ever saw cocoa packed in glass before; the sight is novel; she asks about it, and if you help a little, she buys.

Bought once, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa will always be bought again, for it has a flavor which has never been successfully imitated. Our exclusive making process removes the bad, develops the good, and the result is the smoothest, most delicious drinking cocoa on the market.

Croft & Allen Co.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.

It Made No Difference to Us

No gelatine sold in this country was less affected by the Federal Food Law than Chalmers'.

Our brands complied with the legal standard even before there was one. How could they help it? They were simply unsophisticated gelatine, made of pure unadulterated calves' stock and spring water. There was nothing to change about them, nothing to alter in any way.

We take a just pride in the fact that while the Federal Food Law caused some manufacturers to completely transform their business, it made no more difference to us than if it had never been passed.

Two styles—granulated and shredded.

Is the one spelled R-A-M-L-Y, the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. So good, other cigarettes are made to look like it, so they will sell on the Ramly's reputation.

If you want to give your customers an ideal smoke, sell them the Ramly. You won't have to tell them about it the second time—they'll ask for it.

and have apparently settled down to their continuous use. The convenience of the INDEX appeals to them.

100,000 MORE BOOKS SOLD IN 1907 THAN 1906

Write for free samples and then send in an order. They do not cost much and after you learn their merits you will be glad to use them through 1908 and as much longer as you are in business.

Tell This to Your Customers

Celluloid Starch is the only starch made that requires no cooking. No starch puts such a beautiful finish on fine laundry work. No starch pays grocers such a handsome profit, because a good part of our advertising appropriation is expended for Universal Coupons. These coupons are exchangeable for any article of merchandise that a grocer needs. Save them, buy what you want with them, and keep your cash in bank.

Vita's Chance Has Come

Vita Norwegian Sardines are the tastiest, most delicious sardines imported. They always have been, but they have never had the sale they ought to have, because French sardines got in first.

This year French sardines are almost out of the market, and the chance for Norwegian sardines has come. Give the Vita brand just a little push and you'll have a sale for it that will stay with you, even after the French sardine comes back.
